There was plenty of activity at the Gravesend track yesterday and some very satisfactory work was done by a number of popular horses that will soon appear in the big turf events of the early season. Undoubtedly the most interesting feature of the day was the splendid try-out given to Bill Daly's two best runners, Veronese and Warning, each going a mile in what at this time of the year must be called pretty quick time. Veronese had Dan O'Connor in the saddle, while Warning was intrusted to a boy who does not weigh more than 88 or 90 pounds.

Breaking in the front stretch, these two three-year-olds, with Priority trailing, stepped the first furlong of the regular mile in 0:12¼. The quarter was covered in 0:25¼, three furlongs in 0:38¾, the half in 0:52½, the five-eighths in 1:05, the three-quarters in 1:18¾, the seven-eighths in 1:33, and the mile in 1:47¼. Warning was the pacemaker. He held the others safe from the first jump to the finish.

Daly says he will start both Warning and Veronese a week from next Monday. Since Veronese must shoulder a burden of 105 pounds to Warning's 88, the Previous colt must be said to have a deal the best of the weights. The Henry of Navarre colt, however, will be the fresher of the two.

Stroller, another plater who will probably win at Benning, galloped four furlongs in 0:55 with the three-year-old Clark Griffith.

Something good was looked for when Roseben came out, but all that was asked of the gallant sprinter was a three-eighths spin in 0:37. That was pretty good, and Roseben finished swinging. He could have gone on for three-quarters without the least trouble. Arklinta did three-eighths in 0:39¾.

The entire McLaughlin string was out, but nothing fast was done. Ormondale, the pride of Tom Welsh's stable, and the Macdonough candidate for most of the big three-year-old races to be decided this season, was on the track at noon. Ormondale went against his stable companions, Merry Lark, Duenna, Inquisitor, and Bull's Eye and returned to his stable. Nothing which might in any way interfere with Ormondale's Realization aspirations will be attempted.

Dick Miller was satisfied to gallop Red Friar and Knight Errant, both of which are looking well, but he made Jennie McCabe, which is evidently intended for early racing, step three-eighths in 0:43.

Jack McGinnis's string got in from Los Angeles last night. The horses seem to have stood their arduous trip across the continent well.

DURLAND'S ANNUAL RIDE.

Hundred Children Participate in a Novel and Clever Exhibition.

The eighteenth annual ride at Durland's Academy last evening presented a spectacle of unusual interest to the hundreds of friends of the young riders who are pupils of the academy. The event was restricted to young folks ranging from 5 to 10 years of age, and the feats of horsemanship they performed were really astonishing.

The honors of the evening were fairly won by five young misses, who executed a number of special figures. They appeared riding astride, and if their elders could have outshone them in the brilliancy of their achievements within the limits of their physical strength they would be fine horsemen indeed. They were Miss Dorothy Parsons, Miss E. Schleip, Miss Ethel Saenger, Miss Vivian Cushman, and Miss Lillian Krauss.

There were a number of unique features interpolated in the programme. Frederick Wattach won commendation by his clever costumed impersonation of a Dutchman learning to ride, instructed by Alphonse Statler. A game of Jeu-de-Barre was played by Masters V. G. Byers, P. Burt, and P. Anness, in which the former won. Charles P. Trustum exhibited his high school horse Max, who appeared in the "five-year-old class," and made an enormous hit, while Miss Lillian Krauss exhibited her high school horse as well. Trick riding by James O'Brien and Frederick Wattach, tandem driving by the Misses Lillian Krauss, C. Krauss, E. Talbot, E. Lake, E. Schleip, and H. Rubens, and a galloping exercise by twelve youngsters followed, and a basket ball game on horseback closed the programme, neither team scoring. The line-up:

Durland, Jrs.	Position.	Wanderers.
H. Cannon	Forward	W. Schleip
E. Holmes	Forward	K. Wallace
G. Oppenheim	Centre	G. Wallace
V. Meyer	Guard	V. G. Byers
A. W. Kinny	Guard	J. Meyer

Timekeeper—George A. Mills. Referee—Casper Weyher.

Hoppe Wins and Loses at Billiards.

"Willie" Hoppe, the world's billiard champion, won one game yesterday and lost one in the exhibition matches he is giving at 18.1 balk line in his billiard rooms, 56 West Thirtieth Street. Both of Hoppe's opponents played 18.2 balk line. Hoppe was in fine form in the afternoon and rolled up 200 points in 9 innings against 42 for H. A. Coleman. Hoppe's average was 22 2-9 and his high run 64, while Coleman's best run was 12 and his average 4 6-9. In the evening Hoppe was badly off his game, giving the poorest exhibition he has shown for a long time. "Tom" Gallagher beat him handily by 400 points to 366. Gallagher's average, however, was but 9 4-44 and his high run 49. Hoppe averaged 8 12-43 and his best run was 46.

MATHEWSON NOT VERY ILL.

Expected to Resume Training Soon—Giants May Move to Little Rock.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 14.—Christopher Mathewson's condition continues to attract attention from natives here as well as from solicitous friends and a wife in the North. Telegrams asking about the great pitcher were received to-day by McGraw and Dr. Edward Ellett, who is attending the ball twirler. A diagnosis made public to-day and signed by the physician gives official information that nothing of a contagious nature exists. Dr. Ellett, who played baseball years ago at one of the big four colleges, states that Mathewson, in his opinion, has contracted a severe cold, which has settled in his head. The very worst he anticipates would be ear trouble, which, he says, should not keep "Matty" out of training many days.

Real Winter temperature here might have proved sufficient to prevent practice by the Giants to-day, but heavy rains which fell yesterday, continuing over night, converted Red Elm Park into a miniature lake. All out of door work was therefore abandoned and the champions spent another day at billiards, pool, bowling, and guessing at the winners in poolrooms, laying odds on the thoroughbreds running at Hot Springs and New Orleans.

The arrival of Secretary Frederick Ripley Martin Knowles from New York brought information to Manager McGraw that snow had fallen all along the route on his way here to within a few hundred miles of Memphis, and players took some consolation from their escape from this fate.

Should snow fall here, Manager McGraw may move to Little Rock for the balance of training, for it is figured that a snow-bound field at this time of the year will leave the diamond so wet that valuable days would be lost in the work of preliminary practice for the championship season.

MIKE DONLIN IS SUSPENDED.

Disciplined by McGraw, He Threatens to Jump to the Outlaws.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 14.—To-night "Mike" Donlin, the heavy-hitting outfielder of the New York Giants, moved from the hotel at which his team mates are stopping as a result of a sentence of indefinite suspension placed on him by order of Manager McGraw. He took up his residence at another hotel and declares that he will play in the so-called outlaw league in Pennsylvania this season.

McGraw gives out a statement in which he says he warned the entire team at a formal conference against unnecessary violations of training methods. He says this conference was called at a time when Donlin was thought to be the one in need of advice. To-day he was accused of again straying from the path of sobriety and the ban was placed on him to-night.

RAIN STOPS AMERICANS.

Greater New Yorks Not Able to Play Games with the Birminghams.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 14.—In spite of the fact that the weather man wore a frown throughout the day, large bunches of hungry baseball "fans" crowded to the park this afternoon, and when Jupiter Pluvius began shedding the dewdrops from his forehead there was general disappointment. The rain prevented the game that was scheduled, but Managers Griffith and Vaughan promised to furnish a red-hot article to-morrow. Clark and Wilhelm of the Birminghams will oppose Chesbro and Orth, and the game promises to be interesting. Keeler spent the afternoon in preparing a gait for him to hit this season. "I have been in the big leagues," said Willie, "thirteen years. The heaviest hitting was .432, the lightest .302. My average for the thirteen years, is .361. I do not know just what to hit this season."

Kleinow and Elberfeld supposed that Keeler would fall below the .300 mark, and caused the local "fans" to indulge in great laughter.

POGGENBURG FIRST AGAIN.

Ex-Champion, Wright, and Gardner Winners in National Billiard Tourney.

CHICAGO, March 14.—The first game in the National amateur billiard tournament to-day was won by Wright of San Francisco from Norris of New York by a score of 300 to 179. Wright made the high run of the tournament, and there is an excellent chance that it will continue the high run until the close of the competition. He scored 111 in the third inning, which eclipses by 33 points the best run of last year's tournament. The other notable runs made by Wright were 44, 35, 32, and 25. He held the lead from the opening of the game, and the result was never in doubt. Norris's best run was 31, and his other high runs were 20 and 19. Summary:

Wright—Total, 300; high run, 111; average, 18 14-22.

Norris—Total, 179; high run, 31; average, 8 11-21.

Edward W. Gardner of Passaic, N. J., kept up his record for steady, consistent playing in the second game, defeating Calvin Demarest, a young Chicago player, by a score of 300 to 235. Gardner's average was 11 14-26, an improvement of nearly five points over his game of yesterday, while Demarest's average of 9 1-26 fell more than two points below his first effort in a National tournament.

Demarest took the lead in the third inning with a run of 83, which was the highest of the game, making a number of difficult masse shots and giving a fine exhibition of nursing. In the eleventh inning he made a run of 24, in the fourteenth one of 58, and in the nineteenth collected 23. With the exception of these four runs his work was poor, and he was not able to get above 6 in any inning. Gardner's judgment was especially good on cushion shots and his steady, hard playing gave him the lead in the nineteenth inning, when he made a run of 35, most of which were open table shots. Summary:

Gardner—Total, 300; high run, 47; average, 11 14-26.

Demarest—Total, 235; high run, 83; average, 9 1-26.

The evening match between J. Ferdinand Poggenburg and C. F. Conklin was comparatively uninteresting until the contest was two-thirds finished. Then the Chicagoan began to creep up on his opponent. Poggenburg won through the long lead that he had obtained in the initial stages, as Conklin was playing with more judgment and greater courage at the end. The score was 300 to 290.

Poggenburg started out at a whirlwind pace, averaging close to 17 in his first eleven innings, despite three zeros. A run of 49 in the fifth inning that was stopped by a miscue on a masse, and another of 65 in the ninth, ended by a bad kiss on a single cushion shot, were the principal factors in this part of the contest. In the next twenty-five innings the New Yorker went into double figures only four times.

Conklin got within striking distance in the twenty-second inning with a run of 25. He followed this with 6 and 14, and in the twenty-ninth collected 24. In the thirty-fourth he counted 16, leaving the score 286 to 269. Two innings later he clicked off 20, but Poggenburg had meanwhile crept up to 296 and secured the other four on his next trial. Summary:

Poggenburg—Total, 300; high run, 65; average, 8 4-37.

Conklin—Total, 290; high run, 41; average, 8 2-36.

CRESCENT'S LACROSSE GAMES

Hard Schedule Arranged at Bay Ridge for the "New Moon" Team.

The Crescent Athletic Club lacrosse team will open its season on the Bay Ridge grounds on March 31 with a game against the Columbia University twelve. All the games with a single exception will be played at Bay Ridge. The exception is the match arranged for May 19 at Baltimore with the Mount Washington team, an organization comprised of former Johns Hopkins players, who will play a return engagement at Bay Ridge on June 9.

All of the members of last year's champion team of the Crescents will play again, probably under the leadership of "Billy" Dobby. There will be Wall, Liffiton, O'Flynn, Kennedy, Allen, O'Rourke, Shirreff, Drakeley, Raymond, Kiely, De Casanova, Moses, and Miller. Besides these there will be a notable addition to the ranks in the person of a new player from Canada, "Tiny" Gladney, a college mate of O'Flynn, now in New York. The schedule follows:

March 31—Columbia University. April 7—Stevens Institute; 14—College of the City of New York; 21—Swarthmore College; 28—University of Pennsylvania. May 5—New York Lacrosse Club; 12—Harvard University; 19—Mount Washington Club at Baltimore; 26—Toronto University; 30—Toronto University. June 2—Bradford Lacrosse Club; 9—Mount Washington Club; 16—Brantford Lacrosse Club; 23—Montreal Lacrosse Club.

Runner Accused of Being Professional.

Something of a rumpus was created last night at the St. Bartholomew Athletic Club games when W. A. Seward, St. Bartholomew Athletic Club, came under the eye of Michael J. Flynn of the Star Athletic Club and a member of the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union. Flynn some time ago had passed judgment upon Seward as being a professional, having evidence that he had run in races with professionals in unsanctioned games.

Upon investigation Flynn was amazed to learn that Seward had been reinstated without his knowledge. Flynn declared that swift judgment would again be meted out to the offending athlete and that he would not be allowed to again run as an amateur. Seward declared he could prove his innocence, but he lost heart and did not win in any of his events.

SPRINTER HAHN SPEEDY, BUT LOST AT THE TAPE

COHN FOURTH IN LONG RACE

Boys of Central Congregational Sunday School Won Relay Contest in Twelfth's Armory.

Two of the Olympic team of American athletes created much interest last night at the annual open games of the St. Bartholomew Athletic Club. Harvey Cohn, of the Irish-American Athletic Club, the long distance runner, and Archie Hahn, the World's Olympic sprinting champion, of the Milwaukee Athletic Club, were the pair that held the attention of the crowd that surrounded the track in the Twelfth Regiment Armory, Sixty-second Street and Columbus Avenue. Both accomplished good work, but were beaten by the out mark men in their respective handicap events.

Cohn competed in the one mile and a half run from the scratch mark. Frank Nebrick of the New York Athletic Club was put on the mark as an added starter to give Cohn fast pace. There was a good sized field of nineteen runners, several of whom had a full lap the better of Cohn and Nebrick. Among the number was Carr of the Xavier's, on the 50-yard line. Nebrick set the pace at once, and before the half mile had picked up the leaders. The time for this distance was 2:10 3-5.

The pace told heavily on Nebrick, and he retired at the three-quarters, leaving Cohn to follow Carr, who was going splendidly. Carr did not let up, and Cohn soon began to tire from the fast half mile that he had travelled. Lafforgue of St. Bartholomew's, Bailey of the Mohawk's, and Carr all appeared to be willing to run the Olympic man off his feet. They held to the lead despite his efforts to break through to the front, and a great race developed for the last half mile. The time for the mile was 4:41. On the last lap Cohn fell back to fourth, being fifteen yards behind Carr at the tape. The time for the race was 7:09 4-5.

Archie Hahn, the great Western sprinter, who is to be one of the Olympic team at Athens, Greece, tried his stride in the sixty-yard dash. Hahn was way behind his field on the scratch mark, but he closed up the gap and was beaten by only a flash at the tape by F. J. Kear, Xavier Athletic Association, with 15 feet handicap.

The boys of the Central Congregational Sunday School of Brooklyn created a sensation by winning the mile relay race over teams of the Irish-American Athletic Club, New York Athletic Club, Pastime Athletic Club, and others. The programme was rapidly run off, and the contests and management were unusually good. The Summary:

60-Yard Dash, Novice.—Won by W. Landgraf, St. Bartholomew Athletic Club; A. T. Meyer, unattached, second; F. W. Cordes, Twenty-third Street Branch Young Men's Christian Association, third. Time—0:07.

60-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by J. J. Danaher, Xavier Athletic Association, (6 feet;) V. Andrews, Pastime Athletic Club, (13 feet,) second; E. Witthalm, Young Men's League, (12 feet,) third. Time—0:06 2-5.

Half-Mile Run, Handicap.—Won by A. E. Ward, West Side Young Men's Christian Association, (50 yards;) E. A. Leslie, Xavier Athletic Association, (50 yards,) second; A. L. Hetzer, West Side Young Men's Christian Association, (50 yards,) third. Time—2:01 1-5.

Church Athletic League Relay Race for Novice Teams; Distance 1,320 Yards.—Won by St. Bartholomew Athletic Club, team George McDermott, J. McSweeney, J. C. Lawler, and F. Gallagher; Trinity Club, team H. Owens, H. Cochran, A. Borthwick, and P. Baker, second; Grace Athletic Club, team J. Miller, E. J. Cook, J. W. Stenck, and V. J. Pappazoni, third. Time—2:34 3-5.

600-Yard Run, Novice.—Won by E. B. Hutchings, Erasmus Hall High School; J. Devine, National A. C., second; F. I. Hynes, Hell Gate A. A., third. Time—1:24 2-5.

300-Yard Run, Handicap.—Won by F. A. Wernerken, St. Bartholomew A. C., (13 yards;) J. A. Cox, West Side Y. M. C. A., (17 yards,) second; O. D. Brown, Pratt Institute A. A., (18 yards,) third. Time—0:34 3-5.

One and One-half Mile Run, Handicap.—Won by F. Lafforgue, St. Bartholomew A. C., (100 yards;) W. Bailey, Mohawk A. C., (100 yards,) second; E. P. Carr, Xavier A. A., (50 yards,) third. Time—7:09 4-5.

One Mile Relay Race, Handicap.—Won by Central Congregational Sunday School of Brooklyn team: C. F. Roeckel, W. A. Gassin, R. A. Seymour, and G. W. Lyon, (50 yards;) College of the City of New York team: A. Pepis, L. Bernstein, G. G. Dixon, and M. Frank, (50 yards,) second; Xavier A. A. team: W. Groene, R. Koch, P. J. Murray, and F. J. Kear, (40 yards,) third. Time—3:57 2-5.

Running High Jump, Handicap.—Won by J. W. Price, New York A. C., (3 inches,) actual jump 5 feet 11 inches; A. S. Rubin, Grace A. C., (7 inches,) actual jump 5 feet 9 inches, second; F. J. Mulligan, unattached, (7 inches,) actual jump 5 feet 7 inches, third.

PRAISES FREE GAMES.

Mgr. Lavelle Commends Innovation of Public Schools' Athletic League.

Monsigneur Michael J. Lavelle, the rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, indorsed strongly the Public Schools Athletic League's plan for holding its games on March 17 in Madison Square Garden without entry fees. Father Lavelle said:

"The Public Schools Athletic League in doing away with entry fees at its coming games is doing a great thing for the morals of the boys. An entry fee, however small, is necessarily large to a boy. When he has to pay an entry fee for the right to compete for a prize he feels that unless he wins he will actually lose what to him is a large amount of money. In many cases, therefore, the boy really bets on his ability to win. It is not gambling, but inculcates a gambling spirit. Boys ought to compete for the glory of nobly won victory or the delight of honest defeat. This the league has assured by abolishing its entry fees. In the interest of morals and character, I hope that the citizens of New York will enable the league to continue this important innovation."

Court Tennis Championship at Tuxedo.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., March 14.—The fourth annual amateur court tennis championship tournament for the gold racquet, to be held under the management of the Tuxedo Tennis and Racquet Club, will begin on the courts at Tuxedo on March 24. Among the entries already received are Charles E. Sands of the Racquet and Tennis Club, New York, and winner of the gold racquet last year; Jay Gould of Georgian Court, Lakewood, N. J.; Pierre Lorillard, Jr., and J. Gordon Douglas of Tuxedo.

Much interest has been taken in the event and Jay Gould is looked upon as a coming amateur champion. In addition to having the name inscribed on the gold racquet, there will also be a second prize to the runner-up. Entries will close on March 21.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

The Chicago Automobile Club will soon be housed in one of the finest homes in the country. Plans have been prepared for a building to cost $150,000. A large plot of land has been leased for ninety-nine years on Plymouth Place, near Jackson Boulevard. Besides the usual club, committee, and lecture rooms, the plans have been made so as to include storage and garage facilities. John Farson, the new President of the American Automobile Association, is President of the Chicago Club, and Sidney S. Gorham is its Secretary.

The Directors of the New York Motor Club will hold a meeting within a few days to discuss plans for the forthcoming economy tour, which the club hopes to make a greater success than was the case with its first attempt last Fall. The club is also arranging to hold an early entertainment in its rooms, in the Hotel Cumberland.

Charles J. Glidden has completed an automobile tour of 599 miles in Burmah. He arrived at Mandalay Feb. 8, having traveled 4,014 miles on his present trip. The total number of miles that he has driven in different countries in the world is 30,014. From Burmah, Mr. Glidden will go to Ceylon, and then to Siam, where he has made arrangements to drive his car on the railway tracks, owing to the poor roads through the country.

Most of the automobile tourists who made a run to Boston from this city last Saturday, arriving late at night, but in time to witness the opening of the Boston automobile show, have returned to the city. They report the show as very complete in every department of the motor trade. Three cars made the run: A. W. Church, driving a fifty horse-power C. G. V.; J. E. Demar, a thirty-five horse-power English Daimler, and H. N. Harding, a forty-five horse-power English Daimler. The roads were in poor condition, and, owing to the lack of sufficient signboards, one of the cars went several miles out of its way.

Jefferson De Mont Thompson, the new Chairman of the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association, stated yesterday that he expected to announce his committee this week. The first meeting will probably be held next week. Mr. Thompson has secured acceptances from most of the men whom he has asked to act on the committee.

The Long Island Automobile Club will hold a motor talk and exhibition at its clubhouse, 360 Cumberland Street, Brooklyn, to-morrow night. The cars to be shown are the Haynes, the Locomobile, and the Buick, all four-cylinder machines. Chairman Pierson of the Entertainment Committee expects a large attendance.

BAY STATE GOLFERS LED.

Carry Off Honors in Second Annual Spring Tourney at Pinehurst.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 14.—Massachusetts golfers carried off the honors in the qualification round of the second annual Spring tournament to-day easily, L. D. Pierce of the Woodland Golf Club, Auburndale, winning the gold medal offered for the best score in qualification with a fast card of 77. Eighty-three players started, seventy-nine handing in cards, and four divisions of sixteen each qualified for the match play rounds for the President's, Secretary's, Treasurer's, and Captain's Cups. The scores follow:

Frank Black, Ridley, Penn., 104; W. A. Harbison, Brighton, 104; Dr. T. R. Williams, Punxsutawney, Penn., 106; D. B. Logan, Worcester, Mass., 107; D. A. Cruikshank, New York, 108.

FAST PLAY AT HAND TENNIS.

Bourne Won in Two Sets in Annual Tourney of New York Athletic Club.

Speedy two-set hand tennis matches were contested yesterday, with W. D. Bourne, scratch, and W. A. McCurdy, 7 aces, the winners in the continuation of the tournament in handicap singles at the New York Athletic Club. Both of the competitions were played on the main court in the gymnasium of the "Mercury Foot" organization's clubhouse, Sixth Avenue and Central Park South. The play of Bourne was of dazzling brilliancy, as he defeated F. Wasserman, handicapped at 12 aces, by the score of 25—22 and 25—17. McCurdy, one of the veteran players of the organization, defeated W. F. Harned, 13 aces, by the score of 25—15 and 25—17.

The clever handling of the ball by Bourne was easily the best seen in the tournament this season. His strokes were hard and severe, and he never let down on his pace. Wasserman had the advantage of nearly half a game on his opponent, but was not successful in his attempts to cut into Bourne's winning play. In the second set Bourne scored 12 aces on his second hand and held the leading position to the end.

LIKE NEW BASEBALL BODY.

Local Clubs Enrolling in Inter-City Association—Laws Not Drastic.

The Inter-City Baseball Association, although scarcely a month old, has all the indications of becoming as important a governing body over amateur and semi-professional clubs as are the National and American Leagues over the professional players of the country. The new organization, of which F. D. Baldwin is the leader, includes more than 100 clubs, and at every meeting the membership is increased. At the last weekly session at Lyric Hall, which, by the way, may become the permanent headquarters of the association, the Lenox Baseball Club, Criterion Baseball Club, West Paterson Field Club, Manchester Field Club, American Field Club, In-er-Seal Baseball Club, and Ortzon Field Club were admitted to membership.

The question of two or more clubs playing under similar names where they come from the same district was revived. The case of the Belmont Baseball Club and the Belmont Athletic Club was the only one that came before the meeting, and as the Belmont Athletic Club was not represented, the Secretary was instructed to take the matter up with that club by mail and have it submit what evidence it could which would tend to show that it was entitled to the name of Belmont. The Belmont Baseball Club submitted written evidence, through its manager, Mr. O'Connor, and the matter was referred to the Board of Directors for a decision. Both of these clubs hail from the Bronx.

RELIABILITY

Here is a word that fits THE LOZIER MOTOR CAR as though coined expressly to describe it.

Reliability may be defined as "being all there."

Ask any LOZIER owner.

His opinion is valuable—besides he was perhaps many times an owner (of Foreign and other cars) before he became a LOZIER owner—now he wouldn't be any other.

He knows Reliability. Ask him again.

LOZIER MOTOR CARS now delivering in 35 H.P. $4,500—40 H.P. $5,500, and orders booking for 60 H.P. $7,000 for May delivery.

OUR MONETARY PROBLEM.

The members of the committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce to consider the monetary question—Messrs. Vanderlip, Straus, Claflin, Clarke, and Conant—bring to their task a rare combination of experiences. The merchants are well qualified to speak for their class. The bankers are exceptionally equipped through their duties in bank, trust company, and Clearing House, with rich stores of Treasury routine, and deep knowledge of banking in other times and other countries, not to mention unusual capacity for expressing their knowledge. Perhaps hopes built so high upon personal qualities are doomed to disappointment in the nature of the task. Certainly it will be a marvel if amid the babel of counsel they can produce something so compelling in its logic that its conclusions can no more be evaded than the reasoning of the Bullion Committee's report. They can do no less and hope to compel action by Congress.

It will be interesting indeed to learn upon their authority whether our money market vagaries are due to deficiency of capital, currency, or credit. They cannot be due to lack of confidence, for perhaps never was confidence stronger, in proof of which may be cited the resistance exhibited to attacks before which less robust confidence would have succumbed long ago. Mr. Hepburn thinks we lack capital. Ordinarily lack of capital is deduced when fixed investments are not realizable, or do not earn their fixed charges. But speaking generally, never was it easier to realize investments, and never did investments so amply justify themselves in their returns. The situation seems rather exceptionally liquid at present, whatever it may become. Neither our loans nor our capitalizations are characterized by indigestion now. Mr. Hepburn also thinks that we have currency enough. He shows that it has grown by 35 per cent. in five years, which is vigorous growth indeed. And it may be added that we have more currency than any other nation with which we are fairly comparable. France has more, but France uses fewer substitutes for currency, such as checks, than we do. Certain silver-using countries have more, but they are not standards for us. With ample confidence, currency, and capital, it might be assumed that credit would be easy, and yet it is precisely the singular lack of ease which the committee is asked to consider. Can it be possible that we have currency enough, but not of the necessary quality? In other words, is there lack of money and a surplusage of currency? The following figures will perhaps throw some light upon the point:

[In millions of dollars, five figures omitted.]

	Bank clearings.	Loans.	Specie, legal tenders, and U. S. certificates of deposit.	Cash items, including banknotes.
1905	143.8	3,728.1	669.9	334.3
1904	112.6	3,469.1	614.6	287.4
1903	109.2	3,350.8	570.5	263.3
1902	118.0	3,128.6	561.7	242.0
1901	118.5	2,914.3	552.3	283.8
1900	86.2	2,4[illegible].5	476.5	220.4
Increase, %	66	50	40	45

It will be remarked that the largest percentage of growth is in clearings. They indicate the activity of trade, which necessitates large loans and measures the demand for credit. The capacity for granting credit depends upon the reserves, not the redeposited reserves, but the actual cash holdings. This item shows the smallest percentage of growth, and yet the currency volume is reflected in the larger growth of other cash items, such as exchanges for the Clearing House, notes of other banks, and so on. The associated facts are that the percentage of reserves to deposits—other than redeposited reserves—is smaller now than since 1900, that clearings and the demand for credit are at the maximum, and that, while currency is ample, if not redundant, money is deficient, at least in the banks. There would seem to be a suggestion that there would be no question of capacity to grant credit if all our currency were of reserve quality. It might be so if all banknotes were convertible into gold instead of redeemable in paper. A gold currency is the only elastic currency. Our greenbacks, our silver, and our banknotes are incompressible, and they exceed $1,500,000,000. And our non-reserve banknotes are inexpansible, except under favorable conditions of the bond market. Silver and greenbacks are altogether inexpansible. So long as this is so our currency will continue to be alternately deficient and redundant, and our credit capacity will be erratic. There is happily no discount upon any sort of our variegated currency, but it contains reserve and non-reserve classes between which bankers must have their preference, even if only because of the inconvenience of exchanging one sort for the other.

BOSSISM AND PARTY SPIRIT.

We regret that Judge Parker should have marred his admirable address on "Democracy," at the capital of Mississippi, by an attempt to make a party point which, in our judgment, is not well taken, and which, even if it had been well taken, would tend to defeat the speaker's object.

"Too much government" is the essence of Judge Parker's complaint, as it was that of the complaint of the founder of the Democratic Party. Specifically, Judge Parker's complaint is "the abuse," which is also the excess, "of the taxing power of the Government." But, in the interview with which he favored this journal, on the same day with the delivery of this address, he pointed, with what may be called paternal pride, to the decision of the Supreme Court, denying immunity to officers of corporations when summoned as witnesses. From this decision he drew the fairly deducible morals that there was law enough to prevent these new-fangled corporate abuses; that the trouble was not with the law; that there was no need of more law; that the law, as it stands in decisions not less than in statutes, suffices to correct such abuses, so only it be wisely adjudicated and honestly executed.

All this is admirable and sound. A corollary is that there is too much making of statutes to re-enact the common law. The judicial application of the common law "to every stage of our National existence" is one of accompaniments of our Nationa. pansion. We have heretofore, and many times, expressed our regret that the Court of Appeals of the State of New York, in a case in which its opinion happened to be delivered by Judge Parker himself, should not have seized the occasion "to make the bounds of freedom wider yet" by deciding that the right to privacy was a substantial right of human society, entitled to judicial protection, instead of deciding that there was no such thing. That incident offered an occasion, which the Court of Appeals conspicuously rejected, for enlarging the statute law. And the Court of Appeals so neglected its opportunity that there had to be put upon the statute book a law correcting that decision.

But, as we began by saying, Judge Parker's address missed part of its main point when he allowed himself to appear as a partisan rather than as a publicist, and when he pointed with pride to the fact that the Republican Party had more powerful and unscrupulous "State Bosses" than the Democratic Party. We do not dispute the assertion of fact. We are inclined to subscribe to it. But it is absolutely irrevelant and accidental. What makes a boss is a great political majority on the side which he professes, and a majority which is not to be moved from its party allegiance by considerations of the good of the community, whether the community be a municipality or a State. Boss Tweed's "pou sto" was exactly the same as Boss Durham's, or as Boss Platt's, or as Boss Quay's. It was an appeal to the party spirit of the majority of the voters, an appeal which would make them vote for a bad Democrat rather than for a good Republican, or vice versa. It is the abuse of party spirit against which Washington warned his countrymen that is the ultimate reliance of bossism and machine politics. That a man like Judge Parker, in the course of an appeal against exactly the results of this spirit, should go to taking credit for one party as against the other, this is a melancholy exemplification at once of the needfulness and of the futility of Washington's teaching.

MANHATTAN BRIDGE.

Now that Commissioner Best is out of office and Mr. Stevenson, an official undisputedly disinterested and uncommitted, is in, there seems to be a fair prospect of having the question of the Manhattan Bridge settled on its merits and in the interest of the city. That the Merchants' Association has taken up the matter with energy, and has memorialized the Controller and the Commissioner about it, augurs well for such a solution.

The association, possibly wisely, puts the stress of its argument upon the difference in cost between the two designs. Without doubt three millions are worth saving. But it were better to have an adequate bridge at ten millions than an inadequate bridge at seven millions. The question, however, seems to be between an adequate bridge at seven millions and an inadequate bridge at seven, a bridge, moreover, which would take far longer than the adequate bridge to construct, and would be architecturally much less of an ornament to the city. And the question of time is of the essence. It seems that Commissioner Lindenthal's plan has the advantage in the saving of time as well as in the saving of money.

The doubt which Commissioner Best pretended to entertain was whether the material for the execution of the eye bar chain could be had. But this, if we remember aright, was a question with which Mayor Low's commission of experts specifically dealt, in a supplementary report, and decided that it could. So that, on the one side, there is the weight of the engineering authority of the country, on the other only the weight of Commissioner Best's authority, which of course is nil, backed up by the engineering authority of his own office. And this latter authority was much impaired by the general suspicion that the primary object of the Commissioner's technical staff was not to produce the best bridge, but the bridge that would most discredit Commissioner Lindenthal.

Certainly New York cannot afford to build a "spite bridge." The solution proposed by the Merchants' Association does not cover the entire case. It does not cover, for instance, the artistic aspects of the rival designs. But, so far as it goes, it is unexceptionable. The association appeals to the Commissioner of Bridges to invite bids upon the two designs, having regard to comparative cost and also to comparative quickness of construction. This is a "show down" to which nobody can possibly object without impugning his own cause. It is not to be doubted that the Commissioner of Bridges and the Controller will see the force of the suggestion.

TAXING THE BROKERS.

Everybody smiled but the brokers when it appeared that the stock transfer tax law was yielding so much more than had been expected. The annual yield had been reckoned at $5,000,000, but January's contribution alone was $911,000. There was no reason why the brokers also should not smile at this, for their business was proven to be thriving and the customers paid the freight. But now there is an accumulation of calamities at which certainly not the broker, and perhaps nobody else, can smile. Emissaries of the Controller are now daily visiting brokers' offices to learn whether or not the tax is being fully collected. The suspicion of these heartless men is that the tax has been reckoned upon $100 of face value as a unit, instead of upon each share. Those who have been dealing in Reading and other stocks whose share value is under $100 will see the point. Each share must pay 2 cents, whether it be selling upon a premium above its face value of $100, or whether it be a mining share worth—that is to say selling at—10 cents. Nobody knows what the total of arrears may reach, and nobody can predict what damage may be done in hindering the sales of shares taxed so disproportionately to either their face value or their market price. The only incidental advantage appears to be a demonstration of the inequity of the tax if the Controller's application is correct.

While these extortioners were visiting the offices of their victims the mails were bringing them the draft of a law requiring them to lodge with the State $100,000 before being authorized to do business at all, and imposing an official examination of all their accounts. Considering that their seats cost them around $90,000, this is a pretty severe requirement. Probably it need not be taken too seriously. Wealth creates no presumption of character, but rather the contrary in this degenerate era, and there can be no other object in the proposal than to assure that brokers' customers are dealing with responsible persons. That object might be obtained better in another manner, that is, by excluding the irresponsible from the business, rather than by annoying the men of character in the business who may not have the deposit demanded to spare from their active capital. For example, if the State demands a tax upon every share sold, the least the State can do in return is to collect it from all alike, and not to allow it to go uncollected from the bucket shops and others who merely pretend to buy and sell. This purely gambling business benefits nobody, and harms many. Nor is this all. Canada, observing how easy it is to pluck this trade, is following the example. Quebec has imposed a tax of $2,000 upon foreign brokers, meaning American brokers, and Ontario is about to do the same. Thus a minimum of $4,000 is imposed, with a possibility of a collection from each branch, instead of from each firm for all their branches. It never rains but it pours. In these days the broker's lot is not a happy one.

THE ADIRONDACKS.

Senator Allds is known to enjoy the confidence of Gov. Higgins. Senator Allds is Chairman of the Forest, Fish, and Game Committee, from which has been reported the bill appropriating $450,000 to continue the purchase of forest lands by the State in the Adirondack Park. It may be inferred that the bill is in harmony with the views of the Executive and will be signed if passed by the Legislature.

Under every Governor up to Odell, Republican or Democratic, since 1890 appropriations were made for the purchase of forest lands—in 1890 under Gov. Hill, in 1892 and 1894 under Gov. Flower, in 1895 under Gov. Morton, in 1897 and 1898 under Gov. Black, and in 1899 and 1900 under Gov. Roosevelt. In 1892 under Gov. Flower the Adirondack Park was established. We are gratified at the present certain indication that Gov. Higgins has leaped the unworthy hiatus of Odell.

The desirability of increasing the protective area of State forest lands is obvious. Practically the only forests left in this once forest-covered State are in the Adirondacks, and those which are left in private ownership are disappearing before the axe and saw of the lumber and pulp men at such a rate as to threaten complete denudation, with its attendant evils, within a human generation unless something shall be done to check it. The Association for the Protection of the Adirondacks makes the pertinent comparison, founded upon statistics furnished by State officials, that the total lumber output of the Adirondack and Catskill regions, which last year aggregated 800,000,000 board feet, exceeded the total amount of lumber imported by this country from British North America during the same period. If these imports are so great as to cause the question of a protective tariff thereon to assume the National importance which it has acquired, how much more significant to the State of New York is the annual removal of a greater volume of forest covering from her own area!

The appropriation of $450,000 called for in the bill referred to is a small one, in view of the situation confronting the State, and it should not be pared down from any false sense of economy.

The resolution of the Bar Association with reference to Justice Leventritt, passed certainly with the approval and apparently at the instance of the late President of the association, Mr. Root, is as honorable to the association as it must be gratifying to the Justice. The action of the association in 1898 was taken in a time of extreme excitement, chiefly growing out of the refusal of the Democratic Party to renominate Justice Daly when feeling ran high in the profession. It was determined by the very emphatic appeals of Mr. Root. It is now deliberately "reversed," and the association records its conviction that the service of the Justice on the bench "has been marked by ability, learning, diligence, and a strong sense of justice." That is an assurance which it is manly to give and which the public will receive with renewed confidence in the association that offers it and the Justice who is the subject of it.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Ruling About Transfers. It is somewhat unfortunate that the first Magisterial decision in regard to the new regulation under which a street car passenger must ask for a transfer when he pays his fare or else go without one, should have been made in a case where the passenger had obviously exceeded his rights. For the man brought before Magistrate Baker yesterday not only demanded a transfer as he was quitting the car, but, when the conductor refused to give him one, he snatched it from the conductor's pocket. That put him quite unnecessarily in the wrong, for technically he was guilty of a sort of larceny from the person, and it is not at all remarkable that he was arrested. The Magistrate, however, took the circumstances into consideration, and, exercising the very wide discretion of his office, he not only discharged the prisoner, but commended him for what he had done. Incidentally he declared that the company had no right to make the regulation that caused the trouble. The opinion will be received with general satisfaction, no doubt, but it hardly settles the question. Street railways, like other corporations of the kind, do have a right to make, and in one way or another to enforce, such regulations as are reasonable and necessary for the safe and convenient conduct of their business. They are obliged, however, always to be ready and able to prove the reasonableness and necessity of any rules they establish, and they do not keep in mind half as much as they should the fact that these rules of theirs are very different things from the Constitution of the United States or even from the ordinances of a Board of Aldermen. In other words they are not laws in any sense of the term, and people who break or ignore them are neither felons nor misdemeanants. We do not ourselves see any particular hardship in asking for a transfer when paying a fare and not at other times; it would simplify the dealings between passenger and conductor, and tend to prevent delays which we all want prevented. But, on the other hand, if a passenger forgets to make his demand at the proper time, or if he changes his mind as to his destination and decides that he wants a transfer which he had thought he did not want, we do not see any really large reason why he should not get it. We are almost sure, moreover, that the company's right of refusal would be denied in higher courts than that of a Police Magistrate, for it is at least dubiously reasonable and certainly not necessary. The snatching of a transfer from a conductor's pocket is a wholly different matter, and there is excuse for wondering why the Magistrate passed it over as lightly as he did.

Contributions for the Japanese. Several of our readers, moved to compassion by accounts of the famine in Japan, have written to us, asking to and through whom contributions for the relief of the sufferers can be sent. We are requested by William Channing Langdon, Secretary of the Executive Committee of the American National Red Cross Society, to give publicity to the fact that this organization has been officially designated by President Roosevelt to receive funds to be used for this excellent purpose. The office of the society in New York City is in the Bristol Building, 500 Fifth Avenue, corner of Forty-second Street, Room 500, and contributions should be sent there, addressed to Jacob H. Schiff, Treasurer of the New York State Branch. Each remittance will be promptly acknowledged and forwarded to the National Treasurer, who cables them to the Japanese Red Cross. The officers of the New York State Branch are: Col. William Cary Sanger, President; the Hon. Elihu Root, Vice President; Mrs. William Kinnicutt Draper, Secretary; Jacob H. Schiff, Treasurer, and Cleveland H. Dodge, Chairman of the Executive Committee. A special committee to further this Japanese fund has just been appointed, which consists of Col. William Cary Sanger, Cleveland H. Dodge, Howard Townsend, Frank A. Vivanti, Major E. L. Zalinski, Col. Edward E. Britton, all of New York, and the Hon. E. Prentiss Bailey of Utica, F. C. Gratwick of Buffalo, William Bayard Van Rensselaer of Albany, and Percy R. McPhail of Rochester. Through the National Red Cross alone, $45,000 has already been sent to the starving Japanese by the American public, and the contributions through The Christian Herald have also been large. While in Chicago this week, Mr. Sato, who made himself so favorably known at Portsmouth last Summer, said that the work of relief was rapidly going forward, and he explained the famine as due to excessive rains that had ruined the rice crop.

MARY MORTIMER MAXWELL.

"Sidetracked Husband" Sympathizes with This Englishwoman's Views.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was much interested this morning when I read in The Times the letter of "F. F. C.," who describes herself as a "wife and mother," and then proceeds to pick holes in the views of Mary Mortimer Maxwell, the "Englishwoman in New York" whose contributions to The Sunday Times are just now arousing so much discussion.

If the matrimonial state, with parental trimmings, constitutes a claim to the favorable consideration of the public, I want to say in the beginning that I am a husband and father. I don't know whether the very observant Englishwoman is a Miss or a Mrs., in which regard I am one with "F. F. C.," but right there we step off of common ground. The state of life which the Englishwoman occupies is a matter of total indifference to me. All I know is that since her arrival on these shores she seems to have kept her eyes wonderfully wide open and that she hits the nail on the head every time she takes a whack at American institutions.

I am, I flatter myself, a pretty good American, although I can so far shelve my patriotism as to enjoy a quiet laugh when some one takes a good-natured fall out of our tendency toward snobbery. It has been so long since I played the part of an affianced lover that I have, perhaps, forgotten the wiles with which I embellished my wooing, so I am not much of an authority on the Englishwoman's bill of indictment against the American man as a lover. When it comes to passing judgment, however, upon her recital of facts in the case of the American father versus the American child, I doff my hat to no man. That is where I live, and I want to indorse every word written by her.

I was somewhat of a personage in my house before the arrival of the first "Little Stranger." My wife belonged to me, and all day long I looked forward to the pleasure of the evening in her company. With the advent of the first baby I took a back seat and I've been there ever since. I am by no means a millionaire, but I was, even at that stage of the game, able to pay for a pretty good nurse, and I tried to make my wife see that the tiny daughter was safe in the care of the woman I paid to look after her. My wife couldn't see it that way. She personally superintended everything about the nursery, and when I could snatch ten minutes' talk with her I was given to understand that I was lucky. The minute the infant whimpered it was all off.

It is right that a mother should be concerned in her child, but I hold that the average nurse is neither a murderess nor a nincompoop, and that, as a general rule, she may be trusted. Surely the husband and father is entitled to some of the time and attention of his wife even if the baby does have a crying spell or so from overindulgence at the bottle or from any other cause.

I am for the "father" every time, under existing conditions, and at that I would go just as far as my wife to save my children from hurt or danger. Of course the women will kick about the Englishwoman's plain talk, but the truth is never unduly pleasant. Let us hope that our critic may persevere in showing us up as we are, and perhaps the heads of American families will get what is coming to them.

A SIDETRACKED HUSBAND.

Admiral Chadwick on City Reform.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With reference to the kind words in your last Sunday's issue regarding the proposed new charter for Newport and my own views as to an electorate, I would beg to say that it was impossible to advance these latter in this instance, as the electorate is fixed by the Constitution of Rhode Island. A change in this would of course be a question of much work and possibly a good deal of time. The Constitution now requires that one should be a male voter and taxpayer in order to vote for any city authorities who can impose a tax or who have control of the city money. But this does not go far enough. It should enable, in my view, any taxpayer, any head of a household or of a business, whether man or woman, or any estate which is taxed, to vote for those who have the control of the money contributed for municipal purposes.

And may I say a word further? Our city charters have been failures because they have established legislative bodies instead of bodies for consultation merely and administration. They are small editions of National and State Governments, entirely out of touch with the people. What is needed is to get back as much as possible to the people themselves.

I thus believe that we shall come to some such system as that proposed for Newport in our largest cities, which will be divided into autonomous districts of workable size, the whole to be under a metropolitan council for strictly metropolitan purposes. The union of a great city population under a single Government for all purposes has been a huge mistake.

Thin Stockings and Pneumonia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I agree with "M.", in his "Vanity and Pneumonia" in to-day's Times, but would like to give him a reason for this "particular type of smartly clad maid."

Alas! it is sadly too true
That the girls in Fifth Avenue
Wear veils on the face and stockings of lace,
And die of the monia-pneu.

Blame not the girl who is neat
For showing her dainty, trim feet,
But rather the men who all look again
At this type of girl in the street.

The girl who wears woolen hose
And the tops of her shoes never shows
Is frequent, I ween, but never is seen
By men who think only of clothes.

Substitutes for Spelling.

From The Boston Transcript.

Spelling reform is at last on the way, and Mr. Melvil Dui (ne Dewey) is pitching up his hat. So, I suspect, is an old schoolmate of mine, who anciently spelled "pants" p-a-n-c. That charming mandarin, Ly-Chao-Pee, in an article lately translated for the Transcript, told how the new Chinese alphabet and its phonetic employment enable a Chinaman to learn to read and write in two months. Spelling reform will do as much for our own boys and girls. The time thus saved can be advantageously devoted to more serious interests, such as pyrography, fudgemaking, basket work, ideology, dancing, poultry culture, the Irish language, tight-rope walking, and many other branches that are now suffering from partial neglect, though they are the glory of all true education.

Corroborative.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"This," exclaimed the orator, "is a decadent Nation! As before the fall of Rome everything was rotten, so to-day in our erstwhile fair land everything—"

Just here an egg struck him fairly.

His nostrils dilated.

"I desire," he continued, "before retiring to add that this egg is corroborative evidence."

The Pope's Own Financier.

From The Chicago Evening Post.

J. Morgan is a happy man;
Finances for the Vatican;
With prelates is the best of pals,
And dines with all the Cardinals,
He scorns to worry over rents,
Or dabble with the low per cents;
But merely takes the Papal rocks,
And puts them into gilt-edged stocks;
Expressing all the while the hope
The dividends may help the Pope,
The Church, and, incidentally,
No less a worthy than J. P.
A goodly man is he in truth;
A very present help forsooth;
Though I'm a Christian, yet, ah me,
That I a financier might be!

BREEDERS OF SOCIALISM.

Corporations Responsible for the Growing Animosity Toward Them.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is it any wonder that so much animosity is felt and shown toward corporations?

I am a daily passenger on the Madison Avenue line, and since their new transfer order went into effect have not made a single trip uptown without witnessing angry disputes between passengers and conductors at Eighty-fifth Street, many accompanied by violent and profane language, and I hear that such is the rule rather than the exception.

A majority of passengers taking a Madison Avenue car do not look at the signs to see whether they are for Eighty-sixth Street or 135th Street, and, being on a straight through trip, do not think of asking for a transfer. If the car is an Eighty-sixth Street one, at that point all are ordered out to the car ahead or behind, and refused transfers and compelled to pay another fare for the one straight through ride.

A passenger taking the Sixth Avenue and East Fifty-ninth Street line to go north on Madison Avenue gets a transfer for the Madison Avenue line, and if he happens to board an Eighty-sixth Street car and fails to get a transfer for his transfer, (something which has always been refused brusquely heretofore,) he has the same experience at Eighty-fifth Street.

What benefit does the company derive from such a rule? Do the few nickels which they rob the passengers of offset the ill-feeling and resentment aroused by such an unjust exercise of their power?

Possibly they have a legal right to do as they are doing, but if it is so it is time for our representatives in Albany to take it away from them.

On one trip I saw two little girls with bundles put off at Eighty-fifth Street to walk to Harlem, as they had no extra money and knew nothing about the new system, and such incidents are happening there all day long and cause a feeling to develop that the most of us deplore—and unnecessarily.

GIVE US A NEW ALPHABET.

With a Letter for Each Sound Spelling Will Be Easily Reformed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Andrew Carnegie Assaults the Spelling Book." It was with very great interest that I read the so-headed article in your issue of yesterday morning. My interest was exceeded by my regret, on reading that "They do not intend to urge any violent alteration in the appearance of familiar words. They will not advance any extreme theories."

Every attempt to "improve" the English language up to the present time has proved to be a ridiculous failure. "Thro" does not spell "through," and is nothing but a mere time-saving makeshift; "thro" is really the proper way to write "throw."

No attempt will ever be a success or prove of lasting value unless it is radical. There is just one only place to begin to improve and that place is the alphabet. At present we have something over forty distinct sounds represented by twenty-six letters. Some of those letters have varying sounds; "a" has five sounds of itself; in combination with other letters it has nobody knows how many.

If we are to get any improvement worth accustoming ourselves to, we must have an alphabet that will contain a separate character for each and every distinct sound; the name of that character must be the sound which it has; that sound must never vary.

Such an alphabet will contain about ten new vowels; some of the consonants will be omitted; some new ones take their place. With such an alphabet it will be practically impossible to make any mistake either in spelling or pronunciation.

It is hard to end an argument like this; it is easier to write a book on the subject than it is to write a letter. Let me close abruptly by saying that if this thing is worth doing it is worth doing well.

HERE IN NEW YORK!

An Incident of Travel in the Subway—Polite Instinct or Alcoholic Vagary?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When the express took on a quota of operagoers at 116th Street the conductor aroused the seedy old fellow from his sprawling unconsciousness and steadied him across the aisle to the safe corner next the door. Heavily he lurched into the haven, and his grizzled, unshaved face scraped sharply against the door frame as his head dropped forward. But he wasn't too far gone to talk: "Forty-shecon' Schtree', I shay, Forty-shecon' Schtree." He repeated it with aimless wavings of his free arm. The old lady in the white lace bonnet crowded hastily over to leave room for the play of the formidable member. Throughout the car the women looked tragedy, the men comedy.

"Hundred and Third Street," called the conductor; "Hundred and Third," and the doors were flung wide again to a hurrying, pushing throng. A slip of an eighteen-year-old girl clutched momentarily at the strap nearest the door to steady herself against the pressure of the incoming stream.

"Look!" whispered my young companion, excitedly; "he's giving that girl his seat."

Sure enough, the lank, relaxed old frame had stiffened, there were ineffectual gropings toward a battered derby, and the inebriate was on his feet. Of course he couldn't stand up; instinct had got the better of judgment. But the cheerful Irish conductor gave him a steady shoulder in the vestibule, and at Ninety-sixth Street, even the white lace bonnet turned a little anxiously to see that Sir Walter, delivered to the guard half a hundred squares from "Forty-shecon' Schtree'," came to no harm.

The Ticket Speculator Nuisance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It may encourage those who have suffered, pecuniarily or otherwise, from the depredations of the ticket speculator fraternity if they know of one channel of redress open to them. Having been victimized by having tickets palmed on to me as being for a desired location, only to find them valid for lower-priced seats, I brought the matter under the notice of the License Department, Room 1, City Hall. At the hearing, to which I was invited, courtesy combined with business promptitude was the order of the day. The results were satisfactory to me, not merely because the speculator was ordered to refund the entire cost of the tickets and to leave a substantial contribution to the City Treasury, but because what is open to one is open to all who are similarly treated.

The Fine Art of Reporting.

From The New Brunswick Home News.

The sketches about the Metuchen folk in the New York newspapers (apropos of Mrs. Freeman's novel, "The Debtor,") are immensely entertaining. The reporter who wrote the two columns in The New York Times on Sunday is an artist, nothing short of it. We only wish we could afford such talent on The Home News.

MAGIC OF THE GAS BILL.

Faster Than the Rate Goes Down the Monthly Total Goes Up.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I for one am not in favor of 80-cent gas. This is not because I am a stockholder in the Consolidated Gas Company, but because my bills with $1 gas will be lower than with the gas at 80 cents. Last year at about this time, when the agitation about gas and electric light was in progress, the Consolidated Gas Company advertised extensively in order to influence public opinion. After this advertising crusade my gas bill for the month of May was just double that of April, though in past years it had always been less, owing to the longer days.

A complaint to the gas company brought an Inspector from their office. He suavely stated that everybody was complaining about the size of the bills for that month. "In fact," said he, "everybody seems to have burned more gas!" That explains itself. For ways that are dark you cannot beat the gas company.

For the past short month my gas bill, which has just come to hand, shows that I burned just twice as much gas as in the month of January. This is the gas company's answer to the agitation for 80-cent gas. More plainly put, the gas company can make the charges whatever it wishes, no matter what price is put by the Legislature.

To preclude any answer to the effect that I ought to have my meter inspected by the highly paid State Inspector of Gas Meters, or its quality passed on by the Commission of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, I would state that I communicated with both of those officials last year. The former declared the meter all right, which I believe, and the latter said he did not have his testing machine ready. In other words, it is not the meter which is wrong, but the things which the gas company seems to be able to do to make a high consumption show on the dial.

A WORK OF GREAT DELICACY.

Individual Training and Development the Great Need of School System.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The first of Dr. Shearer's series of articles on faulty classification in public school is full of interest to all who deal with children, whether parents, teachers, or social workers. The day upon which a child's interest in school begins to decline often marks the first step in a series ending in a reformatory.

From personal experience in juvenile court work in Philadelphia the writer knows that nine out of every ten children brought before the court are either entirely out of the school system or else so misplaced that progress is impossible. Children under 14 will tell you that they have been out of school six months, one year, two, even three. The final break has often been made at the end of a school term, when the child failed of promotion, usually not for the first time. Angry and humiliated before his mates—who has not seen a sullen, defiant boy, cap over his eyes and suspicious streaks on his face, backed up against a school wall facing a taunting group, chanting, "Oh, Jackie's got left down! Oh, Jackie's got left down!" Is it any wonder he makes up his mind to cut the whole thing out? "Left down," truant, delinquent, reformatory boy, is a very common sequence. Again and again mothers of delinquent boy say: "Seems like Jackie never wanted to go to school after he was left down."

Only when Jackie's individual training and development, according to his capability, is of more importance than the promotion of a class of sixty, will the schools cease to feed juvenile courts, reformatories, and prisons.

Government and the Governed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am a believer in Socialism as the most ideal form of government yet devised. I also believe that Jesus Christ was the most ideal character whom history records. But not until the nature of the average man approaches more nearly that of the Ideal Man do I believe that my ideal government will be possible. It is simply a question of cause and effect. Those in favor of immediate Socialism evidently believe that it is the government that makes the man. I do not. There can be no doubt that human nature has improved somewhat in the past few thousand years, but this improvement has been brought about by the Divine Spirit working within, not the human government working without.

A people generally get as good a government as the majority of them deserve. If they are unselfish they will deserve a government founded upon unselfishness, and if they are intelligent and courageous they will struggle until they obtain it. It remains for the Socialists to prove that the majority of them are unselfish.

Relief for Japan.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If there is to be any aid given to the famine sufferers of Japan it will have to be done quickly. In a country like America, where food is so plentiful, why not send them a few shiploads of provisions? Produce for relief could be sent to the Pacific Mail Wharf, San Francisco, for Yokohama, Japan, marked with the ambulance cross. The ships make the journey from San Francisco to Yokohama in thirteen days. Cereals, rice preferred, or any food to keep starvation from their houses.

The Simplified Shaw!

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What will happen if the principle of simplified spelling is applied to the surname of George Bernard Shaw? It must be admitted that if the silent letters are dropped in the word Shaw nothing remains, for neither the sound of S, nor of H, nor of A, nor of W is pronounced. Why not, therefore, say G. B. Shakespeare and end the controversy?

How They Manage in France.

They manage these things differently in France. At the celebrated trial of Gallay and Mme. Merelli the latter was requested by one of the Guarde Républicaine, who stood behind her in the dock, to be quiet. La Belle Merelli turned to him with a pathetic smile and said simply, with rising inflection: "Have you never loved?"

The man, it is said, blushed violently. How would a New York policeman have borne himself in similar trying circumstances?

MISS O'ERTHEWAY.

In Sunlight Street, the town o' Day,
My sweetheart lived, Miss O'ertheway.
I watched her from my window seat,
Where I was wheeled each morn to greet
My little sweetheart at her play,
In Sunlight Street, the town o' Day.

We neither knew each other's name.
She only knew that I was lame,
And I, that she was blithe and gay;
She smiled at me, Miss O'ertheway,
My little sweetheart at her play.

In Shadow Street, the town o' Night,
A tight-shut door, a ribbon white.
I bade them wheel me back again;
I knew I'd only look in vain
For Sunlight Street, the town o' Day,
My little sweetheart o'er the way.

THE LIBRARY TABLETS ARE MERELY PAINTED

Inscriptions Are Made to Look as If Chiseled,

BUT THAT'S TO GET OPINIONS

The Trustees Smilingly Admit Protests Are Coming in Fast—Round-Up of Ideas on April 1.

It seems that the Trustees of the City Library, now going up at Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street, have adopted a plan of their own to get New York's vote on the tablets that are to be put up to commemorate the three donors whose gifts will form New York's great collection of books. They have had three inscriptions painted on tablets on the Fifth Avenue side of the structure. They are painted so as to look just as if they were cut from the stone. The Trustees are sure they will interest many persons; in fact, they have already, as the correspondence columns of THE TIMES have shown.

The Executive Committee of the Trustees met at the Astor Library yesterday. A reporter called there to ask in behalf of several of THE TIMES's correspondents why the Trustees, without consulting the public, had had the tablets inscribed "The Astor Library," "The Lenox Library," and "The Tilden Trust," with merely a line underneath to signify that the library had been "erected by the city."

"Who told you we had inscribed the tablets to anybody?" said the Trustee. "That is entirely erroneous. Not a word has been engraved so far. We are still wondering how we shall word the memorial."

The inquirer was surprised, for he had just come from Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street, where he had copied the inscriptions on the three tablets and on the space beneath. The Trustee laughed.

"Oh, you needn't look so troubled," he said. "You saw those inscriptions, no doubt, but they were just painted on!

"The situation is this. The Trustees have not taken upon themselves to choose the wording of the inscriptions. We caused these inscriptions to be drawn up tentatively. The three tablets seemed suited to the memorial to John Jacob Astor, James Lenox, and Samuel Jones Tilden, who made the great civic library possible. The broad band of stone beneath the three tablets seemed best suited to the big-lettered fact that the library was called the New York Public Library, or words to the effect that it had been erected by the people of the city.

"We had the tentative inscriptions painted on—just as if they had been engraved—knowing perfectly well what the result would be. We knew that the public would begin suggesting other inscriptions, begin protesting against this and that, and the end of it would be that we would arrive at what the public wanted.

"The letters to THE TIMES have not escaped our attention, and we are grateful to THE TIMES for giving space to them. They are just what we wanted, and the more letters we get or see printed, and the more suggestions we receive—why, the better able will we be to judge what the public wants and act accordingly.

"The letters to THE TIMES have contained many valuable suggestions. It must not be thought because certain inscriptions appear on the tablets that the trustees approve them. They represent only suggestions open to much amendment. We shall be glad to have the people tell us what they want put on the tablets in place of the painted letters there now."

All suggestions for the tablets will be considered by the Board between now and April 1, when the trustees will meet to discuss the memorials and dedications.

The central of the painted tablets which are on view on the Fifth Avenue side of the building, over the main entrance, reads:

THE LENOX LIBRARY
Founded by
JAMES LENOX
Devoted to Science, History, Literature, and the Arts

The tablet to the south reads:

THE ASTOR LIBRARY
Founded by
JOHN JACOB ASTOR
for the Advancement of Useful Knowledge

The northern tablet reads:

THE TILDEN TRUST
Founded by
SAMUEL JONES TILDEN
To Serve the Interests of Science and Popular Education.

Under each tablet is the date in Roman letters. At the base of the row of tablets is a broad belt of stone on which at present are the words:

1902—ERECTED BY THE CITY—1908

"We are of the opinion," said the executive member of the Board of Trustees, "that the tablets are suited to what they now contain, but the question in our minds is whether the words now on the space below or something else shall be made permanent. There is only one space beside the tablets where the city ownership line shall be. If 'erected by the city' remains, then the name of the library is left out. We would like to get that name in somehow. How shall it be? That is the question."

WHAT THE GIANTESS DID.

A More or Less True Story of How She Rebuffed an Intruding Wave.

When Miss Rosa Wedsted, the Finnish giantess, who is to be an attraction of the Barnum & Bailey Circus this season, landed from the Hamburg-American liner Bluecher yesterday morning, Col. Tody Hamilton, the energetic and far-famed press agent of the big show, promulgated a yarn that when the big liner was in midocean Miss Wedsted had stopped a giant sea that was sweeping a sailor into the ocean.

The sea, according to Col. Hamilton, came over the port side and caught a big strapping German seaman full and square and was hustling him seaward when Miss Wedsted appeared. She lifted one hand and stopped the wave and with the other pushed the German out of the way. Then she stepped aside and the wave rushed over the starboard railing back into the sea. The sailor escaped without a scratch. What happened to the wave was not told.

MISS ILLINGTON TO SAIL.

Will Leave the "Lion and the Mouse" to Study a New Part.

Margaret Illington is to retire on March 24 from the cast of the "Lion and the Mouse" company, now playing in the West. Miss Illington will go to London at an early date to see the new Pinero play, "His House in Order," which Charles Frohman by arrangement with Daniel Frohman will produce at the Empire Theatre next Fall. Miss Illington will share with John Drew the leading rôles in the new piece.

Miss Illington's place in Mr. Klein's play will be filled by Gertrude Coghlan.

The Operatic Wives Sail Away.

The Hamburg-American liner Deutschland, sailing to-day for Hamburg, via Plymouth and Cherbourg, will have on board the wives of several of Herr Direktor Conried's best-known singers. They are Mrs. Enrico Caruso, Mrs. Andreas Dippel, Mrs. Marcel Journet, Mrs. Aloys Burgstaller and Miss Isolde Burgstaller, Mrs. Otto Goritz, and Mrs. Adolf Muhlmann.

TEN AMERICAN PAINTERS.

Pictures by Nine New York and Boston Artists.

The annual exhibition of the Ten American Painters is open at the Montross Gallery, 372 Fifth Avenue, and will remain until the end of the month. Mr. William M. Chase, who was elected to fill the place of John Twachtman, shows in company with the Ten for the first time.

Messrs. Metcalf and Alden Weir are the largest contributors, sending six canvases each. Messrs. Reid and Hassan exhibit four, Messrs. Tarbell, De Camp, Benson, and Chase three, Mr. Dewing only one. Mr. Simmons is the tenth little blackbird sitting on a pine, who flew away to Europe, and then there were nine; he has not sent anything. If this defection continues he runs the risk of being condemned in contumacium and expelled for unreasonable exile.

Mr. Hassam has a large plunging view of Central Park in his best vein, taken in early Spring, when the buds are opening. "June Idyl" is a blonde landscape with water in the background, a couple of small nude women on the bank, and slender trees in the foreground. "The Butterfly" is a single nude seated woman looking at a butterfly near her feet. "Bather" is a standing nude, her fleshtones and ruddy hair harmonizing with a background of pale yellows and green. These two nudes are proof that Mr. Hassam is getting away from his former somewhat flat and simply decorative treatment of undraped figures, and producing more rounded and realistic nudes. They are still far removed from humanity; they still represent abstractions like Spring or the nymphs of woodland and hill, Dryad, Naiad, or Oread; but the human quality begins to overcome the symbolical, or, it would be more strictly true to say, the decorative. In his brushwork also there is less of theory, less insistence on the vibratory possibilities of colors laid close together yet separate, which we are expected to fuse together when we look at pictures of the school to which he belongs.

Mr. Alden Weir's "Midday," an old red barn with poultry in the foreground, is painted according to this theory, and expresses fairly well the brilliant intensity of sunlight. His contributions offer great variety. "The Shadow of My Studio" is a fine nocturne reproducing moonlight very happily as it sifts over fields partially inclosed by great wedges of sleeping woods. The moon is not in the picture. In the foreground lies a triangle of shadow where the gable of the house behind the spectator has cast its form on the grass. A night scene roughly brushed in is "Hunting the Raccoon." A small fire kindled by the coon hunters lights up fitfully a tree trunk and the figures of men and dogs before a tangle of woods, all under a murky, indistinct sky. "Spring" has old orchard trees in the foreground bursting into faint green along the topmost branches, a farm in the background, and behind that ranks of yellowish trees. The half-length "A Gentlewoman" is a very charming affair—eyes cast down, lips slightly compressed, hands clasped, white dress exquisitely painted with touches of pink ribbon here and there—altogether one of the most delightful pieces in a collection full of good things.

Mr. Benson's "Three Sisters" is remarkable for the play of sunlight on chestnut braids and pale gold tresses seen against a background of pine boughs. Dresses and hair ribbons of three small girls seated in the open are white and pink. His portrait of a gentleman, half length, seated, is alert and ably painted. "Coasters in Harbor" is a big sketch in grays with a very high horizon—pale gray troubled sky, gray schooners at anchor seen from the stern, and dark, bluish-gray water occupying a large part of the canvas, and not very convincingly, either. It has no life and offers too much the suggestion of a pattern.

Mr. Tarbell has a good, plain interior, with girl at a round table, "Mending," though truth compels one to say that the green object in her lap looks like salad, not a mendable material. But then this girl, in a coat of some Oriental embroidered stuff, with undergarment and standing collar of a brilliant red, has sufficient merit to make one reconciled to a trifle of that sort. A bowl on the mahogany table contains pale red flowers, and the walls of the room are fine in their cool tones of olive and dark gray. "Portrait of Miss Eleanor Hyde," (who sits in the sunlight before a pond covered with lilypads) is less impressive. The glory of sunsmitten, light hair is about her head. Her eyes are raised in a look that is just a wee bit affected.

The best of Mr. Reid's four sendings is a sketch, "After the Storm," full of the spirit of the breeze and clouds blown helter-skelter. "The Gold Screen," a young woman in a light gold-shot, low-necked robe, seated with chin on hand before a screen, rich with golden embroidered figures, is somewhat thin. The figure is nicely posed, the composition excellent. When it comes to the flesh painting there is great inequality, the left arm being nicely drawn, but the bosom flat and singularly muddled as to tone. It seems to be a case of hurry, as if the painter had not given himself time to do himself justice. A somewhat similar weakness as to quality appears in "White Iris," where the special characteristics of the petals are just missed. Better is the "Head," with eyes cast down and fillet over hair, painted in an upward flow of artificial light.

M. Dewing's single seated figure called "Portrait" has the precious quality we miss in Mr. Reid's young woman. It seems painted with the most affectionate care. In a low-necked black dress with a big pale rose at the bosom and in long white gloves, the young person looks straight forward with a far from gay expression. She has reddish hair of a fine gold tint and longish features. One returns to this figure with pleasure in the subtle workmanship.

Mr. Chase has a pleasant interior without figures called "The Green Window Curtain" and two heads, "Mr. Pach," an interesting individual capitally painted, save for the too great depth of shadow on one side of the face, which quenches the eye on that side, and "A Young Musician," alert and red of hair and mustache, a bit of brilliant brush work. Of three sendings by Mr. De Camp his own portrait in full face is best, although "La Penserosa," a girl resting her chin on her hand, whose face and arm are startlingly illuminated from the right, is also a fine bit of painting. The eye in the shadow has been sacrificed. "Girl with a Book" is another good canvas, lit like the other from the side by a lamp or firelight, and with face turned toward the light into profile. The heavy shadow to the left of the head brings into great prominence the muscle of the neck. This makes a severe downward mark between chin and bosom which detracts from the beauty of the picture and seems rather unnecessary.

No one should fail to examine these pictures, which are only thirty-two in number and present many delightful canvases executed with much freshness and art.

IS GREENEBAUM ON DECK?

He Is—His Association Has Its Annual Ball Sunday Night.

The annual ball of the F. Greenebaum Benevolent Association will be held in the Imperial Lyceum, Fifty-fifth Street and Third Avenue, on Sunday evening next. Mr. Greenebaum is President of the Nassau Newspaper Delivery Express Company. He is the man who sees that the newspapers get away from their offices in time to catch the mails.

If the papers get away on time he gets the credit, and if they are late he gets the blame.

"Is Greenebaum on deck?" is the cry in a big snowstorm.

The association is composed of members of the mailing departments of the New York newspapers. They always have a fine turnout and a jolly evening at their ball.

BRADY PLAY IS TO GO.

Despite the Brady Defense—Next After "The Redskin" Not Settled.

The last week of "The Redskin," William A. Brady's much-criticised and strenuously defended Indian drama, is announced at the Liberty Theatre. The play will depart on Saturday, March 24. What will follow it has not been decided yet. But "The Redskin" will go.

Mr. Brady quit making speeches about the wicked dramatic critics several nights ago and went out of town. His wife (Grace George) has a new play in St. Louis, and he was needed there. His curtain addresses had been not the least entertaining part of the performance.

The St. Louis correspondents have praised the newest Brady play. It will reach the critics in New York soon.

$23,000 FOR A TADEMA AT THE BRANDUS SALE

THREE DAYS' TOTAL, $227,355

Lively Bidding for Work of Corot and Others — But One Canvas Sells Under $100.

The final lot of the paintings in the Edward Brandus collection disposed of last evening at the Waldorf-Astoria made one of the biggest art sales the grand ballroom has seen for some time. The total return for the seventy-five pictures sold was $150,645, almost double the amount of the first two evenings, bringing up the receipts for the entire collection to $227,355.

An Alma Tadema, "The Sculptor's Studio," brought the highest price of the evening, going to Aaron Silverman for $23,000. The "Return of the Fishermen," by Isabey, brought $7,800, from E. Sandmeyer, and H. W. Dressler paid the third highest price, $7,500, for Schreyer's "Walachian Horses."

A good audience filled the ballroom, many handsomely dressed women among them. The prices began well and nothing went for less than $100 until the close of the sale, when the last of one of seven uncatalogued pictures brought only $25. This was a small Le Brun.

The first bid for Corot's "Ideal Landscape" was $1,000, and the picture finally went to D. V. Kranmer for $2,225. The "Portrait of Miss Keppel," by Sir Joshua Reynolds, began at the same price, going to L. A. Lanthier for $2,600. A portrait of the "Empress Elizabeth of Russia," by Louis Lagrence, started for $1,000, and was bid in by L. McKinney for $3,400. "The Grand Canal," by Ziem, for which F. A. Lawler paid $4,600, and the Schreyer both received a first offer of $1,000. The Alma Tadema started at $5,000. The bidding was brisk throughout of the sale. Emerson McMillin was one of the best-known buyers last evening. Following is a list of artists, pictures, buyers, and prices:

Lanthier for $450; a Corot, for which E. S. Nash gave $300; another Perret, which went to Irving T. Bush for $680. J. A. Powers gave $200 for a Hermann Leo, and there was the twenty-five-dollar Le Brun.

"CARMEN" TRIUMPHS AGAIN.

An Enthusiastic Audience Crowds the Metropolitan Opera House.

The season's second performance of "Carmen" packed the Metropolitan Opera House to the doors last night with an audience that was all enthusiasm. All the principal parts were assumed by the same singers as last week, and their performances were on quite the same level.

Miss Fremstad was, of course, the Carmen and Mr. Caruso the Don José. Both were called before the curtain repeatedly after each act, while Miss Abott, as Micaela, got a reception only less warm.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Yvette Guilbert will give her farewell concert at the Lyceum Theatre on Sunday night.

Elsie Janis is well again. She resumed her rôle in "The Vanderbilt Cup" at yesterday's performance at the Broadway Theatre.

ODDEST OF AUCTION SALES.

A Country Store of Civil War Times Yields Up Its Relics.

Special to The New York Times.

CHAPPAQUA, N. Y., March 14.—Ever since civil war times, and some say longer ago even than that, the general country store of George R. Avery at Cross River, about five miles across the fields from Katonah, has been falling into decay with never a customer until to-day, when a sale at auction of its ancient stock began. The owner himself ordered the sale and personally supervised it.

All the surrounding countryside attended. The road before the place was lined with farmers' wagons and more pretentious rigs of city spectators. Curiosity may have been the motive that drew the crowd, but once on the ground they entered into the spirit of the thing, and there was lively bidding and many sharp contests up to a limit of 50 cents. Few sales exceeded this figure.

Stories differ as to why Mr. Avery shut up his store, as he had done since the war. One is that scruples against war caused him to refuse to pay the taxes levied to carry it on; another is that he closed his shutters on the day his wife died. The building, a big two-story frame house, perhaps 20 by 60 feet and fronting directly on the road to Greenwich, Conn., was originally painted white, but it has now attained a silver gray from the weather. Half of it was used for the store and the rest for a dwelling, but Mr. Avery gave up the living rooms when he shut down and has lived since in a small cottage in the rear. Sun, wind, and rain did their work, and the building now is about ready to fall.

It was freely predicted that there would be trouble when the place was condemned by the Aqueduct Commission two years ago, but Mr. Avery made no protest, nor is it at all certain what he intends to do now. His place stands on the site of the Cross River Reservoir, the dam for which has just been begun two miles from his house. E. G. Minstern, timekeeper at the works, said to-night that it will be fully two years before the water overflows the Avery property and that there was no reason why he should not have stayed there until then.

But Mr. Avery hired an auctioneer. The sale was held in his barn. He handled every article himself as it was put up, and a curious collection they made. Corsets and crinoline frames and men's and women's hats, all of the date of forty years ago, found ready purchasers at from 5 to 15 cents. Some of the younger folk who bid on the hoopskirts had not the least idea what they were ever used for. Some of the hats were serviceable. Two old women struggled for the ownership of a roll of wire until one got it for 50 cents. A prize bargain was six boxes of cheroots, each containing about a dozen. They went, the lot, for 15 cents.

The sale lasted from 9 o'clock this morning until dark. It goes on again to-morrow and probably Friday, or until everything is cleaned out. Mr. Avery has property. He had farmed on a small scale since he abandoned the idea of being a merchant. He is now hardly 70 years old.

FINDS A PEARL AT LUNCHEON.

Three Oysters Have Now Contributed to Mrs. Osgood's Bracelet.

Mrs. Robert W. Osgood of Chicago, whose husband is a physician of that city, found a straw pearl believed to be valuable in an oyster while at luncheon with some friends at the Waldorf-Astoria yesterday.

Mrs. Osgood wrapped her find in her handkerchief, and after the luncheon took it to Tiffany's. There the pearl was declared to be valuable.

This is the third valuable pearl Mrs. Osgood has found in oysters in the last two years. The first two she had set in a gold bracelet, which she wore at the luncheon yesterday. The third pearl will be added to the others on the bracelet.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

This afternoon there will be a meeting of the Bellevue Sewing and Knitting Class at Miss Leary's residence, 1,032 Fifth Avenue, and to-morrow there will be a meeting at Mrs. E. J. Berwind's of the class for the Maternity Hospital.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Ronalds did not sail for Europe after all, as booked, but are in Washington, where Mrs. Ronalds's aunt, Mrs. Richard Townsend, gave a dinner in their honor last night. This evening Mrs. Townsend will give a theatre party. Mr. and Mrs. Ronalds will remain her guests for several days.

⁂

Walter Beaupre Townley and Lady Susan Townley have been at St. Augustine for several days. Lady Susan spent several days in New York with Mrs. John R. Drexel before starting with her husband on his Southern trip. Mr. and Mrs. Drexel are booked to sail on April 7, to remain abroad the entire Summer.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont are on from Washington, but will return there Saturday. They have leased the residence in Scott Circle for another year.

⁂

The marriage of Miss Ella de Ruyter, a daughter of the late John de Ruyter, and Augustus Drum Porter, formerly of Philadelphia, is set for April 16. The details have not been arranged. The engagement was announced in this paper on March 4.

⁂

Emil Kehrlein, one of those taking part in the Columbia 'Varsity show, will entertain at supper this evening after the performance. Among his guests are to be Miss Bessie Abott, Prince Troubetskoy, and Prince del Drago.

⁂

Mrs. J. Bruce Ismay (Miss Schieffelin) sailed yesterday on the Baltic. Mr. and Mrs. George R. Schieffelin gave a dinner for her on Tuesday evening, one of a series of entertainments given in her honor during her visit here, which covered several weeks.

⁂

The concert on Saturday evening at the Waldorf-Astoria for the benefit of the Society for Italian Immigrants and Miss Leary's Italian Settlement promises to be one of the most successful of entertainments of the Winter. Mme. Nordica and M. Gilbert will sing and Victor Herbert's orchestra will play. A few boxes may be obtained from Miss Doane, 18 West Thirty-fourth Street. Among the patronesses are Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Grenville Winthrop, Mrs. Frederick W. Whitridge, Mrs. A. Newbold Morris, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. William Rhinelander, and Mrs. James Speyer.

A WOMAN COMMANDANT AT THIS NAVY YARD

Widow Metcalfe Is in Charge at Sackett's Harbor.

GETS $1 A DAY AND A HOUSE

She Is Responsible for an Unfinished Man-of-War and Some Ancient Ordnance.

For the first time in the history of the United States a woman has been designated by the President as commandant of a navy yard. The navy yard, it is true, is only a little one at Sackett's Harbor, on Lake Ontario, in this State, but it is a navy yard nevertheless, and at one time in its history was famous.

The woman thus honored is the widow of Albert H. Metcalfe, late commandant of the yard, and she is the third that bears the name Metcalfe to hold the position. Mr. Metcalfe, who succeeded his father as commandant, died a few weeks ago, and as the position left vacant was the only one of its kind in this country to which a civilian could aspire, many applications were filed at Washington by veterans of the civil and Spanish wars, all of whom thought they were fitted to look after the few hundred dollars' worth of property remaining in the ancient yard.

Mrs. Metcalfe was an applicant, and the records of her husband and father-in-law in the position counted in her favor. When it came to the final selection she received the appointment. She has already assumed her duties and is now in charge of the unfinished hulk of what was to have been the man-of-war New Orleans as well as a score of pieces of old ordnance that are no longer of use except as reminders of the days of the Revolution and of 1812, in which conflicts these cannon played a part.

The navy yard has been in existence for almost a century, and since it was authorized by Congress, back in 1807, many of America's distinguished naval officers have commanded it, among them being Capt. Alexander C. Rhind and Commanders Josiah Tatnall and Theodore Bailey. A little over forty years ago the elder Metcalfe was appointed, and at his death his son was named to succeed him. Now the son's widow has taken up the work, which according to naval officers is undoubtedly the easiest job of its kind in this or any other navy.

The commandants of naval yards are all Rear Admirals, with the single exception of Mrs. Metcalfe. Yesterday a naval officer was asked what her title was.

"That's a hard question," he answered, "and I really don't know exactly, but I imagine it must be 'ship's keeper.' It certainly is not Rear Admiral, Commodore, Captain, or Commander. However, it's worth a dollar a day and a nice house to live in, rent free, so the title doesn't count much after all."

Leaving out the title, if there is any, all the officers who know her say that Mrs. Metcalfe is the best person they know for the place, and they are all a unit in declaring that she will perform the duties of her new position as well as any man could, be he Rear Admiral of the line, Captain, Commander, Lieutenant Commander, or Officer of Marines.

MARTIN GREEN WEDS AT 78.

Brother of the Father of Greater New York Marries Secretly.

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., March 14.—Owing to the fact that the Massachusetts law requires that persons who are to be married and have different places of residence must take out a license in the place of residence of each, Martin Green, last of the famous Green family of this city, noted engineer and brother of the late Andrew H. Green, Father of Greater New York, was unable to keep secret his marriage yesterday afternoon to Mrs. Ella Sampson of Wareham.

Mr. Green is 78 years old, and his bride, whom he brought this afternoon to the home on Pleasant Street, which he bought and fitted up expressly for her some time ago, is 72. Mrs. Sampson was the lifelong friend of Green's first wife and widow of his own friend of many years. The ceremony was performed at the home of Misses Sarah and Jessie Sproat by the Rev. D. C. Thatcher of the Methodist Church, who was strictly enjoined to give out no information until after Mr. and Mrs. Green had departed for Worcester to-day.

Lieut. Gov. A. G. Jones Dead.

HALIFAX, N. S., Thursday, March 15.—The Right Hon. A. G. Jones, Lieutenant Governor of Nova Scotia, died suddenly at 2 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Jones was born in Weymouth, N. S., in 1824. He represented the County of Halifax in the House of Commons at Ottawa for fifteen years and was Minister of Militia and Defense in the Mackenzie administration.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The weather continues cloudy and overcast in nearly all parts of the country. Snow continues in the Middle Mississippi Valley and rain in the Ohio Valley, and thence southward to the Gulf. In the Gulf States it has been heavy.

For Friday, snow or rain is probable in New England, the lake region, and the northern portion of the Middle Atlantic States.

Winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be fresh northeast, slowly increasing; South Atlantic Coast, fresh, possibly brisk southeast, shifting to west; Gulf Coast, fresh northwest; Lake Michigan, light northeast to north.

Steamers departing Thursday for European ports will have fresh and variable winds and rainy weather to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND FRIDAY.

Eastern New York—Snow, probably turning to rain on the coast Thursday; Friday rain or snow, fresh, possibly brisk northeast winds.

New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Delaware—Rain Thursday; Friday clearing, fresh to brisk northeast winds.

New England—Fair in north, snow in south portion Thursday; Friday snow or rain, increasing northeast winds.

Western New York—Snow Thursday and Friday.

Western Pennsylvania—Rain and colder in south, snow in north portion Thursday; Friday snow or rain, fresh north to northeast winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

MRS. H. D. TIFFANY DEAD.

She Was Well Known for Her Work in Many Charities.

Mrs. Caroline Chase Tiffany, the wife of Henry Dyer Tiffany, died at the Tiffany home in Westchester Avenue, Portchester yesterday. She was well known in New York by reason of her active work in charity, being a member of many organizations devoted to the sick and suffering. She was born sixty-four years ago in New Hope, Penn., and was the daughter of the late Josiah Dow Chase and Mary D. Chase, natives of Ware, N. H. For the last thirty-five years Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany had lived at Fox Hurst, the old Fox and Tiffany homestead in Westchester Avenue, in the Bronx. About six months ago they removed to Portchester.

Mrs. Tiffany had been for several years President of the Peabody Home for Aged and Indigent Women in West Farms. She was also President of the Ladies' Christian Union of New York, and Treasurer and an active member of the Ladies' Board of the Home for Incurables at Fordham. She leaves three children, Mrs. Frederick R. Lord, Mrs. John Morris Butler, Jr., of Westchester, and George Fox Tiffany. Henry Dyer Tiffany is engaged in managing the Fox estate.

Admiral Dot's Large Mother Dead.

WHITE PLAINS, March 14.—Mrs. Caroline Kahn, mother of Admiral Dot, the dwarf, died to-day at the hotel kept by her son, 15 Orawaupum Street. Mrs. Kahn was 74 years old. She was a native of Germany and came to this country in her youth. Her husband died some years ago. Besides the "Admiral," another son lives in Chicago. Admiral Dot is about 53 years old.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Amos L. See.

Amos L. See, 69 years old, died on Tuesday of apoplexy at his home, 367 Bleecker Street, and will be buried to-morrow morning in the Sleepy Hollow Cemetery at Tarrytown. Funeral services will be held in the Jane Street Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he was chorister for forty years. Two sons, Edgar G. and W. G. See, and one daughter, Mrs. Lillian L. Herbst, survive him.

Mr. See was born in Westchester County. His family moved into the old Greenwich Village fifty years ago, and Mr. See spent all the rest of his life there. He retired from the hardware manufacturing business three years ago. He was an enthusiastic fisherman, and he spent the last three years of his life fishing a little and talking and reading about it more.

Mr. See was the Captain of Company H, Seventy-first Regiment, through the civil war. His two sons were with the Seventy-first in Cuba in the Spanish war. Descended from a long line of Masons, Mr. See attained the thirty-second degree. Among the Mystic Shriners his number was 108.

Mrs. Henry Sandham Dead.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 14.—The wife of Henry Sandham, the well-known Canadian artist, who lived for many years in Boston, died in London to-day. She was formerly Miss Agnes Fraser of Scotland.

Obituary Notes.

ALMON W. BEARDSLEY of this city died suddenly yesterday afternoon of heart trouble at Rock City Falls, near Ballston, N. Y. He was 53 years old.

Judge JULIUS B. BISSELL, former Judge of the Colorado Court of Appeals, died on Tuesday of apoplexy at his home in Denver. He was 60 years old, and was born in New York State and went to Colorado in 1879.

M. C. WALLACE, State Organizer of the American Federation of Labor in South Carolina, died in Columbia, S. C., yesterday of pneumonia. He was well known as a labor leader, being at one time President of the State Federation.

Dr. JOHN J. ANDERSON, author of Anderson's school histories and of other school books, died at his home, 348 Adelphi Street, Brooklyn, on Tuesday. He was 85 years old. Until eleven years ago, when he was stricken with blindness, Dr. Anderson did literary work. He leaves four children. His wife died last June.

CHESTER DAVIS BURROWS died at his home, 134 McDonough Street, Brooklyn, while eating luncheon on Tuesday. He recently had suffered an attack of pneumonia, but he was recovering rapidly. He leaves two sons, Stephen B. and Chandler, and one daughter, Mrs. W. W. Treeman.

SAMUEL T. HARRIS, Chief of Police of Swampscott, Mass., died suddenly of heart trouble yesterday. He was 40 years of age. Chief Harris was in the midst of an investigation into the mysterious death of Mrs. Jenne P. Chase. A will made by her disposing of her estate valued at $1,500,000 had been set aside.

WILLIAM H. CAMPBELL, an inventor, died of heart disease last Tuesday morning at his home, 642 East Twenty-first Street, Flatbush. He was 60 years old. A widow, who was Eleanor Betts of Norwalk, Conn., and two little children survive him. Mr. Campbell served twelve years in the United States Navy, afterward establishing a large business through his inventions. He originated the duplex system of manufacturing railway tickets.

AUGUSTUS FLOYD IRELAND, the fifth son of John B. Ireland, the former builder, died in the Presbyterian Hospital yesterday after the third operation for appendicitis performed within ten days. He was 32 years old, unmarried, and a member of the real estate firm of Kneeland, Ireland & Co. He attended Yale in the class of 1896, but did not graduate. On his father's side he was a great-great-grandson of William Floyd, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and on his mother's side a great-great-grandson of Judge James Duane, first Mayor of New York.

TIMOTHY J. KIELY died on Tuesday at his home, 331 East 116th Street. He was a member of the Tammany Hall General Committee for both the Thirty-second and Thirty-third Assembly Districts. He had been connected for years with the Controller's Office, and at the time of his death was chief examiner in the Audit Department. He was a member of the Miami and Pocasset Clubs, the Knights of Columbus, and ex-President of the Old Harlem Catholic Club. He was 84 years old, and leaves a widow. The funeral services will be held at St. Cecilia's Church in East 106th Street to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Lower—Call Money Rates 4@6 Per Cent.

Rise in Money Leads to Loss of Morning Gains—Trading Light.

On a sharply diminished volume of transactions, prices rose steadily through four or five hours of yesterday's stock market session, only to fall in the final hour with such abruptness as to cancel earlier gains and substitute for them substantial losses. There was nothing in the news developments of the day to explain the strength of stocks, whose fluctuations were due in large measure to the professional traders; indeed, such matters as came to light were hardly of a favorable nature, comprising, as they did, an announcement from Albany of an investigation of certain financial transactions of the Metropolitan Street Railway, a further hardening in the rates of foreign exchange driving quotations away from the gold import point again, renewed weakness in the Chicago Union Traction shares and continued uncertainty on foreign markets over the negotiations at Algeciras. For the turn in the last hour of trading, however, a sharp and unexpected advance in the rates asked for call money was unquestionably responsible. The maximum figure of 6 per cent., touched shortly before the close, was due chiefly to two causes, one of these lying in the heavy direct shipments of funds to Boston, running, it is understood, to at least $2,000,000, and to preparations for such dividend disbursements as must be made to-day, including the Standard Oil dividend, which calls for some $15,000,000. The 6 per cent. bid attracted to the call money market a fairly large supply of funds, and at the close the rate had again fallen to 4 per cent., although by this time, of course, the demand was rather fully satisfied. The market closed with prices at practically the lowest point of the day.

The sharp contraction in the supply of funds yesterday, as a result of the out-of-town and dividend demands, attracted attention forcibly to the position in which the money market still rests. While the deposits of Government moneys under Secretary Shaw's plan have been a source of relief, the additional succor which it was believed last week was to come from abroad, as a result of what then appeared to be a virtual agreement upon Moroccan matters, has been only partially realized, owing to a change in the trend of the negotiations at Algeciras. Upon the main contention Germany and France seem to have reached a practical conclusion, but the diplomatic bickerings over a detail which other representatives at the conference consider minor discloses a state of feeling on the part of the principal negotiators which is finding reflection in European markets and in the unwillingness of London to freely part with gold. It is not at all probable that this situation will continue for more than a few days, but in the meantime our own market is deprived of the influence which would spring from knowledge of a probability of liberal importations of gold.

WANTS SURPLUS DIVIDED.

Jefferson M. Levy May Sue the Union Pacific Railroad.

Jefferson M. Levy, it was reported yesterday, has determined to take legal action to compel the Union Pacific Railroad Company to distribute to its stockholders the surplus which has accumulated in the company's treasury as a result of its profitable investement in the stock of the Northern Pacific Railway Company. Mr. Levy is now in Europe. At his offices, his brother Napoleon said yesterday that he knew that his brother was of the opinion that the Union Pacific should distribute its surplus to the stockholders, but that he had received no advices from Jefferson Levy to the effect that he had decided to take any legal action to enforce his opinion.

Before leaving for Europe, Mr. Levy expressed to his friends the belief that the Union Pacific ought not be allowed to hold permanently a larger surplus than that necessary to guard against contingencies, and that such a reasonable reserve, in his opinion, is exceeded several times over by the vast sums which have been accumulated by the Union Pacific, partly out of earnings and partly as a result of profitable investments.

TIDE WATER PLANT PLANS.

E. R. Chapman & Co. Are Said to be Prospective Purchasers.

The prospective purchaser of the Tide Water Steel Company, the sale of whose property stockholders have been asked to ratify, is said to be the firm of E. R. Chapman & Co. Mr. Chapman said yesterday that the story had come out prematurely, but he did not deny his firm's interest in the project.

Chapman & Co. own iron lands in Virginia from which materials can be cheaply transported by water to the Tide Water Company's plant at Chester, Penn. It is said that the Chapman interests have made a deal by which the Newport News Shipbuilding Company will take the greater part of the plant's output, and are thus able to transport cheaply both raw material and product.

Heavy freight charges on coal, ore, and product have been the chief factors in the failure of a number of independent plants on the seaboard, and steel men said yesterday the Chapman plan was a practicable one for putting the old Tide Water plant on a profitable basis.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call on Stock Exchange collateral loaned at 4@6 per cent., with the last loan at 5 per cent. Most of the day's business was done at 4½ per cent.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 14.—Money was in fair demand in the market to-day and discounts were firm. Gold cheapened with the cessation of the American demand. Silver advanced on the Indian demand and bear covering.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was lifeless, owing to lack of public support. The stringency of money was a barrier to investment purchases. Consols were a fraction easier.

Americans opened firm. Louisville & Nashville and Union Pacific were the features. The dealings were meagre. Other American securities were fairly steady. Prices rallied slightly during the last hour, but the market closed dull.

Foreigners were supported. Japanese were dull.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 104⅛.

Bar silver closed firm at 29 9-16d per ounce.

Gold premiums were quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.72; Lisbon, 4.50.

Bar gold, 77s 9¾d. American eagles, 76s 4¾d.

India Council bills were allotted to-day at 1s 4d.

Bullion amounting to £8,000 was taken into the Bank of England on balance to-day.

RUSSIA'S FINANCIAL STRUCTURE TOPPLING

Huge Foreign Loan Needed for Its Preservation.

BUREAUCRACY SAVED BY IT

System Has Been a Rock of Offense to the Economist, but a Monument to Witte's Inventiveness.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Correspondence.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 20.—The Russian Government's opponents at hime and abroad have, with consistent unanimity, singled out its financial system as the special object of their attacks. This system is so indissolubly a part and parcel of the bureaucratic régime that to discredit the one would, they imagined, be infallibly to destroy the other. Eminent economists in this country and abroad have demonstrated to their own satisfaction the rottenness both of the bureaucracy and its financial methods; the Russian revolutionaries went further; they initiated the great political strike in October last just as a syndicate of foreign bankers was about to sign the contract for a huge loan—surely this was more than a coincidence—and in the manifesto which preceded the Moscow uprising of December they openly declared war against the finances of the Government.

The rigor with which all who were responsible for the promulgation of this manifesto have been treated, and the deep resentment felt in bureaucratic circles against criticism of Russia's finances—especially against the articles contributed last year by Mr. Lucien Wolf to The Times—are sufficient evidence in themselves that the attacks had been aimed at a vital spot. Russian writers, who will be quoted in a future letter, have, however, indorsed the worst criticisms published abroad.

The supporters of the present system will be vainly sought outside the ranks of the bureaucracy. Their reply to all criticism is a contemptuous invocation of what they regard as a convincing argument, viz., that if the aspersions against Russia's finances had been well founded, then Russia should by this time be in the position of a defaulter, whereas, instead of experiencing bankruptcy, she has successfully weathered a costly war, and the storm and stress of revolution. There is no gainsaying the fact; it remains to be seen how far it is possible to accept the inference.

Advocates of the autocratic form of government argue that their system is an ideally perfect one, and that all democratic systems are replete with imperfections; if the mechanism of government could be conducted with the precision of clockwork there is no doubt that the argument would be perfectly convincing, but the introduction of the human element at once upsets the whole nicely balanced assemblage of cogwheels implied by the autocratic doctrine.

The Russian bureaucracy has for 200 years ignored the human element in its ideal scheme of government, and bureaucratic financiers have displayed the same lack of comprehensiveness in their building up of a mechanism of financial administration. They also have aimed at an ideal system without regard for the human element; they proudly boast of having evolved a marvelous, unprecedented wealth-dispensing mechanism, yet under it the people have been steadily, remorselessly reduced to chronic starvation.

It is not proposed here to give judgment on the Russian financial situation, but merely to summarize the arguments for and against, as a simple preface to reviewing its present aspects and future potentialities. What, to begin with, are the distinguishing traits of the Russian system? In other countries the material welfare of the people is a condition precedent to the existence of a sound financial administration; in Russia it was hoped to reverse the case, and by strengthening and perfecting the latter to obtain the former. In other countries the first care of Government is to promote education, to stimulate personal initiative, to encourage enterprise, in a word, to remove all obstacles to the natural, healthy development of the body corporate; in Russia these essential factors of national progress and welfare have been persistently ignored. Under the autocratic form of Government and its attendant exercise of power through the machine-like medium of the bureaucracy no other policy was to be expected. The bureaucracy was, of course, desirous of ruling over a prosperous, contented people, but naturally shrank from civilizing methods which would have led to the transfer of power to the masses. It is no fault of the bureaucrats if the nation is, after all, to have a share in the Government.

The motives enumerated above presided at the evolution of a special doctrine of economics based on the topsyturvydom which has hitherto characterized the whole Russian system of government. The special methods evolved by the bureaucracy to develop the national welfare without incurring any risk of the transfer of power to the people afforded brilliant scope for the inventiveness of M. Witte.

In order to understand the object of the great financial reforms of the past decade—viz., the introduction of a gold currency and the establishment of a State brandy monopoly, it must be borne in mind that the great object aimed at was to enable the Government to concentrate in its hands the financial as well as the administrative power of the country, and thereby become the sole dispenser of material and political largess, with the Imperial State Bank in the rôle of a special providence to trade and industry. But nothing could be done without money—a great deal of money. The country was poor; its enormous natural resources were undeveloped. There was no alternative to borrowing abroad, and Russia, with her possibilities of grain production, and the resultant favorable trade balances, was in a peculiarly advantageous position for borrowing huge sums in the foreign markets, the excess of exports over imports paying the interest on such loans.

But the foreign capitalist had naturally little confidence in a country with a perpetually fluctuating rate of exchange which rendered trade hazardous. This, coupled with the enormous difficulties of paying interest in gold abroad with a silver circulation at home, was the origin of the gold currency created in 1897. Every incentive was at the same time offered to the investment of foreign capital in industrial enterprises, and concurrently with these measures the Government stimulated railway construction in order to increase the existing facilities for exporting cereals and enlarging the favorable trade balances.

The latter object was also sought by the artificial stimulation of Russian industries by means of protective tariffs, which without any corresponding increase in the purchasing power of the people, led to a crisis in the iron trade, from which many foreign firms who had been rash enough to establish themselves here were not able to recover; it also compelled the Government to push further east in search of markets for Russian textiles, and undoubtedly contributed enormously to the development of the Far Eastern adventure which plunged Russia into a disastrous war.

The establishment of the brandy monopoly brought into the coffers of the State almost every spare kopeck possessed by the peasant. Thus at home and abroad the Russian Government was steadily, persistently draining gold into its treasury. So long as the foreign capitalist was willing to lend, and so long as the balance of trade in Russia's favor was sufficient to cover the interest, the elaborate mechanism remained intact, a wonder to the world and a rock of offense to the economist.

But the war came, and then the revolution. Splendid harvests—the wheat crop of 1904 is still half unexported—and the preference of the Chinese in Manchuria for paper or silver saved the gold in the vaults of the Imperial Bank while the war lasted; the revolution proved more trying, and had it not been stifled within two months there is little doubt that it would have hopelessly crippled the financial mechanism invented by M. Witte.

As it is, the machine cannot carry on to the end of the year without another huge foreign loan. But it has admirably fulfilled the most sanguine expectations of its originators. It is, indeed, difficult to imagine how the bureaucracy could have survived without its aid.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Industries in Good Shape—Republic Company Advances Wages.

The trade situation is thus summarized in The Iron Age:

"Statistically the pig iron industry remains in very good shape, with production slightly curtailed, and stocks apparently still declining. In February the furnaces of the steel companies did not produce as heavily as expected, making only 1,216,760 tons, while the merchant furnaces produced 677,272 tons. The production in February, a short month, was 1,894,032 tons, as compared with 2,068,893 tons in January, the record month.

"The uncertainties as to fuel supply are having a considerable effect on the pig iron markets. A strike in the anthracite regions does not usually seriously curtail the output of pig iron. The quantity of anthracite used is not in itself very large, and there is always the alternative of smelting with coke instead. Our records show that during the five months' anthracite strike of 1902 the production of pig iron in the Schuykill, Lehigh, Lebanon, and Susquehanna Valleys and in New Jersey suffered a monthly curtailment of roughly 20,000 tons, which would not very seriously disturb the industry.

"Current business in pig iron is limited to early requirements. There is considerable inquiry of this character, and there is a steady flow of moderate-sized orders, which are encouraged by the talk of possible strikes among the coal miners. Thus far few of the furnaces have shown any disposition to force matters, and in the few instances in which this has been done values have suffered."

The Republic Iron and Steel Company will advance puddlers from $5.75 to $6 per ton and finishers 2 per cent. This makes the highest rate for puddling since 1902. About 3,000 iron workers are affected by the advances.

The opinion in iron and steel circles is that there will be no changes in prices at the meetings of the various iron and steel associations this month. The conferences have resolved themselves into discussions, and no price changes have come out of the meetings for months.

LARGE GAIN IN EXPORTS.

February Total $74,651,807, a Big Increase Over a Year Ago.

Exports of domestic products from the United States in February amounted to $74,651,807, an increase of $23,531,104 over the exports in February, 1905. There were increases in all the principal items, the largest gains being in cotton and breadstuffs. In detail the figures for February compare as follows with those for the corresponding month last year:

	1906.	1905.
Breadstuffs	$19,456,204	$10,594,405
Cattle, hogs, and sheep	3,605,967	3,850,397
Provisions	17,094,539	12,585,561
Cotton	28,779,130	19,630,909
Mineral oils	5,715,777	4,459,431
Total	$74,651,807	$51,120,703

For the eight months ended with February the showing follows:

	1906.	1905.
Breadstuffs	$130,733,290	$63,057,408
Cattle, hogs, and sheep	26,082,193	26,918,117
Provisions	128,663,088	97,008,848
Cotton	307,105,540	276,953,918
Mineral oils	52,656,284	50,469,458
Total	$645,240,397	$514,467,749

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 14.—Prices of all the local traction stocks continued to fade away rapidly to-day as the result of the dissemination of the news that the ninety-nine-year claims of the corporations have been declared invalid by the Supreme Court. La Salle Street gossiped on the possible outcome of the tangle, and conjectured that it might suit the needs of the owners of West Chicago and North Chicago shares to insist that an assessment programme on the gift common shares of the Yerkes "gold brick" be carried into effect.

On the local Exchange business was confined to small amounts, and was in underlying stocks, no trades in Union Traction being made in the early session. North Chicago, which closed yesterday at 57, sold early at 25. West Chicago, which closed yesterday at 40, sold at 28. Chicago City Railway, which brought 200 to those who sold out to the syndicate and which closed yesterday at 170, fell 10 points. All the sales were on limited amounts of stock.

Late in the day West Chicago first mortgage bonds were sold at 80, compared with par on Monday.

Of other local stocks chief interest centred in Western Stone. A small pool, said to have accumulated about 1,000 shares of stock, is understood to be operating here for the purpose of reaping speculative profits from such good things as may develop at to-morrow's meeting of the Directors. The usual dividend of 1 per cent. should be declared, and it is possible an announcement of a sale of property to the Wabash and the retirement of a bond issue with the proceeds may be made. The stock to-day sold around 40.

2d Deputy Secretary of State.

The issue of Treasury stock at 35 cents per share being nearly subscribed, the price will be

ADVANCED TO
45 CENTS PER SHARE
WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21st.

The two veins recently discovered on our Sapper claim, composed of quartz and white talc, the identical Shoshone formation, indicate that equal development will make the shares of this Corporation worth many times par, as it has already done for the Montgomery-Shoshone. That this fact is thoroughly appreciated by the knowing ones on the ground, is shown by the large number of orders being received for the stock from Bullfrog and Rhyolite.

Immediate application is therefore advisable on the part of those who wish to secure this stock at 35 cents, as no more than the allotted amount will be sold at this price.

The right is reserved to reduce or return any subscription.

APPLICATIONS BY MAIL should be accompanied by check to the order of this Corporation, at the rate of 35 cents per share for the number desired. Minimum subscription accepted, 100 shares.

MARCH 1906

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A traders' market, which this seems to be, is full of petty and unworthy deceptions. It looks just strong enough to tempt the trader to buy, and then, if he buys, it flattens out under him in a most exasperating manner. Presently it looks just weak enough to be sold, and the seller's experience is precisely the reverse of the buyer's. Yesterday's market in the forenoon looked a good deal stronger than it was, especially in such stocks as Union Pacific and Amalgamated Copper, and doubtless in the afternoon, when it was declining slowly all around, it looked weaker than it really was. At intervals between these alternating aspects there was not enough doing to keep even the chronic sitters constant to their vigil.

⁂

When a market sags of its own weight, without any apparent cause, efforts to explain its behavior in some specific manner sometimes lead to curious results. Yesterday afternoon it was reported from the floor that the market was selling off on rumors of severe weather in the West. This, of course, was better than no reason at all. A more prosaic explanation would probably have been that traders who had bought stocks in the forenoon were trying to sell out on each other. A small flurry in call money may have made them a little more anxious to even up than they would otherwise have been. This incident occasioned some surprise, as there was certainly nothing in the current speculation to create any fresh demand for call funds. It was reported that several of the larger Stock Exchange houses were calling in a surplus of time money which they had been employing on call. The associations of one or two of these houses led some persons to suppose that they had been buying stocks for important banking interests and needed the money themselves.

⁂

It is understood that the House of Twelve Partners is rising bullish. Its advices lean that way.

⁂

One of the most prevalent reflections concerning the market is that the Steel stocks act badly. They do not recover with any vigor in a strong market and turn weak on the first sign of a reaction in the general list. Some very flattering estimates of the earnings for the quarter now ending have been offered, and it is predicted also that the unfilled orders on hand will favorably surprise the Street. The most sanguine estimate of the earnings is that they will exceed $35,000,000. It would be easier to believe these things if the Steel stocks were giving a better account of themselves in the market.

⁂

Fame and the gratitude of thousands of investors in this country await Mr. Carnegie or any one else who will endow a movement for the simplification of finance. The finances of many corporations have become so needlessly complicated that none but the insiders understand them, and it is doubtful in some cases whether even the insiders understand them perfectly.

⁂

In the Pennsylvania's pamphlet report there are recorded each year the operations of what has every superficial appearance of being a trading account. The record of its purchases and sales of securities is presented as a "Report of the Managers of the Pennsylvania Company Trust Fund." On Dec. 31, 1903, the trust contained securities of a par value of $12,536,120, which had cost $12,339,020.23. During the year 1904 the trust bought securities of a par value of $5,843,600, and paid for them $3,495,845.14; in the same year the "securities redeemed and sold" were of a par value of $2,988,000, and these had cost $2,725,777.64. Thus in the year 1904 the trust bought and sold securities of a par value of $8,831,600, which would be the equivalent of 88,316 shares of stock. The account appears to have been much more active in 1905. The record for that year shows purchases of securities of a par value of $9,215,380, costing $9,103,685, and the securities "redeemed and sold" during 1905 were of the par value of $10,622,850, and these had cost $8,323,939.62. Thus the purchases and sales for this account in 1905 combined amounted to $19,838,230 par value, or the equivalent of 198,382 shares of stock. On Dec. 31 last the trust held securities of a par value of $13,984,250, costing $13,888,833.77. According to an appended note these securities were bearing interest at an average rate of 4.43 per cent. on their cost. It will be noticed that the purchases ($9,215,380 par value) and sales ($10,622,850 par value) made for this account during 1905 greatly exceeded the amount of securities held at the close of either 1904 or 1905. The purchases and sales combined in 1905 amounted to $19,838,230 par value, whereas the trust had held on Dec. 31, 1904, securities of the par value of only $15,391,720, and at the close of 1905 it had on hand securities of the par value of $13,894,250.

⁂

There are perhaps only eight or ten men, possibly fewer, in all Wall Street who could say at precisely what point and under what conditions the Rockefeller people "quit" on Gould securities. Rumors of their having done so had been in circulation off and on for a year or more, but were so insistently denied that it was not until two or three months ago that those who are interested marketwise in Gould issues were finally confirmed in their suspicions. The break must have occurred some time subsequently to the last bull campaign in Missouri Pacific, which culminated in the Autumn of 1902, with the stock selling around 125. There has not been a real bull movement in Missouri Pacific since. Indeed, its backward behavior throughout the bull market of the last two years has greatly impaired its prestige both as a legitimate vehicle of speculation and as an investment security. The Gould "alliance" at 26 Broadway was much talked about four years ago. George Gould's friends asserted that the move on his part was a stroke of genius and marked him as a man of rare financial sagacity. All Gould securities were favorably influenced by the knowledge that the Rockefeller people had taken hold of them. The pleasant relations were evidently short lived. Soon after the Gould-Rockefeller interests, co-operating, had acquired control of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company rumors of friction arose, and it was in the Colorado Fuel and Iron situation afterward that evidences of a rupture were first brought to light. A very curious feature of the case is that in the last two years, with the Rockefeller party reducing its interest in Gould securities, especially Missouri Pacific, through the open market, brokers and others supposed to be acting for 26 Broadway have seemed to go out of their way to depress the market for those securities. This is not the way generally in which people go about selling what they do not want. When the Gould-Rockefeller alliance was formed the Goulds' Western Pacific project had not been heard of. That came later. It conflicts directly with the fortunes of the Union Pacific property, in which the Rockefeller contingent has a very great interest. Perhaps this is the explanation of the break. George Gould and E. H. Harriman are on terms of undisguised hostility.

⁂

Referring to what are known in the Wall Street vernacular as "rights," President Eliot of Harvard in the course of an address on "The Ethics of Corporate Management" said: "The common practice of declaring a dividend in stock, the shares being issued to actual stockholders at a price more or less below the market price, presents some interesting ethical aspects. In all kinds of corporations this practice tends to hide some of the real earnings of the corporation, which were, in fact, higher than the declared dividends would lead the public to suppose. When the dividend derived from these reserved profits is declared in the form of rights to subscribe to stock below the market price the stockholders of that moment receive an extra dividend, the memory of which is soon lost by the public, because it does not appear in any future tabulation of the regular dividends of the corporation. In the case of public service corporations the practice is objectionable, because nothing of their transactions should be concealed. Being a long-delayed dividend, the stockholders who receive it will probably be in some measure different persons from the earlier stockholders at whose cost the accumulation was made. For this reason, among others, reserving profits is something less than just, unless the profits so reserved are put into the wasting plant as replacements or improvements."

⁂

A very prominent banker's nice distinction between "guaranteeing" and "assuring" caused the failure a few weeks ago of an important financial transaction, in the accomplishment of which Wall Street would have felt much relief. It seems that the business had been brought practically to completion by parties acting under the impression that the banker's firm was to guarantee the undertaking. When the final steps were to be taken to close the deal the banker announced that he stood ready to give his "personal assurance" that the matter would be carried out as planned, but that he would not give his "guarantee" nor that of his firm. While the difference may appear more or less trivial, it was enough to cause the deal to halt. Doubtless the banker was displeased at the implication that his assurance was not as good as his contract, but, be that as it may, the other parties to the proposed deal stood their ground, and the plan was finally abandoned because the banker insisted upon his distinction.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Lackawanna Steel Company's stockholders have re-elected these Directors for four years: Moses Taylor, James Speyer, C. Ledyard Blair, Warren Delano, Jr., Henry Waters, J. G. McCullough, and J. J. Albright of Buffalo.

The United States Smelting & Refining Company has declared an initial dividend of 87½ cents a share on the preferred stock, payable April 16.

The March number of No. 8, the monthly magazine of the City Bank Club, contains authoritative articles on technical subjects.

Benjamin Nicholls has been elected a Director of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway, to succeed Gen. Louis Fitzgerald.

The special committee on currency reform appointed by the Chamber of Commerce met yesterday but took no definite action. Another meeting of the committee will be held to-morrow, when its plans will be more fully considered.

The consolidation of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company with the Chicago & Alton Railway Company having become effective yesterday, books are now open for the exchange of stock certificates of the companies named for the certificates of stock of the consolidated company, at the office of the Chicago & Alton Railroad Company, No. 120 Broadway. Temporary stock certificates will be issued at the rates fixed in the consolidation plan.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE—Wednesday, March 14, 1906.

COTTON EXCHANGE WINS.

Quotations May Be Delivered to Only Those Sanctioned by It.

MEMPHIS, March 14.—Judge McCall of the United States Circuit Court to-day issued an order restraining two Memphis brokerage firms from receiving the quotations of the New York Cotton Exchange.

The decision upholds the New York Cotton Exchange's contention that the telegraph companies shall deliver quotations only to those subscribers sanctioned by the Exchange.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 14.—Trading continued dull and professional, but was made interesting at times by the persistent buying of Cambria Steel and Lehigh Valley. The latter advanced over a point, but no satisfactory reason was assigned for the movement. The buying of Cambria Steel, on the other hand, was for an important group of New York Steel interests—the same which have been acquiring the stock for several months, and who are paying for it, and taking it out of the market.

A block of Eastern Consolidated Electric was taken at an advance of a point. International Smokeless Powder declined one point on the probability of the Government's establishing its own powder plant. Prices elsewhere were about steady.

AMERICAN TOBACCO'S REPORT

Earnings for 1905 Show Substantial Increase Over 1904.

The report of the American Tobacco Company for 1905, submitted to the stockholders at the annual meeting yesterday, showed that the net earnings of the company for the year amounted to $25,212,285, an increase of $2,907,589 over 1904. Fixed charges and dividends on underlying securities amounted to $11,007,734, leaving a net balance of earnings for the year amounting to $14,204,551, compared with $12,233,131 in 1904.

Out of this amount $8,048,480 was distributed in dividends on the stocks of the American Tobacco Company. Partly out of this year's surplus and partly out of previous surplus $9,988,990 was expended for the purchase of $15,200,000 par value of the 4 per cent. collateral trust bonds of the American Tobacco Company. The surplus on Dec. 31 last amounted to $25,685,961, compared with a final surplus the year before of $29,518,880.

The 7 per cent. gold bonds of the Continental Tobacco Company, amounting to $1,581,100, it is stated in the report, were paid off in cash at their maturity in April last. During the year the Morton Trust Company as Trustee purchased and canceled $440,250 par value of the 6 per cent. bonds of the American Tobacco Company at a cost of $449,994. Payment for these bonds was made out of the sum of $500,000 in cash deposited with the Morton Trust Company by the American Tobacco Company under the terms of the trust indenture covering the bond issue.

The balance sheet of the company as of Dec. 31 last shows a decrease of $14,603,087 in real estate, machinery, patents, &c., a decrease of $15,937,386 in bills and accounts receivable, and increases of $9,259,443 in stocks of other companies owned, and of $3,410,888 in leaf tobacco and manufactured stock. The total net decrease in assets was $19,259,055. The chief items among liabilities offsetting this decrease in assets are decreases of $15,200,000 in 4 per cent. bonds outstanding and of $3,882,919 in surplus. The retiring Board of Directors was re-elected.

WALSH DEAL STILL ON.

Negotiations for Purchase of Roads Said to be Only Begun.

The deal for the sale of the Walsh railroads to the Pennsylvania, New York Central, and Rock Island systems was still under way in this city yesterday, notwithstanding reports from Chicago that it was practically closed. A representative of one of the railroads interested in the negotiations said that the matter was in its preliminary stages, and that there was no telling when any definite step would be taken.

The Chicago Clearing House Committee, which took over the management of the Walsh assets, are endeavoring to effect a sale of the Walsh roads, but so far no definite conclusion has been reached. It has been reported several times from Chicago recently that the deal had already been closed or was about to be closed, but representatives of the roads which are expected to make the purchase have on each occasion denied that the matter had in any sense been settled.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 14.—The local money market is unchanged. Call loans 5½@6 per cent.; time loans, collateral 5½ per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 5@5½ per cent.; clearing house loans 5@6 per cent., New York funds 10@12½c. discount. Clearings, $26,273,697; balances, $1,608,117. Sub-Treasury debit $305,695.

The mining shares were well represented in to-day's trading. Under the lead of Amalgamated the coppers were generally strong in the early part of the session, but realizing orders soon came in, causing a reaction. A continuation of yesterday's pressure was seen in Boston Consolidated losing over three points from the opening figure. United States Smelting issues were strong and well bought, the common advancing to 57 and the preferred to 45¼.

There was some profit taking in evidence in American Pneumatic, the common losing 1½ and the preferred ⅛ point. Closing weak and irregular.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

SUPREME COURT—First Judicial District.—In the matter of the application and petition of George B. McClellan, Herman A. Metz, Alexander E. Orr, Charles Stuart Smith, Morris K. Jesup, John H. Starin, Woodbury Langdon, and John Claflin, constituting the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners of The City of New York, for and on behalf of said city, for the appointment of Commissioners of Appraisal, under Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891 and the various statutes amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, relative to acquiring the perpetual easements necessary for the construction, maintenance, and operation of an elevated railroad in Westchester Avenue, from Third Avenue to the Southern Boulevard, thence along the Southern Boulevard to the Boston Road, thence along the Boston Road to One Hundred and Eighty-first Street, in the Borough of The Bronx, wherever said easements have not been already acquired by purchase or otherwise.

Notice is hereby given that an application will be made at a Special Term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to be held at Part III. at the County Court House in the Borough of Manhattan, in The City of New York, on the 29th day of March, 1906, at the opening of the court on that day, for the appointment of three disinterested persons, being citizens of the United States and residents of the City of New York, to ascertain and appraise the compensation to be made to the owners and all persons interested in the real property, rights, franchises, easements, or privileges sought to be taken, affected, or extinguished for the construction, maintenance, and operation of an elevated railroad in Westchester Avenue, from Third Avenue to the Southern Boulevard; thence along the Southern Boulevard to Boston Road, thence along Boston Road to 181st Street, in the Borough of The Bronx, wherever the same have not been acquired by The City of New York by purchase or otherwise.

The real estate sought to be affected is located in the Borough of The Bronx, in The City of New York, abutting on Westchester Avenue, Southern Boulevard, and Boston Road, as above described, and the property is laid out and indicated on three similar or triplicate maps, one of which was filed in the office of the Board of Public Improvements on the 27th day of July, 1900, and another in the office of the Register of the County of New York on the 27th day of July, 1900, and one in the office of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners on the 27th day of July, 1900, each bearing the following certificate:

"Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners of The City of New York.

"Map, survey, and plan of lands and property necessary to be acquired or to which there may be appurtenant rights, terms, franchises, easements, or privileges necessary to be acquired or extinguished by The City of New York for the construction and operation of the Rapid Transit Railroad described in the routes and general plan thereof adopted by the said Board on the 14th day of January and the 4th day of February, 1897.

"Memorandum.

"There are to be acquired in relation to each and every parcel of property shown upon the sheets of this map, survey and plan, abutting upon Westchester Avenue, the Southern Boulevard, and Boston Road, and bounded in blue, the right, franchise, and easement to construct and operate the said Rapid Transit Railroad.

"Adopted and approved by the said Board the 21st day of June, 1900."

Dated February 10th, 1906.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Sluggish Day's Trading on the Curb.

Coppers Feel the Dullness—United Copper Drops Again and Boston Copper Continues Losing.

Trading was dull on the Curb yesterday except in a few specialties. Sales of the recognized Industrials, not including Bay State Gas, amounted only to 4,975 shares. Coppers, too, lost some of their recent activity. United Copper had its smallest day's trading in a long time, 11,300 shares, and lost 1¾ on the day. Boston Copper continued its decline, selling 8,500 shares 24⅝ down to 22¼.

Nevada Consolidated maintained its recent gains, selling 7,200 shares between 19⅝ and 18⅞.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 14.—As a result of the favorable report by the State Senate Committe on Corporations on the bill to amend the charter of the Maryland Electric Railway Company, the income bonds of the United Railways Company displayed unusual strength in the local market to-day. Opening at 74⅞, the bonds advanced ¼ before noon, and the morning sales alone totalled $73,000. One block of $30,000 changed hands at 75. The Baltimore Trust certificates were also in good demand, and sold up to 73½, an advance of ⅝.

Trading in the stock list was light, Atlantic Coast line of Connecticut dropped 5 points. The close was dull but firm. Sales, bonds, $119,000; shares, stock, 665.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT—Starting out under bear control and with bear news predominating, the wheat market was steadied up by a later scare of shorts, recovered its early loss, and at the close, while somewhat under the best point of the day, was nevertheless ⅛ to ¼c above the previous night. Early heaviness in the market had as a basis the continuation of snow in all parts of the Winter wheat belt, protecting it from the severe cold wave now threatening from the North. In addition to this factor, cables were disappointing, as Liverpool closed ⅜ to ½d lower, Paris was partly 25 points down, Berlin ¼ mark lower, and Budapest 2 points lower. Weakness in the Northwest markets was increased by the fact that receipts amounted to 384 cars, compared with 170 cars last year. The cash market was firm, with No. 2 red quoted at 84c, elevator, and 85⅝c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 89½c, free on board, afloat.

CORN—After showing moderate depression early in the day, corn recovered and was firm all the afternoon, closing ⅛c net higher. Its rally was due to very small estimates for Thursday at Chicago, the wheat up-turn, and activity among shorts. Western receipts footed up only 329,000 bushels, compared with 623,000 bushels last year. Seaboard clearances were 284,000 bushels, and the export business 9 loads, while Liverpool closed ⅜d net lower. No. 2 corn at New York closed at 50½c, elevator, and 47⅝c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 48¾c, and No. 2 yellow, 48⅝c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market showed weakness approaching the sensational at times in the day's session, and prices touched the lowest levels since the Government's estimate of the crop last December. The close was at a net decline of 9@18 points. Sales were estimated at 400,000 bales.

The opening was barely steady at a decline of 4@8 points. Inside of ten minutes after the opening the market showed a net loss of 20@22 points, with May selling at 10.30 and July at 10.45. These figures attracted enough covering of shorts to cause a partial recovery, but there was no sign of bull support, and after a rally of 6@7 points the market eased off again under reports of easier spot markets, continued liquidation, and a renewal of bear pressure. The break carried May to 10.27 and July to 10.39, but the large stop orders expected around 10.40 for July were not caught, and shorts turned for profits. During the balance of the session the undertone was steadier, and the close was several points up from the lowest, with the tone steady.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

BONDHUS & CO.—Judge Fitzgerald of the Supreme Court has appointed William J. Swaim receiver for Bondhus & Co., (corporation,) business agent and broker at 99 Nassau Street, on the application of the Alcolm Company, which obtained a judgment against the corporation on Jan. 5 for $404 in sequestration proceedings. The business was started on Jan. 1, 1903, by Samuel T. Bondhus and was incorporated on Feb. 11, 1904, under New York laws, with a capital stock of $5,000, which was increased to $40,000 on Nov. 16, 1905. Two other judgments were recently obtained against the corporation in favor of Marie E. Heckman for $1,129 and Bloomberg & Bloomberg for $499. A judgment for $11,553 was entered against Samuel T. Bondhus on Feb. 20 in favor of Emil Reach.

ABRAHAM H. FLEISCHER.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Abraham H. Fleischer, manufacturer of skirts, suits, and cloaks at 50 Fourth Avenue, by Wechsler & Myers, attorneys for Michael Lauman, a creditor, for $1,000. It was alleged on information and belief that Mr. Fleischer, while insolvent, transferred on March 8 real estate at 164 East 107th Street for $19,700, which was below the market price, and disposed of many other parcels of real estate; that on Jan. 25 he sold one lot of goods worth $10,000 for $4,500, and said as a reason for the sale that he wanted to realize as much cash as possible before July 1 next, and since Jan. 15 he has been selling off stock much below the market value, and has converted a large amount of merchandise into cash. An affidavit was presented with the petition, made by Max Meyer, who was manager for Mr. Fleischer. Meyer says that Mr. Fleischer has disposed of his life insurance policy for $2,400, has pawned all his jewelry, realizing $2,000 for it, and has sold two houses at 603 and 605 Sixth Street, receiving as part payment a third mortgage, which mortgage he disposed of. Mr. Fleischer has been in business since 1894, and on Dec. 22 last his statement showed assets $31,349 and liabilities $10,420. Last year, it is said, he lost considerable trade on account of yellow fever in the South.

NATHAN GOLDENBERG.—Nathan Goldenberg, dealer in 5 and 10 cent goods at First Avenue, corner of Thirteenth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $2,789 and assets $1,364, consisting of stock, $1,000; fixtures, $350; cash in bank, $2, and insurance, $12. He was formerly a salesman in a Newark store and began business here in December, 1904.

MARY K. PIDGEON.—Mary K. Pidgeon of Saugerties, N. Y., has filed a petition in bankruptcy here, with liabilities $58,410 and nominal assets $46,923, consisting of various parcels of real estate in Saugerties, Woodstock, Hunter, Jewett Centre, and Bethel, in the Catskills, $38,873, mortgaged for $29,073; machinery, $7,500; horses and wagons, $200; three cows, $60, and debts due, $100. Among the creditors are the First National Bank of Saugerties, $29,076, secured; Ulster County Savings Institution, $12,000, secured; Summit Bank of Summit, N. J., $4,500, and the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Baltimore, $5,000. She has a claim of $104,688 against the estate of Frank Pidgeon, contractor, of Saugerties, who filed a petition in bankruptcy here on Dec. 8 last.

CAROLINE W. WHITON.—Judge Hall of the United States District Court has dismissed a petition in bankruptcy filed against Caroline W. Whiton of 250 West Eighty-eighth Street on Sept. 9, 1903, by the Sprague National Bank of Brooklyn and others. It was stated that no property had come into the hands of the receiver, and creditors were unwilling to go to the expense of bringing an action to set aside transfers of real estate which she made some time prior to the filing of the petition.

EMIL GOLDMARK, Referee.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, COUNTY OF New York.—JAMES P. WOODRUFF, plaintiff, against SIGFRIED WITTNER and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale, duly made and entered in the above-entitled action and bearing date the first day of March, 1906, I, the undersigned, the referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction, at the New York Real Estate Salesrooms, Nos. 14-16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 27th day of March, 1906, at 12 o'clock noon on that day, by Joseph P. Day, auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All those lots of land, situate in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, which, taken together, are bounded and described as follows:

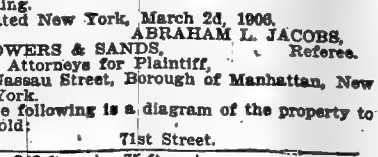
Beginning at a point on the southerly side of Seventy-first Street, distant two hundred and forty-eight feet easterly from the southeasterly corner of Seventy-first Street and Avenue A; running thence southerly and parallel with Avenue A, one hundred (100) feet four (4) inches to the middle line of the block between Seventieth and Seventy-first Streets, and thence easterly, along said middle line of the block, seventy-five (75) feet; thence northerly, and again parallel with Avenue A, one hundred (100) feet and four (4) inches to the southerly side of Seventy-first Street, and thence westerly, along the southerly side of Seventy-first Street, seventy-five (75) feet to the place of beginning.

Dated New York, March 2d, 1906.

ABRAHAM L. JACOBS, Referee.

BOWERS & SANDS,
Attorneys for Plaintiff,
31 Nassau Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York.

The following is a diagram of the property to be sold:



The approximate amount of the lien or charge, to satisfy which the above-described property is to be sold, is $2,080.00, with interest thereon from the 1st day of March, 1906, together with costs and allowance amounting to $237.75, together with the expenses of the sale. The approximate amount of the taxes, assessments, and water rates, or other liens to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the referee, is $119.24 and interest. Said premises are sold subject to a prior mortgage of $11,000, with interest thereon at 5% per annum from June 1st, 1905, the principal of which is now past due.

Dated New York, March 2d, 1906.

ABRAHAM L. JACOBS, Referee.

MARCH 1906

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Deal for Upper Fifth Avenue Block Front—Harlem River Waterfront Sold—Day's Business Among the Brokers and at Auction.

Leopold Weil has bought for a client the block front on Fifth Avenue, between 106th and 107th Streets, 200.11 by 100. The northerly half of the plot was bought from the Lawyers Title Insurance and Trust Company, which took it recently under foreclosure. The 106th Street corner, 100 by 100.11, was sold to Mr. Weil by William and Julius Bachrach, who had just bought it from Joseph Wittner, through Brokers Kuppenstein & Lowenfeld. The entire block front was owned at one time by the late William R. Travers.

Sale on Columbus Avenue.

Samuel H. Martin and James J. Etchingham have sold for Jacob Michaels 148 Columbus Avenue, a five-story brownstone flat, with stores, on lot 25 by 100, between Sixty-sixth and Sixty-seventh Streets.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

In a decision by Judge Somerville, the Board of United States General Appraisers denied yesterday a claim filed by C. H. Ritter & Co. of Detroit, which involved the intrepretation to be given the treaty signed between the United States and Great Britain, July 3, 1815. The merchandise concerned was Scotch whisky, which was assessed for duty at $2.25 per gallon. It was maintained, however, by the importers that the importations were entitled to a reduction of duty at the rate of $1.75 per gallon, under what is commonly known as the favored nation clause of the treaty.

The Board sustained a claim made by the Carbolineum Wood Preserving Co. of Portland Ore., it being held that the Customs officers erred in assessing duty on tar oil which never reached the country. There were several hundred barrels in the importation, some of which were empty. The Collector made no allowance for the empty barrels, and demanded duty at the same rate as on the full barrels.

Protests overruled were filed by the American Express Company, D. S. Whitehead, William Schroeder & Co., Max Bouchsein, Frame & Co., Anton Wedl, Dearbergh Brothers, Veit, Son & Co., James G. Johnson & Co., New York; B. J. Ferguson, Hartford, Conn.; G. W. Sheldon & Co., and the American Express Company, Chicago.

A claim by A. & H. Veith of New York was partially sustained.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, SOUTHern District of New York.—In the matter of the petition of WILLIAM SMITH et al. to have RAFAELLE SENNELLI, otherwise known as Frank Sennelli, and also Raffaele Sanelli, adjudged an involuntary bankrupt.

It appearing to the satisfaction of this court, by the petition of William Lesser, verified the 9th day of March, 1906, that a petition has been filed in this court praying that the above-named Rafaelle Sennelli, otherwise known as Frank Sennelli, and also Raffaele Sanelli, may be declared a bankrupt in involuntary proceedings; that a subpoena therein was issued out of this court to the said alleged bankrupt, returnable on the 21st day of February, 1906; that service thereof and of the petition could not be made by the Marshal of this court, as shown by the return of said Marshal, dated the 14th day of February, 1906, stating that said debtor could not be found, and which is now on file in this court, and it further appearing from the said petition that no appearance has been filed since said return day, and that the present whereabouts of the debtor is unknown and cannot be ascertained, and that service of the subpoena and petition herein cannot be made upon him within this district,

Now on motion of Lesser Brothers, attorneys for the petitioning creditors herein, it is Ordered that the said Rafaelle Sennelli, otherwise known as Frank Sennelli, and also Raffaele Sanelli, appear, plead, answer or demur on or before the 3d day of April, 1906, to the petition filed herein in the office of the Clerk of this Court on the 14th day of February, 1906, praying that the said party may be declared an involuntary bankrupt, and that in case of his failure to appear, plead, answer or demur, adjudication be made according to the prayer of the petition. And it is further Ordered that service of the order be made by publishing this order in The New York Times, a newspaper published at the City of New York, in said district, once a week for two consecutive weeks, the first of such publications to be made on or before the 16th day of March, 1906, and by mailing a copy of this order and said petition and subpoena to the last known place of abode of the said Rafaelle Sennelli, otherwise known as Frank Sennelli, and also Raffaele Sanelli, in said district, on or before the day of the first publication.

Witness the Honorable George C. Holt, Judge of the said court, and the seal thereof, at the City of New York, in said district, on the 13th day of March, 1906.

LAWYER BROWNE DENIES SIGNING "CLARK" DEED

Down as Witness on Another Deed He Didn't Know About.

HE HELPED JUDGE BOLTE OUT

Lawyer, Accused of Forgery, Put the Peterson Property in Bolte's Name as a Favor.

Lawyer H. Huffman Browne went on the stand yesterday to refute a charge of forgery on which he is being tried before Judge Foster in General Sessions. In the course of a sharp cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Train he was made to tell about a peculiar series of operations by which he is alleged to have come into fraudulent possession of the large estate at Inwood and Mount Hope, left by Ebbe Peterson, a Norwegian immigrant, and his wife, Mary E. Peterson, both of whom were lost at sea with their only child in 1880.

Mr. Train traced the transfer of the property from one hand to another, showing how since 1892 it had been deeded away a dozen times. Browne admitted that each new titular owner held the property in trust for him. Asked how he dared to let them get possession of it, he replied that he always protected himself by making them sign a blank deed. He could not tell the business or residence of a single one of those persons yesterday.

The first appearance of Browne in connection with the estate was when he filed a petition for "Charles A. Clark" as heir to it in 1892. Mr. Train asked how the witness had come across "Clark," of whom he seemed to know nothing more than that he was "a Boston man." Browne told a long story about having found "Clark" by advertising. Browne admitted that no court order was ever issued recognizing "Clark" as heir or declaring him owner of the estate. Nevertheless Clark had signed away the estate to a man named Kellly. Mr. Train asked the witness sharply if he had not himself signed the name "Clark" to the original petition. Browne denied this, and Mr. Train had the signature on the petition entered for identification.

Browne said that his transactions with "Clark" ceased when a man named O'Rourke turned up with a deed signed by Mrs. Peterson, conveying the entire estate to O'Rourke. He said he had never known of the deed until O'Rourke brought it to him.

"How is it, then," said Mr. Train, "that Mrs. Peterson signed it in your presence as witness?"

Before Browne could answer court was adjourned for the day.

Ex-Justice Herman Bolte, who once appeared as owner of part of the property, was put on the stand yesterday. He remembered nothing at all about the events that connected his name with the property. He was certain that he had paid nothing for it to Browne. Browne testified that he put the property in Bolte's name primarily "because he told me he would stand better in the eyes of the public if he had some real estate, as he was being raked over the coals badly then."

Steamboats as Far as Troy To-day.

The freight and passenger season on the Hudson River as far as Troy is to be reopened to-day. Navigation has been suspended since last Fall. The Citizens' Steamboat Company will operate two steamers, the Saratoga and City of Troy, of the Troy Line, owned by the company. They will leave Pier 46 North River, foot of West Tenth Street, daily, running as far as Troy. On Saturday and Sunday they will stop at Albany. The steamers will make direct connections at Troy with the Delaware & Hudson, Boston & Maine, and Rutland Railroads.

Police Sure De Lange Killed Himself.

Samuel Kerman, the seventeen-year-old newsboy who was one of the visitors of Louis de Lange, the playwright, just before his death, was put through a rigid examination by the police yesterday. The result convinced them that de Lange committed suicide, and that the boy was not accountable for the playwright's death.

METZ SPEAKS OF GRAFTERS.

Also of Fakirs—He Dislikes Both, Even When from Brooklyn.

Controller Metz in another statement issued yesterday added fuel to the fire of his dispute with Borough President Coler's Commissioner of Public Works in Brooklyn.

"Next to a grafter I hate a fakir," was the choicest bit thrown out by the Controller, "and I think it is about time somebody shows the real motives of some of our reformers."

The Controller's statement was issued when he was asked what he thought of Commissioner Dunne's criticism of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system as a stock "bearing" scheme.

"Nothing that a professional reformer does ever surprises me," said Mr. Metz. "I don't know that any of them are interested in stocks, but I do know that some of them go into Wall Street with great regularity. I hate a grafter and I hate a fakir, and whenever I see the head of one or the other I hit it, even if it is a Brooklynite."

In his statement Mr. Metz went over the same ground he covered the day before in regard to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit advertising. Then he said:

"I am not looking for controversies with Mr. Coler or Mr. Dunne or any one, and am kept busy enough attending to the work of this office, but whenever they think I have been hypnotized or am too young for this job I'll try to find time to enlighten them to the contrary, and to assure them that I intend to run this office without any 'butting in' from any outsider. They have had two guesses now and they guessed wrong each time."

NO MANN HEARING.

The Colonel Marches Up, Then Down Again—Justice McAvoy Angry.

Col. William d'Alton Mann of Town Topics, accompanied by his legal advisers, Martin W. Littleton and James L. Craig, and his son-in-law, Albert A. Wray, appeared yesterday afternoon in the Criminal Courts Building. The party went to the room on the top floor where Justice McAvoy for three weeks heard evidence in the perjury charge made against Col. Mann by Robert J. Collier. On this charge Col. Mann was indicted by the Grand Jury two days ago.

Col. Mann and his attorneys appeared yesterday as if the hearing had been going on still. The Colonel's counsel had asserted that the Grand Jury had no right to indict before the hearing before Justice McAvoy was over. It had been said in advance that Justice McAvoy actually intended to continue the hearing as if no indictment had been returned. But he failed to appear. Assistant District Attorney Hart, who is prosecuting Col. Mann, was not on hand, and not even a stenographer appeared. After waiting a full hour, Col. Mann and his party went away again.

Mr. Littleton said last night that Justice McAvoy had intended to be on hand, but had been unavoidably detained uptown. Justice McAvoy, who is now sitting in the Children's Court, was in Special Sessions early yesterday morning and spoke then in a somewhat bitter way of what he called "the discourteous treatment" he had suffered at the hands of the District Attorney. He said he might give out a statement later. Justice Olmsted gave up nearly a month's vacation that Justice McAvoy might hear the Mann case.

MUSICIAN A SUICIDE.

Joseph Altschul, Ill, Inhales Gas While Alone at Home.

Joseph Altschul, who once was leader of the Hoffman House orchestra, but had devoted the last few years to arranging a composing music, committed suicide late yesterday afternoon at his home, 64 East Eighty-sixth Street, by inhaling gas. He had been dead an hour when his body was discovered. He had been ill for some time, and, according to his relatives, frequently had threatened to take his life.

The musician's wife and sister, Sophia, who lived with him on the ground floor, were both out yesterday afternoon. When his niece, Fanny Guigold of 520 East Eighty-second Street, called at 6:15 o'clock she got no answer to the bell. Altschul's sister arrived in a few minutes and could not get in. Alexander Bernard, a tenant, summoned Policeman Kelleher of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station, who forced the window and found Altschul dead on a sofa. He had in his mouth the tube from a portable gas lamp. Dr. Barrett of the Presbyterian Hospital said Altschul had been dead an hour.

Mrs. Altschul arrived shortly after the body was found and fainted as she learned the news.

Altschul was a graduate of the Vienna Conservatory. He was 48 years old and was born in this country. With Ignace Jan Paderewski he was a pupil of Theodor Leschetizky.

Dr. Edward Spitzka and Dr. Hoffman had been treating him for several months for a nervous disorder.

APPROVES THE SAXE BILL.

A Good Step, Says McClellan—Wouldn't Have Amendments Delayed.

Mayor McClellan announced yesterday that he had approved the Saxe bill for the removal of the New York Central Railroad tracks from the surface of Eleventh Avenue. In returning the measure to the Legislature with his approval, the Mayor issued a statement of his reasons for the action.

"There is no question in my mind," said the Mayor, "that some legislation is desirable to terminate the use of the public streets by steam railroads operating at grade in Manhattan. While many of the provisions of the proposed bill are open to criticism, and while there are some doubts as to whether its enactment will accomplish the object which is sought, I consider that it is a step in the right direction and therefore have no hesitation in accepting it on behalf of the City of New York.

"It has been suggested that in case the bill proves to be defective in certain provisions, it will be possible to seek relief next year from the Legislature and have the act amended so that it may finally prove to be effective. I see no reason, however, why the proponents of the bill should wait a year before attempting to correct such defects as the bill may contain. It seems to me that it would be more advisable, after a careful consideration of the objections that have been urged against the bill, to propose amendments and present them to the present Legislature in order that the city may obtain, without delay, a statute of sounder constitutionality and more certain effectiveness."

SUBWAY EXPRESS CAR DERAILED; NO ONE HURT

Loosened Tire Causes Mishap and Scare at Spring Street.

PASSENGERS TAKE TO TRACKS

They Clamber to the Street, Causing a Temporary Stoppage of All Trains—Suicide Also Blocks Tunnel.

The forward truck on the third car of a downtown Subway express jumped the track at 9 o'clock yesterday morning as the train was running past the Spring Street station.

Nobody was killed or wounded in the accident, and that is the most remarkable part about it. Filled with work-bound men and women—half of them, as usual, clinging to straps—the express was bowling around the Spring Street curve at fifteen or twenty miles an hour when the bump came.

The passengers were thrown on top of one another; the women who weren't too scared to make a sound screamed lustily. The derailed truck tore along over the roadbed, plowing up the rock ballast and ripping the ties into splinters. Something happened to the contact shoe, which connects with the third rail, and there was a great sputtering of sparks.

The curve at Spring Street is pretty sharp. Ever since the Subway was opened, in October, 1904, passengers have noticed that the trains, though slowing up a little, keep high speed when passing the Spring Street station. The speed of the express yesterday morning, General Manager Hedley said, had nothing to do with the accident. The tire on one of the wheels was loose, he said, and this caused the gauge of the wheels to spread.

The motorman of the express acted with promptness. At the very first bump he felt the irregular movement of the car behind him and threw on the emergency brakes. For the moment this added to the confusion, for the frightened passengers were thrown and tossed around like dry seeds in a hollow gourd. The train was brought to a stop in its own length, and about fifty yards south of the south end of the station platform.

When everybody had found that no bones were broken there was a rush forward and rearward to get out of the wrecked car. It was made more urgent by vivid flashes from the third rail. At the same time, persons who had been in the other cars rushed to see what was the matter. The result was great confusion.

When it was evident that there was no danger to life or limb, the passengers realized that they were going to be late to work. The clerks and typewriters were afraid they'd be dismissed, and the men higher up feared they might set a bad example to those under them. The guards had to bear the brunt of it. They weren't to blame, of course, but the passengers held them responsible, and scolded them vigorously. Then some of the cooler ones laid plans to get out of the tunnel.

A practical man on the rear platform of the derailed car took the lead. He stepped gingerly over the third rail to the middle of the southbound local track, and then, hugging the west wall, hurried to the Spring Street station. There he climbed to the street and continued his journey southward. Others in the train, women and men, followed his example. The women, aided by the men, crossed the third rail safely, and were lifted to the station platform. Nearly half of the seven carloads of passengers were piled into the two front cars by the guards. These two cars then went on to the Brooklyn Bridge.

The guards and the station employes sent men both north and south to stop all trains. If this had not been done it is highly probable that the throng of passengers crossing the tracks would have been run down and killed.

The express immediately behind the one that was wrecked was stopped, of course, by the block signals. The passengers in it had not the slightest idea what was keeping them still. When they found out they decided to walk, too. Men and women jumped to the tracks, and trod the ties down to Spring Street. For more than ten minutes the procession lasted, and it was the chief cause of the suspension of service on the three tracks not directly affected by the accident.

Further up the line stalled southbound express trains transferred their passengers to locals that ran alongside. Sometimes the passengers jumped across the gap, and in some instances planks were laid across to make a bridge. The locals could usually get to some station, but there was nothing for the expresses to do but wait till the wreck ahead was cleared up.

The western of the four Subway tracks is known as No. 1, the next as No. 2, and so on. All the way up to 157th Street on the west side and to Bronx Park on the east side service on tracks 1, 3, and 4 was suspended for nearly half an hour, and on track 2 much longer than that. And between Fourteenth Street and the Brooklyn Bridge there was no express service for two hours and fifteen minutes.

General Manager Hedley was on the scene of the accident ten minutes after it occurred. He had his good clothes on, but that didn't keep him from crawling under the car and making an investigation. At first he thought perhaps the axle might have broken, but a further examination proved this to be not so. Mr. Hedley telephoned to Fourteenth Street that all express trains arriving there from the north should be sent back on the north bound express track. This meant that the terminus for express trains was at Fourteenth Street instead of at South Ferry. At his office later Mr. Hedley issued the following statement:

> About 9 o'clock this A. M., when an express train, south bound, was passing around the curves near the Spring Street station in the Subway, the forward truck of the third car from the south end became derailed, the wheels running along until the train was stopped by the emergency application of the brakes. A very close examination developed the fact that one of the tires on one of the wheels of the derailed truck was loose, thus causing the gauge of the wheels to spread, resulting in the derailment. Several passengers insisted on getting upon the track, which caused all trains at Sprin Street to stop until the tracks could be cleared of passengers. As soon as this was done the train service was resumed on No. 1, No. 3, and No. 4 track. Train service south bound between Fourteenth Street and Brooklyn Bridge necessarily was abandoned on No. 2 track while the truck was being replaced on the rail. The discontinuance of No. 2 track during the interval necessarily congested trains on the other three tracks. Derailment did not cause any damage to the equipment or injury to any passenger or employe.

There was an accident at almost the same place last year. A local train, southbound, took an open switch and ran over to the express tracks. Luckily, an oncoming express was stopped in time to prevent a collision. Since that time the switches at Spring Street have been removed.

The Subway trains were just beginning to get back on their regular schedule yesterday, when a suicide tied up the local service for another half hour. A man jumped from the north end of the Astor Place station in front of a south-bound train, and was ground to pieces beneath the wheels. It took about twenty-five minutes to get the body from under the car. There was a scare in the train when the passengers felt it bumping over an obstacle. Two or three women fainted.

Cards bearing the name of C. R. Flatow, a restaurant keeper, of 1,028 East 169th Street, were found in the suicide's pockets. The janitress of 55 East Eleventh Street, where Mr. Flatow used to live, said that his business, formerly at University Place and Eighth Street, had failed, and that this probably drove him to take his life. He leaves a widow and child.

GAME SOLD ALL YEAR IF NEW BILL IS PASSED

Restaurant Men Get a Concession as to Imported Birds.

DEALERS TO BE UNDER BOND

Conference Between State Officers and the Local Tradesmen Plans to End an Old Fight.

There is joy among the big restaurant keepers and dealers in game to-day, for it is expected that before Lent is over it will be made possible by law to sell, serve, and eat certain kinds of game the year round without troubling the epicure's conscience or the possible fining of the motel man at the rate of $25 a bird and $65 penalty and the forfeiture of the commission merchant's bond.

A bill has been introduced at Albany as the result of a conference and an agreement between the New York Poultry and Game Trade Association, the Attorney General, the State Fish and Game Commission, and the Audubon and Sportsmen's Societies. The bill embodies the compromise that dealers and hotel men shall be allowed to import, sell, and serve six kinds of European game the year round, in consideration of a bond to be given by each commission merchant that he shall not substitute in the closed season—which is three-quarters of the year—New York State game or game from any other State in the Union.

The law now provides that at the close of the open season the Wardens shall seal up all the game in stock, which must then be kept in cold storage for nine months, or until the beginning of the respective open seasons. The importation of game foreign to the State is prohibited in the close season.

This law has caused many arrests. Several of the largest hotel proprietors in the city are now in the toils over it. Game was demanded by their patrons and served at great risk. The birds were imported from Massachusetts, Missouri, and other States and smuggled through commission dealers to the restaurant men. Every now and then the Game Wardens swooped down on the commission houses, looked over the books, and inflicted the penalty for having game not under seal. They also made raids on Broadway restaurants at after theatre hours, went through all the iceboxes, and where they found game inflicted penalties.

The Game Warden is authorized to collect the fines, 50 per cent. of which constitutes his official remuneration. Not only domestic birds came under this law, but game imported from Europe. In the latter case, however, the law was practically winked at until several weeks ago, when the Court of Appeals handed down a decision in a game-selling case which tied up that source of game, too.

Francis A. Winslow of Marsh, Winslow & Wever of 111 Broadway, representing the Game Trade Association, met in conference with Attorney General Mayer, Game Commissioner Whipple, and members of the Audubon and Sportsmen's Societies, with the object of adjusting matters.

The Audubon and Sportsmen's Societies and the Game Commission declared that domestic birds most surely would be substituted for the European game if importation was allowed in the closed season. It was agreed finally that European game bearing no resemblance to domestic game should be allowed in. In case of violation, the bond required of the dealer shall be forfeited, and the merchant, or restaurant keeper, prevented from ever handling game again.

The birds which may be imported, sold, and served the year round, if the bill goes through, are blackcock, rebhuhner, redleg, lapwing, Egyptian quail, and hazel hens.

Ant-I-Wet Serge Suits

WHEN we introduced our Ant-I-Wet Serge Suit last year, and dwelled on its specific virtues because "It lets in the air—keeps out the wet," there was many a headshake.

Like with every new idea, the pioneer has to do the rough work in making a path.

The greatest praise for a "good thing" is its imitation. There will be many imitations of Ant-I-Wet Serge this season, "but beware of imitations." No matter how old and well-known a name they may bear, the first and real moisture proof, shape retaining, porous and soft finish Serge is "Ant-I-Wet." All infringements, no matter how indirect, will be promptly looked after.

We are receiving daily new additions to our "Ant-I-Wet" family for immediate wear.

DR. SLICER IN A DEAL TO REFORM RACING

Arranges with Jockey Club for New Betting Methods.

IF CASSIDY BILL IS KILLED

Dr. Slicer Admits It—Opposes the Bill, He Says, Because Poolrooms Favor It.

According to Wilbur F. Crafts, Superintendent of the International Reform Bureau of Washington, who passed through town last night on his way home from Albany, after appearing before the joint Committees on Codes in advocacy of the Cassidy-Lansing Anti-Racing bill, of which he is the author, an agreement has been entered into between the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer of New York and the men at the head of racing in New York, in which the latter promise to amend racing methods at the tracks in New York. The consideration on the other side, Mr. Crafts said, is that the "good people" shall oppose the bill. He intimates that they have bought a gold brick.

Dr. Slicer admitted to a TIMES reporter that the Stewards of The Jockey Club had agreed with him that they would do their best to limit gambling on the tracks and make every effort to keep racing information from getting to the poolrooms, but said that some of the details of the agreement given by Mr. Crafts were absurd.

"I have it upon good authority," said Mr. Crafts, "that the race track people, including August Belmont, have signed a contract with Dr. Slicer, by the terms of which Dr. Slicer is practically put in control of the betting methods to be used at the tracks. For instance, I am told the race track managers have agreed that hereafter they will not allow any of the odds posted in the betting ring to go to the poolrooms. That, I am told, is Dr. Slicer's idea. Again, they are to modify the present way in which odds are displayed. Next season the bookmakers are not to be allowed to flourish their odds on hand slates, as they did last season, but will mark them upon the bettors' programmes, or in some other unostentatious fashion. The difference in methods will be about as tweedledee is to tweedledum. It is a most amazing proposition."

Dr. Slicer didn't deny that he has an understanding with The Jockey Club.

"I have assurances from the Stewards of The Jockey Club," he said, "that their whole influence will be thrown in the direction of limiting and regulating gambling on the races. That much was stated at Albany yesterday by Joseph S. Auerbach, counsel for the racing managers. There are no details yet. Mr. Crafts is absurd in his statement of the details."

Earlier in the day Dr. Slicer talked freely about his opposition to the bill which makes pool selling and bookmaking on the race tracks a felony.

"I am sorry to appear to be against reform," said he, "but some reformers have wretchedly bad judgment, and I cannot agree with their methods. I have had a blast this morning from Anthony Comstock and a long visit from the Rev. Dr. Crafts, but I cannot change my position. I have every reason to believe it was the poolroom men who promoted the bill, though they were not its authors.

"The present law makes betting a misdemeanor, with a civil remedy, while keeping a poolroom is a felony. I do not think that the people who conduct race tracks should be on the same level as poolroom keepers. I recognize in every way the evils of betting, and am heartily opposed to it, but you can't suppress it. The utmost we can hope to do is to see betting kept in good hands."

Dr. Slicer was asked what he thought of the suggestion that if the New York State race tracks went out of business the great interests in New York in racing would cease and the poolrooms lose most of their patronage.

"Betting depends on the event and the news, not on the locality," he replied. "To-day men are betting on the New Orleans races. Then there is what is known as the Western Circuit. If you could stop races all over the country you could stop the betting, but not otherwise.

"Now I think the Cassidy bill and the whole movement are really instigated by the poolroom people. They think that if the race track betting is abolished it will make the management of the races so uncertain financially that the present managers will not care to continue to look after them.

"I have every confidence in Mr. Belmont and his associates. I believe they are trying to promote clean sport for the sake of sport. But they may be changed at any time, and we might easily have very undesirable men in their places. If they felt they could not continue to accept the responsibilities under a new régime, the poolroom people would try to put their own friends in and would control both ends of the business.

"De Lacy and his party have had a long fight with the racetrack owners and have been mixed up in all sorts of collusive suits. I have read up the judgments, and know all about them. I believe the present law is quite constitutional, and that the Cassidy bill has been promoted by the poolroom interests simply to harry their old enemies out of control. So I oppose it.

"My attitude on this question is in line with my attitude on all social reforms. I don't agree with the methods of Anthony Comstock and Dr. Parkhurst. They are spectacular and not effective. What is the good of hitting at the small man? Try to get to the men who control the sources of the evil.

"Poolrooms flourish all over the city, and the police are in with them."

"So you think the present administration is the best under the circumstances?"

"That's it. I know that betting is a great evil, but I also know we cannot stop it. The lobby for the Cassidy bill is from the poolroom. I don't want to strengthen its hand. I don't want to do anything to weaken the hands of the men who now control the race tracks, and in whom I have every confidence. So I oppose the bill."

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 15.—The Committee on Codes of the Senate to which was referred the Cassidy-Lansing bill making it a felony to sell pools or make books on the race tracks, decided to-day to report the bill out of committee with an amendment which would in the regular order have the effect of recommitting the bill to its care for a time at least.

Another action of to-day is still more significant of the attempt to kill the Cassidy measure. The Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment has decided to report out favorably the Coggeshall bill introduced directly after the Cassidy bill was put in. The bill provides that in the future the race tracks shall pay to the State and the State to the agricultural societies 8 instead of 5 per cent. of their gross receipts. The effect of this measure will be to turn into the coffers of the agricultural societies about $100,000 more than they now receive, and the natural result will be that the farmers throughout the State will bring all the pressure possible to bear on their legislators to kill the Cassidy bill, which, if it became law, would undoubtedly lessen the attendance at the race tracks and so cause a great diminution of the farmers' rake-off.

STORM DRIVES LINER BACK.

Koenigin Luise Breaks Rudder in a Gale—Reaches Halifax.

HALIFAX, N. S., March 15.—After having been helpless for hours through the breaking of her rudder stock in the tremendous seas raised by the same gale which sent the steamer British King and eighteen men to the bottom last Sunday, the North German Lloyd steamer Koenigin Luise arrived here to-day for repairs and with a story of desperate work by the crew to save the vessel. The steamer, crowded with 300 passengers, left New York five days ago for the Mediterranean, and on her way northward was overtaken by a storm which reached hurricane proportions. The waves ran unusually high, tossing the big steamer about until the passengers were in a state of semi-panic.

On Tuesday the strain of the continued buffetings broke the stock of the rudder at a point where it runs up through the deck, leaving the vessel at the mercy of the waves.

For hours the vessel rolled frightfully, but, working desperately, and frequently buried under the tons of water that constantly poured over the ship's decks, the crew rigged a jury gear by tackles fixed to the rudder chains from port and starboard sides.

This brought the vessel under slight control, and despite her continual falling off before the ceaseless hammering of the waves the steamer was brought safely into this port.

Besides the 300 passengers the Koenigin Luise carries a general cargo of considerable value. The steamship will remain here until repairs are completed, which will occupy one week.

The Königin Luise is one of the fast Mediterranean liners of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company. She sailed from New York for Naples and Genoa last Saturday, and has on board a large number of passengers. Among the passengers are Mr. and Mrs. Garrett D. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. Percival Kuhne, Prof. and Mrs. J. Lawrence Laughlin of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Rockwell, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Taft, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Woodward.

REJECTED EMIGRANTS SHOT.

Russians Sent Back from England All Slain on Reaching Frontier.

LONDON, Friday, March 16.—The Hon. Lionel Walter Rothschild, member of Parliament for the Aylesbury Division of Buckinghamshire, speaking last night at Chesham on the question of the exclusion of aliens, referred to the number of poor Russian refugees excluded from Great Britain in the last few months.

He said he possessed irrefutable evidence that every one of these men sent back was shot at the Russian frontier without trial.

Mr. Rothschild is the son and heir of Lord Rothschild.

$2,501 FOR EIGHT STAMPS.

Post Office the Buyer, It Is Said, of Rare 1861 Set.

A rare set of eight unused United States postage stamps, in the collection of A. H. Scholle, sold for $2,501 at auction last evening at 24 West Twenty-sixth Street. The face value of the stamps is $1.75. It is a complete set of the issue of Aug. 14, 1861.

When the civil war began there was a quantity of the 1857-60 issue of stamps in the seceding States. To prevent their use by the Confederate Postmasters, the United States authorities declared that these stamps were no longer to be accepted for postage, and the issue of Aug. 14, 1861, was hurriedly prepared. They did not give satisfaction, however, and, in the following month, a new set was issued, with changes marked enough to make them easily distinguishable. These stamps are the earliest issue that can be used for mailing purposes. All previous issues have no value except to philatelists.

The set sold last night consists of one-cent indigo, three-cent brown lake, five-cent orange brown, ten-cent yellow green, twelve-cent gray black, twenty-four-cent deep violet, thirty-cent red orange, and ninety-cent slate blue. The stamps were found by William Knudson of this city some years ago in a small shop in a Danish or Swedish town.

J. M. Bartels & Co. of Boston were the purchasers. It is supposed that the set was bought on order for the Post Office Department, which is lacking a set. There was spirited bidding.

An unused three-cent rosy buff New York carriers' stamp of 1842 brought $205, a ten-cent St. Louis Postmaster's stamp of 1846 $93, an unused pair of five-cent and ten-cent stamps, general issue of 1847, $30; an unused thirty-cent stamp of the 1851-56 issue, $60.50, and a canceled fifteen-cent stamp of 1869, with inverted picture, $80.

JEWELS IN FIRE RUINS.

Gems and Silver Worth $35,000 Found on the Livermore Place.

Workmen digging in the ruins and ashes of the country mansion of John R. Livermore, a millionaire New York lawyer, at Bedford, in Westchester County, yesterday, found diamonds and other jewelry valued at $25,000. Silver plate that was worth more than $10,000 was found badly blackened. The diamonds were not injured in the least, and one diamond pin was as bright as though it had not been in the flames.

There are still in the ruins jewels valued at $25,000. They belong to Mrs. Livermore.

WOOD'S BATTLE CALLED MURDER IN CONGRESS

Williams Reads Poem on "The Charge of the Wood Brigade."

THE PRESIDENT CRITICISED

The General's Explanation of the Killing of Women and Children Derided and Fiercely Denounced.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—"Murder," "massacre," "assassination," these were the words employed by Representative Jones of Virginia in the House to-day to describe the action of the "Wood brigade," as John Sharp Williams has labeled it, in the fight with the Moros at Mount Dajo last week, where women and children as well as fighting men were killed. In the course of a short speech Mr. Jones bitterly denounced Gen. Wood for permitting such a thing to be done, and sharply criticised the President for commending him.

"I make every allowance for the intimate personal relations between Theodore Roosevelt and Leonard Wood," said Mr. Jones, "but I cannot understand how the President can approve this horrible massacre. What 'Hell Roaring Jake' ordered, but did not dare to do, has now been exceeded by Wood, who has the effrontery to say that he 'accepts full responsibility.' But it cannot be excused by the President nor condoned by the people of the United States.

"They say the attack was necessary. I say it was not necessary. It was a useless sacrifice of American life to assault an almost impregnable position. If it had become essential to subdue those people all that was necessary when they had been driven together, huddled in a bunch at the top of that mountain, was to surround and starve them into yielding. The explanation now offered by Gen. Wood can never excuse this great blot on the American name. Before the American people get through with this not even the President will attempt to defend such a monstrous outrage.

"Ah! but when the Moros charged they held up their little children as shields to protect themselves! Does any reasonable man believe that? There was no charge by Moros. There could be no charge. Where were they? Shut up in a trap in the crater of that mountain. The assault was by the American troops, and the Moros were cooped up in a hole.

"The Secretary of War, when he read the first dispatch telling of this brutal killing, understood what had happened, and felt that there must be an explanation. But now the explanation has come, and it does not explain.

"I am not willing to let one day pass without registering my dissent from the conclusion of the President on this blot on the name of the American troops, and I hope the President will not again attempt to defend the action of the troops in this terrible massacre.

"What reasonable being in the United States believes it was necessary that, after those people had been cooped up in that crater, they should be assassinated? Oh! but the children stood around their parents! Perhaps, even, they clung to them. I have known children to do that when frightened. They clung to their parents, and the American soldiers could not distinguish the children from the fighting men. No reasonable man in the United States will believe such an unreasonable story as that. The most revolting exhibition of 'valor' our soldiers ever gave will never prove acceptable to the people of this country."

A lively round of applause from the Democratic side marked the close of Mr. Jones's talk. Then John Sharp Williams took the floor and, prefacing his remarks with the well-known explanation that he was about to read some verses by a "member of his House," read the following:

THE CHARGE OF THE WOOD BRIGADE;
or, What the Heathen Call the Massacre of Mount Dajo.

Chased them from everywhere,
Chased them all onward
Into the crater of death,
Drove them—six hundred!
"Forward, the Wood Brigade;
Spare not a one," he said;
"Shoot all six hundred!"

"Forward, the Wood Brigade!"
Was there a man afraid?
Not tho' a soldier knew
Heathen had blundered.
Savages can't reply,
Heathen can't reason why
Women and children die,
Forced in the crater of death,
Forced with six hundred;

Cannon to right of them,
Cannon to left of them,
Cannon in front of them,
Volleyed and thundered.
Stormed at with shot and shell,
Women and children fell
Into the jaws of death,
Into the mouth of Hell;
All told, six hundred.

Flashed all the sabres there,
Flashed as they turned in air,
Sabring the women there,
Charging the children, while
All the world wondered.
Stifled by cannon smoke,
Men, women, children choke;
Women and children
Reeled from the bayonet stroke
In death not sundered;
Families slaughtered there,
All of six hundred.

Cannon to right of them,
Cannon to left of them,
Cannon in front of them
Volleyed and thundered;
Stormed at with shot and shell
While child and mother fell,
They that had loved so well.
Thrust into jaws of death,
Trapped into mouth of Hell,
Not a babe left of them,

What shall such bloodthirst slake?
Go, ask Hell-Roaring Jake
Whether Wood blundered.
Honor the charge they made?
Honor the Wood Brigade
For that six hundred?

More Democratic applause greeted the effort of Williams, and that closed the Mount Dajo incident in the House.

It came up in the Senate when the message from the President was read transmitting copies of the reports that have been received from Gen. Wood, in response to the resolution of Senator Culberson calling for them. Mr. Culberson asked if the message was intended to be a reply to his resolution, and Senator Bacon said it could hardly be that, for it did not cover the ground.

"We want to know what provocation there was for this wholesale slaughter," he said. "We must call it that, since none escaped, regardless of age or sex. We can only hope that when the facts are known they will show that there was extreme provocation. At best it is most regrettable."

"No news has been received except by cable," explained Senator Lodge. "I have no doubt that as soon as the full reports are received by mail they will be furnished us promptly. When the facts are received it will be time enough to talk about slaughter and massacre if they are found then to justify such talk, which I do not believe."

HAMILTON'S PECKSNIFF.

Says W. B. Hornblower Is a Good Guess—Hornblower Denies.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 15.—As Andrew Hamilton was leaving the Assembly Chamber here this afternoon he was asked whether the Trustee of the New York Life Insurance Company to whom he had referred as "Mr. Pecksniff" was William B. Hornblower, who has for many years represented the company in important cases. Hamilton said:

"Young man, you are a good guesser."

This was all that Hamilton would say, for, as he explained, he was not yet ready to unfold the second chapter of his relations with the New York Life Insurance Company. Mr. Hornblower's name has been mentioned in most of the accounts of the way in which the late John A. McCall was persuaded to go on the stand in the Armstrong Committee investigation and shoulder the responsibility for all the company's political and legislative expenditures.

It is said to be Mr. Hornblower also who persuaded Mr. McCall to make restitution of the $235,000 Hamilton money remaining unaccounted for at the end of 1904 out of the amount which Hamilton had received in the two years preceding.

William B. Hornblower said last night: "So far as Judge Hamilton speaks or implies that I acted as a disbursing agent or had anything to do with the disbursing of funds in the Beers administration, in legislative matters or anything else, it is absolutely untrue. My relation with the company was purely professional in matters of litigation and legal advice. I never appeared, so far as I can recollect, but once before a legislative committee, and then to make an argument in opposition to a bill. There was no 'yellow dog' fund so far as I knew, or that I had anything to do with under the Beers administration. So far as Judge Hamilton states that I knew of the amount of money paid to him for legislative or other purposes, as found by the Fowler Committee's report, it is untrue."

MOB ATTACKS OMAHA JAIL.

Seek to Lynch Eight Murderers—Clubbed Back by Police.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, March 15.—Shortly after midnight to-night a crowd of 500 determined men suddenly made a rush for the County Jail in which the eight murderers whom they for three nights threatened to lynch were supposed to be confined. The men were armed with crowbars, clubs, and ropes.

With a cheer they rushed up the steps and stopped at the door when the Sheriff appeared and invited a committee to go through the jail, telling them the prisoners had all been taken from town. However, he was slow of action and the mob quickly broke in the doors.

Within a posse of deputies and police met them and the first fight took place, the police clubbing the members of the mob who had gotten into the building and throwing them back from the door.

Barricades were hastily erected and the mob, at 1 o'clock, began searching for dynamite, declaring they would blow up the jail and everybody in it.

It is bitter cold, the weather is zero, and a brisk wind is blowing. The second attempt to get into the jail was made with a telegraph pole as a battering ram. The mob rushed up the jail steps, but was beaten back by the police. The fire department had an engine out to dose the mob. The dynamite has not been secured, and it is believed the attempt at lynching has failed.

BRITISH KILL 300 REBELS.

Nigerians Twice Charge a Square and Are Almost Annihilated.

LONDON, Friday, March 16.—A dispatch from Zungeru, Northern Nigeria, to The Daily Mail says that the British punitive expedition has crushed the Sokoto revolt after heavy fighting.

The rebels twice charged the British square and were almost annihilated.

The town of Satirk, which was held by the rebels in force, was bombarded and then captured at the point of the bayonet.

Over 300 rebels were killed.

Miss Houdlette's Death Caused by Wood Alcohol.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 15.—Medical Examiner Swan has certified that Ruth Edith Houdlette, the Radcliffe College girl who died suddenly yesterday, came to her death by poisoning by wood alcohol, but more than that he refuses to say.

Miss Houdlette lived at 6 Sacramento Street, Cambridge, with her parents. In accordance with her usual custom she attended lectures Tuesday morning. Her mother had occasion to go to Boston and did not return until noon.

She found her daughter lying on the floor in a semi-conscious condition.

It is believed that she was temporarily deranged by overstudy and took the poison by mistake. She had been ailing for some time.

HAMILTON TURNS ON OLD TRUSTEES

Denounces N. Y. Life Men in Legislature

DEFENDS McCALL'S FAME

"I'm the Yellow Dog, but Brave and Loyal."

ALL PAYMENTS APPROVED

Audited by Committee Which Knew Purposes.

HE HAD A PREDECESSOR

Refers to a Pecksniff Who Worked for Beers—Assails Men Who Deserted McCall as Curs.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 15.—Andrew Hamilton, upon whom, with the dead John A. McCall, the Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company have placed the responsibility for the millions of dollars spent in shaping laws the country over, walked into the Assembly Chamber this afternoon and demanded a hearing.

The Senate and Assembly Committees on Insurance were in midsession. The subject under discussion was the report of the Armstrong Committee for the reorganization of the business of insurance. Distinguished lawyers were in attendance—some sent by the reorganized managements of the companies desirous of retention in office, some by organizations of policy holders, who wanted to turn the reorganizers out—to present their cases to the representatives of the people of the State.

The sensational interruption came in the midst of a fervent speech by the General Solicitor of the New York Life Insurance Company, James H. McIntosh. He was arguing that the Trustees of that institution should not be legislated out of office on Nov. 15; that they had proved faithful to their trusts; that the interests of the policy holders demanded their retention. Mr. McIntosh was specific. With warmth of oratory he asserted that the whole long investigation by the Armstrong Committee had failed to disclose any wrongdoing by any single Trustee, and that the money spent as it should not have been spent was handled by executive officers.

The New York Life's solicitor pleaded the general practice in great corporations, recounted the speed with which the board of the New York Life had acted upon the discovery of things to the member hitherto all unknown, how it had amended by-laws and started suits to the end that the responsibility might be placed where it belonged and the money of the policy holders which the past executive had wasted, be restored to the treasury of the company.

Then came Hamilton, full of bitterness. He came with the memory of a dead man in his mind. He came knowing that John A. McCall, on the stand before the legislative investigators, had taken upon himself the responsibility of the whole affair, and it was Hamilton's purpose, as he soon made it evident, to speak for the dead. For himself he accepted the epithet now a common term of insurance phraseology. He was the Yellow Dog. Drawing himself to his full height, he said:

"Yes, gentlemen, they may talk about the Yellow Dog, but the dog is a dog of courage and loyalty."

Says Trustees Knew.

So Hamilton did tell, and what he told was that the money he spent in ten years' service was spent even to the last $144,000, recently learned of through the Paris office, with the knowledge and approval of the entire Board of Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company, expressed through the authorization of its appropriate committees.

All this came about very simply. An old acquaintance of Hamilton, a newspaper reporter, had lunched with him to-day, and suggested that he go to the Capitol and demand a hearing from the Senate and Assembly.

He acted on the suggestion, and at 4 o'clock was there with a card for Timothy L. Woodruff, who, as at the last hearing, had marshalled the insurance men for their task. For a minute Hamilton stood in the crowd outside the rail of the chamber, unnoticed in the hundred strangers whom the insurance hearing had drawn to the Capitol. Then somebody recognized him, and another, and another.

"It's Hamilton," a whisper went around the outskirts of the crowd, while the messenger was still on his way to where Mr. Woodruff sat. "It's Hamilton," went down the aisles to the reporters' tables, before even the master of ceremonies had quite realized what had happened.

Mr. Woodruff spoke to Mr. Armstrong, who wrote word on the card that the committee would be pleased to hear from Mr. Hamilton.

So the word was taken up that Hamilton was going to talk, and one man after another rushed up to him with this question or that suggestion, until he had become the centre of all interest.

"I am going to talk," said Hamilton to these questioners, "and I'm to talk in favor of the proposition that all the Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company be legislated out of office on the 21st day of next November. That's what I'm going to talk about."

Over to him rushed several more, and among them John C. McCall, Secretary of the New York Life, and the son of the man whose name Hamilton had come to defend.

"Don't do it," they urged. "Don't try to speak here above all things."

Young Mr. McCall joined in the protest with the rest, and led Hamilton out into the lobby for a more urgent word of objection. More of the New York Life party came up, but Hamilton turned from all, went back into the Assembly chamber, and resumed his place outside the rail, waiting for his turn to come.

Through impatient minutes Mr. McIntosh dragged out his speech of protest, and then ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff announced: "Andrew Hamilton."

With step firm and head erect, the "Judge" passed down the stairs to the pit in front of the Speaker's stand. He looked less debonair than of old, said those who knew him well. At a little table where the stenographers sat Hamilton stopped, called for a glass of water, and then addressed the assemblage.

Curs and Traitors.

"Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee," he began. "I wish to thank you for permitting me to appear at this opportune moment in following my former assistant of the New York Life. I wish to state that my remarks will be confined entirely to the New York Life Insurance Company and the men who manage it. For the managers of the other companies I have a high and loyal respect, because so far I have not found among them curs and traitors.

"I address you on one bill solely and I address you in advocacy of that bill, which I have not read, but the purport of which appears in the papers. I shall urge simply that it will be your duty to report in favor of the measure that will remove from office the Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company upon Nov. 21 next arbitrarily."

Hamilton paused and looked around him as if to see if his words were having their desired effect. He need not have been disappointed. Every eye in the chamber was upon him, and every ear strained to catch the last syllable that came from his lips. The crowd that had stood in the rear of the chamber now filled the aisles and some moved down from the middle seats and sat on the steps near the front. Cornelius Doremus, President of the Germania Life, was one of these, and he sat down on the nearest step with a couple of other high life insurance officials. Back in the centre seats were the representatives of the New York Life Insurance Company, Vice Presidents Buckner and Kingsley, Secretary McCall, and the company's counsel. A considerable number of other New York Life men, including several Trustees, were also in the room. Hamilton was plainly glad of this. He raised his voice after the first few words and continued:

"I look around the circle and I see here members of the board. I see among them men who have sat and listened to the stories of my victories in their behalf and have applauded, and I wonder whether it was like the line in Goldsmith—that it was counterfeited glee, or whether the attitude that they have since taken has been one of counterfeited honesty.

"I have no prepared speech—no set speech, no typewritten notes to go by; but at my luncheon to-day, when I considered the hearing that was on, I said: 'Well, there is a duty to be performed here, and I have been accused in performing my duty. I will come up to the front now on a certain line.' And here I am."

There was another pause at this. Then he went on:

Defense of McCall.

"One of the features that has been an important event in the investigations of your committee, Mr. Chairman, has been the question of my transactions and of my vouchers. You have heard all the sweet protestations of innocence that have come along, and how the only one to blame was the dead, the killed, whom they drove into his grave and deserted, and—the yellow dog. It was this that made an appeal to me to come down here, and say something for him and just a word for myself. Not that we are asserting any defense, or making any apologies, or asking for any immunity, but because what we say is said in support of this measure.

"Why, when they say they did not know what was going on it excites my laughter, my derision. The Pecksniff of three administrations, and who thinks that he is the Talleyrand of the present one; the confidante of the Beers scandal and author of the Beers pension, rotates through one administration and rotates through another, and, as I say, thinks that he is going to be, like Talleyrand, an indispensable member of another administration. Do you think that the man who held the same relation to Mr. Beers that I did to Mr. McCall could sit for the thirteen years since and not know what and how the expenditures that were made were to be and were disbursed?

"Remark, that I say that when I disbursed my expenditure money not a dollar was disbursed in a way that could be criticised; and yet he, and such like him, sit, not judging me as peers, but judging me as conquerors, talking about 'yellow dogs'!"

An outburst of applause came at this, while some people gasped and the name of the "Pecksniff"—that of an eminent lawyer—passed around the chamber in whispers. So Hamilton continued:

"Now, of course, in every administration of a great public concern, there are many things to be done which, in the hurried line of duty and in the desire for victory, cannot always be delayed. But there never was a line or a thing that was done in the New York Life in my administration of my department, but the executive officers, one and all, were conscious of what the purpose was, of what the object was, and of what the expense was. I say this now, and when I look around I see their faces before me, and I challenge contradiction."

Hamilton waited for an answer, but none was made. Then he went on:

"Now, let us consider for a moment the criticisms made in regard to the payments that have been made to me upon my single voucher. Now, remember, I did not go in there and own this company. I went in there as a humble little lawyer, a country lawyer, and I got in there because I beat Pecksniff in his Beers pension, and I beat him with all the legion of great names that he had around him, and I beat him single handed and alone. And when I won my victory, then they said: 'Well, we will give you a chance here.' And then I started in to perform my duties.

"Now, when the first month came, and my voucher went in, that was the time to have said to me, 'Sir, you have not submitted the proper voucher.'

"'And whose duty was it to do that?'

"'The Auditing Committee of the Trustees.'

"'Were they perfunctory?'

"'No; salaried—a special salary for a Chairman, another salary for a Deputy, a daily compensation for others that attended.'

"Suppose that it passed the first month. When the accounts came in the vouchers were there, in the hands of the controller. And it came to a second month, and it went to a fifth month, and it went to a tenth month, and it went to a year, and all the time I was carrying forward the business and the purposes and the protection and saving money for these insurance companies.

"But the tenth month passed and there was no objection. And the first year passed and there was no objection. And the second year and the third year and the fourth and the fifth and the sixth and the seventh, the eighth, the ninth, and the tenth, and then when the cry comes out they say: 'Well, we did not know anything about it. This is the fellow, this is the man that has done it all.'

"If they had stopped, if they had performed their duties when they should have done it, if it was a duty—but mark, I am not assuming or asserting or accepting that it was one—but if it was, they should have stopped it at the inception of it. And when they continued, and continued the fault, the blame, the responsibility is theirs and it is not mine. I could have stopped the first month, and if I could not have performed my duties without presenting detailed vouchers, I could have surrendered my contract.

"Never, as the evidence of your investigation shows, until you reached it, was there a single criticism. Why should there be? They sat there weekly, cashing the emoluments that came to them for the performance of their duty, with the vouchers there under their noses, and if they took them and looked at them, and then they approved what was done, I stood approved. If they did not take them and look at them, then they deceived me into the assumption that they performed their duty and that they were satisfied with the manner and rendition of my accounts.

"Let me pause here to say this to correct the press associations—which nobody on the part of the company has assumed to do—that what is called the Paris account was actually reported upon and passed upon by the Auditing Committee of the New York Life. And let me say further, that never a dollar of the New York Life's money passed through my hands to which I did not put my 'John Hancock.' And when you remember the story of the Steel Trust dividend, that money was not paid by me, but was paid to J. P. Morgan & Co. to take up some notes which I had discounted, in order to pay for facilities, and, for the purpose of the time, the obligations of the New York Life.

Responsibility Was Spread.

"Now it must not be said, you know, that the responsibility of this auditing can be confined to A, B, and C. During this long period of years there has been a rotating membership; this time A and B, next year B and C, and next year D and E; so that all this knowledge has spread. And it simply excites my laughter when I hear the gentlemen assert, those who are here and in my hearing, and others, that they did not know that Andrew Hamilton was defending the New York Life and the insurance interests generally throughout the United States on behalf of the principles which the officers of the insurance companies believed to be necessary for their success and for the benefit of the policy holders.

"If there was trouble, and an agent would write from a far-off country, and say, 'If this bill passes it is going to kill our business out here,' they would rush in, you know, to the President, and say: 'Well, now, here is this agent's letter. For heaven's sake, we will lose all our business out there.' 'Well, send for the Judge.' 'All right.' The Judge will come. 'Sit down.' 'Well, what is the trouble?' 'Well, heavens! if this bill passes we might as well get out of that State.' 'Well, all right. We will have to see what the objections are to it, and will have to agitate. We will have the press do something; we will have to have the politicians do something; we will have to have the agents do something; we will have to have the policy holders do something; we will get men of influence to go ahead and see if we cannot beat it.'

"And we would beat it. Then the word would come in, 'It is beaten.' And they would come in and pat me on the back. The men that would not know me now, would come in and pat me on the back and say: 'You did it.'"

Hamilton had to pause here, as well for breath as to let the applause die out. Then he went on:

"Now, about the vouchers. All I say about that is that I did not keep the books of the New York Life. I never saw the inside of one of their books. And when $1,000 or $5,000 came into my possession I gave my voucher for it. Now, if I was going to do anything wrong with it or put it in my pocket, I would have got it in another way—and I could not get it. Because, I want to tell you that the stingiest man that ever audited an account in my life was John A. McCall. I had to go up and show cause before—well, I had to show cause first, before I went into it, and then when I came back I had to show cause before I could pay my bills. So that I never knew and could not know how the accounts were charged, whether $5,000 was charged to this account or that or the other. I did not keep their books. I had no responsibility for that, and if there were errors and wrong in that, it comes right back to the Board of Trustees of the New York Life, and to nobody else.

More Chapters to Come.

"I am simply, in this interruption of the ordinary course of the hearing today, giving one chapter. The volume will be made of successive chapters. Now about the methods and the vouchers. I have no excuse whatever to offer about the form of the vouchers that were accepted for the disbursement that I made to the various branch agencies.

"The insurance world to-day is the greatest financial proposition in the United States, and as great affairs always command, it commands a higher law. In defending its rights and its property, you cannot stop to kick every cur that comes along and barks; and if you could sweep them out in other, perhaps mysterious, but honest, ways, you are defending and asserting the higher law which great enterprises have a right to command.

"So, I say, when these vouchers were given over they were right, and when the Auditing Committee approved them, then they stand as sponsors for them. If they did not approve them, then they failed to perform their duty. And the reason I come forward now is not to apologize for these vouchers that were given in the form that they were given, but to say that these men with their responsibilities upon their shoulders and not upon mine, have something to account for. They may talk about the Yellow Dog, but the Yellow Dog is a dog of courage and of loyalty.

"But the curs who stood around this funeral that has occurred, and the curs who knew of these transactions and shrunk into their shoes, they are the curs and that is the reason I come to speak before you and to say that the great interest of $2,000,000,000 of life insurance and $400,000,000 of assets can never be safely intrusted to the hands and administration of a lot of curs.

"I thank you, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen."

So Hamilton was done with the first chapter, and as he finished and started again up the aisle there were many who stood up to grasp him by the hand and more who clapped and clapped until the Assembly Chamber rang. Senator Armstrong made no effort to still the demonstration. Indeed, it would have been useless, for the temper of the crowd, insurance men and all, was not one to be stilled until the tribute had been paid to the man who had stood up and declared himself the Yellow Dog.

Hamilton left the building at once, and said only that when he spoke again it would be so that all might hear, even as it had been to-day.

Mr. Untermyer's Argument.

Samuel Untermyer, who is counsel for the International Committee for Policy Holders of the Mutual and the New York Life Insurance Companies, was next introduced.

"I have listened," he said, "to the eulogies which Mr. McIntosh has passed upon the Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company with a thought that there might be some difference of opinion on that subject, and, after hearing the last speaker, I am confirmed in this idea."

Senator Armstrong put in a word of caution at this point, which Mr. Untermyer smilingly accepted, remarking that the spectacle the company present had just been treated to was one that fairly took his breath away. Then, before taking up his argument, he paid some little attention to the assertions of Mr. McIntosh and of R. B. Moffitt, who had previously spoken for the committee of policy holders organized recently at the Hamilton Club in Brooklyn, of which Alexander E. Orr, now President of the New York Life, is a member. Mr. Moffitt also had delivered the eulogy of the Trustees of the New York Life individually and collectively and had asked the committee not to legislate them out of office. Mr. Untermyer remarked that the position of the administrations of the large companies in desiring to continue in office reminded him somewhat of the attitude of the robber barons of olden times, who were so secure in their enjoyment of their spoils that they questioned the right of the people they had defrauded to the possession of their own property.

Mr. Untermyer said that he represented about 40,000 proxies in the New York and Mutual Life Insurance Companies—"live and continuing proxies," he added, "as distinguished from the antiquated proxies of policy holders who are dead or whose policies have lapsed or been paid, that are slumbering in the archives of the insurance companies, and which have for years constituted the stock in trade on which they have maintained themselves in power without regard to the wishes of the policy holders." Then he continued:

"The gentlemen at the heads of the three great companies who have addressed you ostensibly on behalf of the companies whose policy holders they ought to be representing, although new to their duties and unfamiliar with the insurance business, must be aware that in the stand they are taking against these bills they do not represent the wishes or the sentiment of the policy holders. They are struggling to retain for themselves as much as possible of the vast power and prestige of their predecessors incident to the continued control of these great accumulations.

A Revolution Needed.

"The most important of the reforms recommended, such as the restriction of investments, of the volume of business, of the expenses for new business, of the contingency reserve, the standardizing of forms of policies, and the abolition of deferred dividends, have all been here assailed as radical and revolutionary. These epithets have ceased to strike dread or involve reproach. If the present conditions are the results of conservatism, nothing can be too radical.

"If ever a revolution were needed it is in the business of life insurance."

Mr. Untermyer took up first the proposed restriction of investment, noting that the Equitable in 1904 earned 4.22 per cent. on its invested assets, that the Mutual earned 4.24 per cent., and the New York 4.14 per cent., an average of 4.20 per cent.

"And this result," he added, "was reached after writing off millions in valuations, the effect of which was to increase the percentage or return on the book values of the investments."

Noting that the savings banks, whose investments are limited in a far more radical manner than is now proposed for the investments of life insurance companies, drew better returns from their invested assets than the life insurance companies, when cost of management have been deducted, Mr. Untermyer argued that there could not be much force in the assertion that stock investments were necessary on account of their large dividend return.

"But," he added, "there is another and more important point of view from which this subject should be considered; that is, from the ethical standpoint.

"Insurance is the savings bank provision which a man makes for the protection of his family after death. The insured in the mutual company expects to buy insurance at the cost of conducting that particular business. He does not contemplate going into the banking business or speculating in stocks with the excess premium that he pays in, on the theory that he is to get the excess back. He can generally do his own speculating.

"The suggestion has been made that if these securities are required to be sold in five years they will be corralled by a combination of wicked and designing persons. That could hardly have been meant seriously, in the light of the figures. The three companies now own together about $107,000,000 of these miscalled collateral 'bonds' and $26,000,000 in railway stocks, making a total of $133,000,000. If these securities are required to be sold within five years that would be at the rate of about $26,500,000 per year market value, or at an average of less than 200 shares of stock and less than $70,000 par value of bonds per day, distributed among the numerous classes of holdings.

"A word as to these bank and trust company stocks. From what we now know about them and the unenviable part they have played, five years seems a long time to allow these companies to get out of the banking business.

"Perhaps it is to advance information on that subject that Mr. Paul Morton naively referred when he told you that there were movements already on foot among a small number of men to fix the prices at which the companies would have to sell these stocks to them. Let us at least hope that Mr. Morton's friends are not among the men with such designs. But we must be prepared for surprises and disappointments in these strenuous times of 'high finance.'

"The adoption of Mr. Morton's suggestion to allow the companies to retain 20 per cent. of their bank and trust company stock furnishes no solution. It would be the surest way to subject the companies to the pressure of these men whom he so greatly fears. The control of these banks and trust companies is, of course, far more valuable per share than any less amount of stock. None of them has enough stock to sell the control and still keep 20 per cent. Each of these companies is to-day and will be until it can be rescued, in a sterner grip of a one-man power than at any time of its history.

Perkins Goes It Alone.

"There was a time when Mr. Perkins had at least to go through the form of consulting with Mr. McCall. That is no longer necessary. He does it all himself. So I say that with 20 per cent. of the stock of each of these banks and trust companies safely resting in the vaults of each of these insurance companies, it is a very simple matter on a comparatively small investment for these gentlemen by combination, to control all the banks and trust companies in which the insurance companies are now largely interested.

"If this combination of powerful men of whom Mr. Morton seems to be in such mortal dread, want to control these companies, let them buy them outright. If the companies must face a paper loss, let them do so now, whilst our eyes are upon them. From this time on they may have to reckon with a factor hitherto unknown and despised—the policy holder, who is about to come into his own, if he will only stay awake.

"Unless you safeguard this position against these huge interests, you will see arise from the ashes of this legislation, after the companies get through tinkering with it year by year, the greatest giant of bank and trust company mergers the world has even known."

Mr. Untermyer spoke emphatically in favor of the limitation of the expenses of new business, declaring the agencies of the companies were not proper subjects for consideration and that the policy holders were fairly entitled to some little sympathy at the hands of the company.

From this point he went on: "You owe something to the community outside the insurance world. The vast accumulations of these companies, and the power they wield, are a menace not only to the financial world, but to the cause of good government throughout the country as well. They will continue to be a great power and a menace. The actual assets of the three great companies are about $1,250,000,000. In the vast combinations in the industrial and railway world, the bulk of the capital is invested in fixed plants. Here, however, we have this enormous amount of free capital, most of which can be turned over almost month by month. Therein lies the added danger of these companies to the community."

Mr. Untermyer also upheld the stand taken by the committee in the matter of standardizing policy forms, saying that among the many ways in which policy holders had been cheated in the past the innumerable forms of policies had been the most prolific to this end.

"The New York Life," he said, "has outstanding 316 different forms of policies, the Equitable 224, and the Mutual Life 220. Every time a policy holder has reached the threshold of the courts with his prayer for relief he has found his way barred by one of those forms. Many of them are not contracts of insurance at all, but are largely bonds or other investment securities sold upon false representations. The companies have been in the banking business; they have exploited the community with investments based on representations which have generally proved to be false."

Of deferred dividends Mr. Untermyer said:

"The attempt to defend the deferred dividend plan of insurance seems to have gone so completely by default that nothing further need be said except that it never was within the legitimate sphere of a life insurance company.

"It was devised as a means for gambling on the misfortunes of others. In its operations it has worked out with poetic justice—the live man has been cheated as well as the dead man."

Mr. Untermyer voiced his opinion that the proposed general elections might properly be held before November, and suggested Sept. 1 as a practicable date. In this connection he said:

"We do not believe that the scheme outlined in the main bill for the election of Directors requires that the official lives of the existing boards should be extended for any such length of time. It means an added tenure of office for seven months for the Directors of the New York Life Insurance Company and five months for the Directors of the Mutual Life Insurance Company beyond the dates of the annual meetings.

"Everybody who knows anything about this subject understands that in so far as concerns the affairs of these mutual companies the surface has not even been scratched of the bottomless pit of corruption which extends throughout their operations for years past. The extent to which the policy holders have been robbed cannot become known until the present régime has been turned out and people have been in their places who are in no way responsible for or connected with their misdeeds. The longer that day is delayed the worse it will be for the policy holders.

"The policy holders are not going to be satisfied with suits against the estates of dead men without assets, nor against living men whose assets have been converted into cash and put safely beyond the jurisdiction of the courts, nor against living insolvents. We all know what that means—the suits drag their weary way through the overburdened calendars of the courts with the old managements in control of the sham litigation until public interest has died out and they are either pigeonholed or settled for a pittance on the ground that the proof is no longer available or that no collection could be had.

"So, too, with suits by the Attorney General of the State, if he ever sees fit to begin them—his tenure of office is brief; he goes out of office; his successor regards the suits as an unwelcome legacy; the whole thing gets to be stale and a nightmare in the office, and with a sigh of relief it is tumbled out by the official who feels no personal responsibility for the litigation which was not inaugurated under his régime. The story has been too often told to need repeating."

Mr. Untermyer's final proposition was that the policy holders should not be obliged to name their tickets within thirty days after the companies named theirs, but should be allowed, through a permissive law, to nominate either a ticket for officers or a proxy committee to make such nominations at any time they might see fit prior to the elections.

He said:

"It is difficult enough as it is to get a committee of well-known, public-spirited citizens to face the reprisals that may be inflicted upon them by the powerful financial interests that have corralled these companies for acting on a policy holders' committee. They should not be asked to go through a long campaign of many months. The issue should be made sharp and decisive and as brief as the due protection of the rights of the policy holders will permit. Theirs is the only interest to be coansidered."

Power to Sue.

In favoring the repeal of Section 56 of the insurance law, which at present prohibits any one from suing an insurance company for an accounting unless with the consent of the Attorney General, Mr. Untermyer said:

"The inability of the policy holders to expose the rotten conditions allowed to continue for so many years is due largely to that provision and to the support which it has received from the courts. Under the construction that has been given to that clause every attempt of the defrauded policy holders to get from the companies an accounting that was justly due them has been thwarted."

Henry W. Taft, representing the Mutual Life, asked that the committee so amend its recommendations as to enable the Trustees to be elected in three classes, instead of in two, hereafter, and also to modify the clause directing the sale of stock so that a given amount of the stock now held might be disposed of each year within the time allowed. Mr. Taft thought that this would minimize the moral effect of the process, and cited as evidence of the situation which might be created a letter which he said President Peabody of the Mutual had recently received from a prominent Wall Street man, notifying him that a bear pool had been formed in the stock of the Bank of Commerce and offering the services of the writer to form a bull pool to combat it.

Mr. McIntosh, for the New York Life, addressed himself entirely to the election of Trustees, and protested against legislating all the insurance Trustees out of office on Nov. 15. He said that the Trustees of the New York Life at first, through a disinclination to appear to be seeking their own continuance in office, had thought of making no appearance upon the bills, but, Mr. McIntosh added, the Trustees eventually decided that the interests of the policy holders demanded that they should oppose this particular section. He then went into the same sort of a defense of the board as Mr. Moffitt had made, and was in the midst of this when Andrew Hamilton arrived.

John De Witt Warner, representing the Mutual Life policy holders' committee, of which Bernard N. Baker is Chairman, also appeared before the Legislature to demand a change in the management of the great companies.

The session last night was given over to representatives of a dozen out of the State companies, who opposed about the same features in the Armstrong Committee's scheme as did the representatives of the foreign companies who appeared at last week's hearing.

The hearing was adjourned at 10 o'clock until 11 A. M. to-morrow.

A report was current in Albany to-night that just after his return from Europe Andrew Hamilton went to the New York Life Company and demanded reinstatement in his old place. The refusal was given as the reason for his appearance before the Legislature to-day. No one gave the story credence. The New York Life officials here declined to discuss the matter.

LAWSON CHARGES REBATES.

Says the New York and Mutual Give Them for Proxies.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 15.—Thomas W. Lawson to-day sent the following telegram to Chairman Armstrong of the Insurance Investigating Committee of the New York Legislature:

"It may be of value to your committee to know that immediately after the publication of the report of your committee orders went forth from the New York and the Mutual to agents to cease collecting proxies. Since then grafters have been at work night and day, and after counting noses and tallying assurances that the new law recommended by your committee postponing annual elections can be killed, Buckner, Vice President of the New York Life, was instructed at meeting held yesterday to act, and last night he wired all General Agents and managers as follows:

"Suggest you quietly ask agents to continue securing proxies during balance of month, not interfering, of course, with their solicitations of business. You may have cashier furnish lists of policy holders where you think advisable to agents for this purpose.

"I assure your committee its work was never in greater danger than at present. I have in my custody policies of the New York and the Mutual issued within a few days, signed by the new reform officers—Orr and Peabody—and affidavits from the insured that they received them for nothing but proxy, and in some cases with large rebates."

The Weber is the Piano of the Opera

¶ "Other pianos are good, but I much prefer the Weber because its glorious tone perfectly sustains the voice."
A. SCOTTI.

ANTONIO SCOTTI, the great Baritone of the Conried Metropolitan Opera Co.

IN the early days of opera, and even as late as Rossini's time, it was customary to accompany the recitatives with the piano alone. On "first nights" the composer was supposed to preside at the piano, there to receive the laurels of success or the execrations of failure.

The piano is now seldom heard as an integral part of the grand opera orchestra; but in order to preserve the atmosphere intended by the composer, the recitatives of Mozart's "Don Giovanni" are still accompanied by the piano when this Opera is given at the Metropolitan Opera House.

And it is the Weber Piano that is invariably used.

The wonderful singing quality of this instrument, harmonizing so perfectly with the human voice, makes it preëminently the choice as the official piano of this great opera house as well as the individual choice of the world's greatest singers.

VAN SCHAICK PARTY GETS BANKERS' LIFE

Pays Up $71,000 to Repair the Capital Stock.

'TEMPORARY' BOARD ELECTED

"Officers of Banks and Trust Companies" Will Replace It—The Old Directors All Quit.

The Bankers' Life Insurance Company has at last come under complete control of Eugene Van Schaick and Henry P. Townley, who were forced by the State Department of Insurance to restore to the Life Association of America $50,000 which they voted to themselves as a gift for organizing the association. Until yesterday a voting trust stood in their way. Directors were elected yesterday who promptly elected as President William Hanhart, one of the Van Schaick following.

H. K. Stokes, the New Jersey Governor's brother, who has been running the Bankers' Life since President Vorhees resigned last Fall, resigned at the stockholders' meeting yesterday, and with him all the officers who fought the Van Schaick-Townsley faction quit. All the old Directors resigned, too. Now Van Schaick and Townsley have control through the Knickerbocker Investment Company, which owns 626 shares of the Bankers' Life.

The Directors elected yesterday were described by Mr. Van Schaick as "temporary." Other persons used the adjective "dummy" to describe them. Mr. Van Schaick himself refused to talk with reporters, but his secretary carried in and asked for a comment on the following note:

It is said that at the meeting of the Bankers' Life this morning the Board of Directors was filled up with dummies and that only three or four of the permanent Directors were present, Mr. Hanhart being elected President by these dummies.

In a few moments the Secretary returned with this answer in Mr. Van Schaick's writing:

The impairment of the capital stock has been made good and the money paid in. The Directors elected are mostly temporary, and will be replaced by a strong board, which will be announced in a few days. The great majority of the board will consist of officers of banks and trust companies.

Directors Not Prominent.

The make-up of the new board is illuminating as to the methods which may be employed by a controlling interest to gain its ends. Four of them are employed in Mr. Van Schaick's office, one is said to be a storekeeper of Madison, N. J., and several are men whose qualifications to be Directors of an insurance company cannot be judged, for the reason that they are unknown here. Here they are:

Robert C. Sands, President of the Strollers' Club.
John W. Haulenbeck, brother-in-law of Van Schaick.
P. B. Armstrong, once an officer of the Union Life Insurance Company.
Clarence W. Armstrong, his son.
Lucius Teter of Chicago.
Ernst F. Ayrault.
George Bretell.
E. Howard Foster, said to be a clerk in Van Schaick's office.
John A. Tiger, who is connected with the Knickerbocker Investment Company.
George E. De Camp, who is connected with the Knickerbocker Investment Company.
Samuel H. Buck, Wilson Brice, and John W. Vincent, all Directors of the Life Association of America.
George Bretell.
Ernst W. Schoeneberger, who is connected with the Knickerbocker Investment Company.
William A. Cable.
Thomas B. Paton, proprietor of The Banking Law Journal.
Eugene Van Schaick.
William Hanhart.
George G. Van Schaick.
J. B. Docherty, Jr.
Henry S. Julier.

Henry P. Townsley is not an officer or a Director of the Bankers' Life, and, according to President Hanhart, will not be. Before the list of Directors was obtained Mr. Hanhart was asked if Mr. Van Schaick would be among them. He replied:

"Yes, I am glad to say that we shall have Mr. Van Schaick's services. He is a clever and capable man."

New President's Statement.

Mr. Hanhart is now Secretary of the savings bank section of the American Bankers' Association. For two years he acted as Secretary of the Knickerbocker Investment Company, and up to three years ago was Deputy Controller of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank. He gave out this statement yesterday afternoon:

"I have been elected President of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company, not as a representative of any faction or any class of stockholders, but because of my long and thorough training in finances, especially along lines of conservative investments and knowledge of values.

"I have been connected with savings banks the better part of my life, and it is a well-understood fact that our savings banks to-day represent the most conservative element in the financial world.

"The affairs of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company are not unfamiliar to me, as I was a member of the original Bank Clerks' Mutual Benefit Association, which in 1893 developed into the Bankers' Life Insurance Company; I was a member of the committee having in charge the merging of this fraternal association into a regular insurance company, and then served for six years on the Directorate of the Bankers' Life Insurance Company, leaving it in 1899.

"It seemed evident from the report of the Insurance Department in its thorough investigation lately completed that the affairs of the company had not been satisfactorily administered, resulting in a technical impairment of its capital; it was, however, also shown on this examination that the company's investments were of a high grade, and taking into account the excellent character of its business the holders of the stock have made good this technical impairment and the company is undoubtedly now on a perfectly sound basis.

"All the former officers and Directors have tendered their resignations, and about eighteen prominent bankers, Presidents, Vice Presidents, and officers of representative banks, savings banks, and trust companies have been invited to constitute the new Board of Directors, who will have entire charge of the affairs of the company. Many of them have already accepted. They represent the young element of administration field of activity, and there is no question but that the company has a bright future before it. New business will be had through modern and progressive methods, and I can promise a clean, economical, and conservat[illegible] administration."

Examination of the Bankers' Life by the Insurance Department last December disclosed an impairment of $71,596.57 in the capital stock of $100,000. Supt. Hendricks immediately issued an order forbiding the company to continue writing business until this impairment should be made up.

The Knickerbocker Investment Company made up the impairment by giving a check for the full amount yesterday. That is how Van Schaick and Townsley, through their control of the Knickerbocker, regained control of the Bankers' Life.

Henry P. Townsley was General Manager of the Bankers' Life years ago. In 1897 he was discharged from the company, but two years later succeeded in getting the stock control. With him in the deal was Eugene Van Schaick, counsel for the Life Association of America. They forgot to obtain the resignation of the Directors.

As a result, the minority interests managed to get a voting trust, composed of Gov. Stokes of New Jersey, ex-Gov. Vorhees of New Jersey, and William Scherer, President of the Clearing House.

Voting Trust Dissolved.

The voting trust was dissolved by mutual agreement yesterday. The impairment of capital had to be made up by May of this year. If the minority interest had put up the money they would have gained little by it, for the reason that the voting trust was to run only until December, 1907.

Then the control would revert to the majority stockholders, or the Knickerbocker Investment Company, that is, to Van Schaick and Townsley. In that case the $71,000 would have been wasted by the minority. The latter, therefore, let the majority put up the $71,000 and take control.

That is the reason why there was no friction at all at the stockholders' meeting yesterday. All the old Directors resigned and the new ones were chosen without contest. Once chosen, they unanimously voted for Mr. Hanhart as President. The new Secretary was authorized to cast one ballot for the entire board.

Frank G. Combes, an employe of the Bankers' Life for the last twenty years, was made Secretary, and J. B. Docherty, Jr., was made Treasurer.

H. K. Stokes, after the resignation of President Vorhees, served as Acting President without salary. In resigning yesterday he turned over to the new Treasurer $1,050,000 in securities. Both Mr. Stokes and Mr. Hanhart agree in saying that these securities are of the very first class.

They are described as gilt-edged bonds. When he let go the securities Mr. Stokes completely severed his connection with the company. Henceforth he will have nothing to do with it.

Securities All Good.

In connection with his resignation Mr. Stokes said:

"I have left the company, and the other officers who have served with me have done the same. The securities owned by the Bankers' Life are of excellent character. They could be thrown upon the market to-day, and none of them would sell below par. The Knickerbocker Investment Company now holds control through ownership of a majority of the stock."

Among those who resigned with Mr. Stokes was Dr. J. G. Atkinson of Brooklyn, who had served as Medical Director of the company.

The Bankers' Life got a great deal of attention from the Armstrong Investigating Committee. Charles E. Hughes incorporated a special chapter about it in the Armstrong report to the Legislature. In this chaputer Mr. Hughes said:

"The expenses have very largely exceeded the loadings upon the premiums. Recently economies have been introduced. The salary of the President, who resigned in November, was $8,000. The former Third Vice President, [Mr. Stokes,] who received a salary of $4,000, is now Acting President without salary."

Richard Morgan, a Director of the company, was on the stand before the Armstrong Committee in the City Hall. He told how the Bankers' Life was originally the Bank Clerks' Mutual Life Association, and how this was changed into a regular insurance company.

He also told how the Bankers' Life encountered a "chilly atmosphere" when it went to Albany to ask Louis F. Payn, Superintendent of Insurance, for permission to take advantage of a law allowing the Mutual Reserve to give a cash surrender value on its policies. Mr. Morgan said he was told at Albany that "the law was passed for the Mutual Reserve."

Thereupon the Bankers' Life set about employing counsel who would "be listened to" at Albany. This counsel was Gen. John W. Hogan of Syracuse. To use Mr. Morgan's expression, "the atmosphere had changed" when Gen. Hogan appeared for the Bankers' Life.

Of the Life Association of America, Townsley's concern, the Armstrong report said:

"The company seems to have paid its death claims promptly and has properly emphasized this fact in its advertisements, but with respect to other matters it has practiced gross deception in order to obtain business.

"Only about one-half the business written remains upon the books. This company alone, of all the companies doing business in New York, to whom application was made for such information, refused to make and furnish the computations required for the gain and loss exhibit for the first year of insurance."

MIDDIES' TRADE UNION.

Designed to Prevent a High Standard of Scholarship.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Midshipmen at Annapolis have been conspiring to prevent a high standard of scholarship, according to the statement of Secretary Bonaparte before the House Committee on Naval Affairs to-day. Brilliancy has been discouraged, and a sort of trades union agreement to hold all midshipmen on a dead level, so far as class records are concerned, has been in existence. There has been a tendency to place the man who barely passes on a plane with those having higher records, and anything like superior records has been discouraged.

Secretary Bonaparte added that a recent order for the graduation in September of members of the senior class who have good averages and holding the others until six months later had already affected the combination against high grades and improved class records.

The Secretary objected to amendments to his anti-hazing bill in the Senate which provide that midshipmen may upon their own petition be tried by court-martial for hazing. He said this would be fatal to discipline, and urged the passage, without amendment, of his bill for graduated punishment.

ANNAPOLIS, March 15.—The Academy Board has consented to the resignation of thirteen more midshipmen. William F. Leyland of Kansas, who was a member of the fourth class, but who resigned, has been reappointed, and entered the Naval Academy to-day.

BRONX FARMS FOR SETTLERS.

Quarter-Acre Allotments Provided for the Needy to Work.

Quarter-acre allotments in the Bronx are to be provided this year free of charge for more than 120 persons by Bolton Hall. He discussed the scheme last night at his house, 33 East Sixty-first Street, and declared it was very far from being an experiment.

"Eight years ago we tried settling persons in allotments at Astoria and met with great success," he said. "At Philadelphia, Detroit, and Toledo the plan has been working for years.

"The Astors have granted a tract of thirty-three acres in the Bronx, in the Bear Swamp Road, near Morris Park. We get it free and intend to let it out free, in quarter-acre lots, to men who want to learn something about the use of land. We shall provide the seed and tools, and there will be a Superintendent to direct their efforts without charge to themselves.

"We expect that from these lots a man will be able to raise enough vegetables to support himself and family and have enough to sell to meet the rest of his expenses for the Summer. In Philadelphia, where they have about 900 of these allotments, the men make on an average $40 a head."

DYING WIFE BIT HIM.

A Bayonne Man Now Thought to Have Hyprophobia, Like Her.

John Alford, 50 years old, of 96 West Forty-eighth Street, Bayonne, is in the Bayonne Hospital suffering, it is thought, from hydrophobia. He had displayed symptoms of the disease for several days, and his family, unable to control him, summoned the police yesterday.

Twelve years ago Alford's wife died of hydrophobia of the bite of a dog. Just before her death she bit her husband, who was holding her, on the arm. The wound healed and Alfred paid little attention to it, but the bite is supposed to be responsible for his condition now.

WOULDN'T VOTE TO PUT PLATT AND DEPEW OUT

County Committee Tables a Resolution Attacking Them.

DIRECT NOMINATIONS KILLED

The Quigg Party Votes Down President Parson's Pet Scheme at Republicans' Meeting.

Resolutions demanding the resignation or expulsion of both Senators Platt and Depew from the United States Senate were introduced at the meeting of the Republican County Committee last night. They caused a sensation, but barely had James A. Allen, the introducer, started in on a speech denouncing the two Senators before he was choked off, and the resolutions were ordered laid on the table.

It was at the end of an interesting and lively meeting of the committee that Mr. Allen, who comes from the Ninth District, obtained recognition and then started in to attack the Senators before he offered his resolution.

"It is to our shame," he said, "that we are without representatives in the Senate of the United States. It would really be better if the two seats actually were vacant, because then there would be no one to misrepresent the people and the party—"

Lemuel E. Quigg, who has been running the County Committee and its Executive Committee, too, for the last month, made a point of order, and compelled Mr. Allen to send his resolution to the desk to be read. The resolution was:

Whereas, The recent disclosures respecting the private and political life of Thomas C. Platt and Chauncey M. Depew, Senators from the State of New York, have established by sworn testimony what has long been the general conviction that they were morally and politically unworthy of membership in the Senate of the United States; and

Whereas, Their presence in the Senate of the United States is a shameful reflection upon the honor, morals, and dignity of the great and prosperous people of the State of New York, an insult to the several States represented in the Senate, and a menace to the cause of free government; and

Whereas, The Republican County Committee of the County of New York holds in high esteem the honor and dignity of the Federal Senate, and

Whereas, The usefulness of Thomas C. Platt and Chauncey M. Depew as Senators from the State of New York has in all respects ceased, it is

Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that the said Thomas C. Platt and Chauncey M. Depew should forthwith resign from the Senate of the United States, and that in default of such resignation they should be promptly expelled therefrom.

At the conclusion of the reading Mr. Quigg moved as a point of order that the subject matter was entirely out of the province of the County Committee, but on this he was overruled by Chairman Parsons. Tax Commissioner Raymond then promptly moved that the resolution be laid on the table.

A viva voce vote was taken on this, with the result that the mass of members shouted in favor of tabling the resolutions, while there were only a few scattered and feeble voices raised against that disposition. After that an adjournment was promptly taken.

Prior to this Mr. Quigg succeeded in having the County Committee put an effective quietus on the pet direct nominations plan of President Parsons, except in so far as it related to the election of district leaders.

In getting the County Committee to take this stand Mr. Quigg simply accomplished the movement which he began in the Executive Committee some weeks ago, and which he brought to an issue there last Saturday, when the district leaders stood by him and outvoted Mr. Parsons three to one. Mr. Parsons last night gracefully acquiesced in most of the outcome.

At the beginning of the meeting, which was held in the Murray Hill Lyceum, Charles K. Lexow, as Chairman of a sub-committee of the Executive Committee, offered a report, declaring that direct nominations were inexpedient at this time, except as they related to the election of district leaders. The argument of the report was that an entire direct nominations plan would enable the Tammany district leaders to control the Republican organization in strong Tammany districts.

Mr. Lexow also spoke for the report and urged that all attempts to bring about direct nominations be deferred. His report was signed by Messrs. Eldman, McKee, Ten Eyck, and Wilson. Two resolutions also were offered by Mr. Lexow to be voted on at the next meeting. The first declared the direct nominations plan to be inexpedient at this time, and the second amended the rules so as to have the candidates for district leaders voted for on the regular primary ballot.

A surprise was sprung by Mr. Quigg, who gave notice that at the next meeting he would move an amendment to the Lexow resolution so that in the future the Executive Committee would be composed only of district leaders and the President of the County Committee. That would cut off four of the present ex officio votes, those of the two Vice Presidents of the County Committee, the Treasurer, and the Chairman of the Finance Committee.

William H. Wadhams, who was Chairman of President Parsons's committee to draft a plan for direct nominations, presented his report and then, in harmony with the Lexow report, asked that it be merely received and made a part of the records of the committee. Abraham Gruber stirred up things a bit by coming out in favor of the direct nominations plan and describing the sidetracking of the main plan and the adoption of the district leader plan as trying to throw a sop to the people.

The Gruber argument, however, was overridden, and the Lexow motions prevailed by an overwhelming viva voce vote. The committee also adopted the Koenig report and resolutions indorsing the corrupt practices bills now pending at Albany. The committee on contested seats reported in favor of seating Herman Joveshof and his members from the Thirteenth District, against the protest of Michael H. Blake. William Halpin supported the Blake contestants, but Blake himself withdrew from the contest, and Joveshof was unanimously seated.

Earlier in the day the Executive Committee met, and Mr. Quigg then administered a knock-out blow to Senator Elsberg on the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill. Elsberg argued in favor of having a committee named to investigate the comparative merits of the rapid transit bills and support one of those pending. Samuel S. Koenig offered a resolution favoring this, but Mr. Quigg got the committee to table it.

Then Mr. Quigg turned his attention to President Parsons's tentative plan for reapportioning the city. This plan will soon be put up to the Legislature. For weeks Mr. Parsons and his friends have been working on this apportionment, which relates to the Senate district on the basis of the late State census. He wanted the committee to approve the plan yesterday, but Mr. Quigg objected, and had the entire matter referred to a committee of seven district leaders, yet to be appointed.

SEMBRICH'S HUSBAND HURT.

Thrown Through Auto Window—His Hat Probably Saved His Life.

William Stengel, husband of Mme. Sembrich, the prima donna, is nursing painful injuries at the Hotel Savoy as the result of an automobile accident. On Wednesday night he accompanied Mr. Dippel, the tenor, to the Hamburg-American Line pier, in Hoboken, to see Mme. Dippel off on the Deutschland. A number of the wives of the opera singers were returning to Europe, among them being Mrs. Enrico Caruso, Mrs. Marcel Journet, Mrs. Burgstaller, Mrs. Goritz, and Mrs. Muhlmann.

About 10:30 o'clock Mr. Stengel and Mr. Dippel set out to return to their hotel in an electric brougham of the New York Transportation Company. The chauffeur was driving at a good clip and took the exit badly. Instead of keeping well to the right he was too much in the centre of the road, and the machine hit the iron post standing in the middle of the entrance to the pier.

The automobile was stopped suddenly. Arndt, the chauffeur, was thrown from his seat, and the battery was broken away from its fastenings. Mr. Stengel was sent flying through the front window. His hat probably saved his life, but the jagged glass cut him very severely. Mr. Dippel, who had escaped with a severe shaking, hurried to his aid and found the blood was streaming from cuts about his neck and face. With the aid of the chauffeur he carried him back to the Deutschland.

Dr. Boccious, the ship's surgeon, attended the injured man. It was found that the worst cut was at the back of the neck, and another severe one was under the right ear. Mr. Stengel was very weak before the flow of blood could be stopped.

It was 1 o'clock before he was well enough to be moved, and then Mr. Dippel took him back to the Savoy Hotel. Mme. Sembrich had been kept in ignorance of the accident.

Yesterday morning Dr. R. G. Wieher of 48 East Sixty-fifth Street was called in. Dr. W. T. Bull of 35 West Thirty-fifth Street also saw Mr. Stengel. Dr. Wiener said last night that the cuts were not dangerous, and that the patient should be about again in a week. Mme. Sembrich, who will not start on tour till Sunday, and a trained nurse are in attendance on the injured man.

At 9 o'clock last night it was stated he was resting quietly.

COURT CHECKS MRS. MIZNER.

She Refuses to Act as Executrix—No Money Without Court Order.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 15.—When the Yerkes will was proved and admitted to probate to-day, Judge Cutting issued an order directing all stocks, bonds, and cash moneys of the estate to be deposited with the Central Trust Company of Illinois. "Further," said the court order, "no such stocks, bonds, securities, or cash moneys shall be withdrawn therefrom except by order of this court or upon vouchers approved by the Central Trust Company."

This order will act as an effectual block upon any efforts of Mrs. Mizner, or her young husband, to draw money from the estate without the sanction of the court and executor. Clarence Knight, attorney for the estate, who attended to the probating of the will, called the special attention of newspaper men to the order, and smiled significantly as he did so.

Mrs. Mizner's attitude toward the administration of the estate became definitely known for the first time to-day. Clarence Knight announced that she had declined to act as executrix. It had been given out before that her chief purpose in coming to Chicago was to serve in such capacity. Louis K. Owsley was appointed sole executor. He gave an individual bond for $6,000,000.

Mrs. Mizner was not present. The witnesses to the will were Clarence Knight and Frank K. Waller, formerly Mr. Yerkes's private secretary.

F. H. Roeschlaub and W. T. Nelson were appointed appraisers of the estate. The former is General Manager of the Suburban Railway and the latter is connected with Mr. Knight's office. A third appraiser will be appointed by the court later.

TO SETTLE WITH CANADA.

Direct Negotiation on Matters Left by Joint High Commission.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Chandler P. Anderson of New York has been selected by Secretary Root to prepare for the active state of negotiation a number of issues between the United States and Canada left unsettled by the joint high commission which met in Washington in the Winter of 1898 and 1899. These relate to the delimitation of boundaries and fishery rights, the bonding privileges on Canadian railroads entering the United States, the seal controversy, and other matters.

Correspondence which has taken place on a semi-official basis between officials in the United States and Canada has given ground for the hope that some at least of these issues which have long threatened the good relations of the Dominion with the United States may be quickly and satisfactorily adjusted by direct negotiations.

MARCH 1906

PARKHURST PLOT A LIE, BUT MOSS BELIEVED IT

Sent a Letter Saying So, as the Head Villain Confessed.

R. A. KELLY "ACCUSED" NOW

Everybody Shakes Hands with Sergt. Shiels and Policeman Phelan—Rogers Held for Perjury.

The hearing on the alleged police plot to assassinate the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst ended yesterday with "Larry" Rogers, chief accuser of Sergt. John H. Shiels of the West 100th Street Station and Patrolman John Phelan, being held in $15,000 bail on a charge of perjury. He admitted on the stand that the affidavits he had made accusing them of the plot were false in their entirety. Detectives were looking last night for Richard Wilson, the young man who corroborated Rogers's story.

About half an hour before he was to enter the room where the hearing was held, District Attorney Jerome received a letter from Frank Moss, counsel for the Parkhurst society, who first called Mr. Jerome's attention to the charges. The letter was sent over to the Criminal Courts Building by messenger. It attested Mr. Moss's abiding faith in Rogers and the story he told. Here it is:

March 15, 1906.

My Dear Mr. Jerome: My experience with Wilson dissipated the doubt that I had of Rogers's story. I am convinced that it is true. The unfortunate publicity and notice to Shiels and Phelan prevent any further detective work, and may prevent the making of a case, but I think that Rogers and Wilson should be believed, and should be protected. If these men should be prosecuted for giving information it would deter others from giving information. Yours truly, FRANK MOSS.

Hon. William Travers Jerome, District Attorney.

The hearing had not been in progress one minute before the whole melodramatic yarn of the assassination plot fell to the ground. Sergt. Shiels was in court, and so was Patrolman Phelan, in response to summonses. Both were willing to waive the right of being represented by counsel, but Mr. Jerome insisted that this formality be observed and all their rights protected, and a short adjournment was taken to allow Louis J. Grant, who represented the two defendants, to reach the building. The hearing, which in the last moment was changed from a secret inquiry to a public proceeding, was held in the private examination room at the Tombs Court with Magistrate Wahle presiding.

Rogers was immediately called to the stand. He said he was 51 years old, lived at 850 Columbus Avenue, and had a wife and nine children. Mr. Jerome showed the witness eight affidavits made by him, and after he had identified the signatures, asked him if the statements in them were true.

"They are not," said Rogers.

"How much of the statements are untrue?" asked Mr. Jerome.

"Everything in the affidavits is untrue."

"Then why did you come down here and lie about it?"

"Well," said Rogers, "I was working for Mr. Kelly of the Citizens' Union during election time, and after things had begun to get slack he came to me one day and said: 'There is a —— up your way, Sergt. Shiels; let us go after him.' Kelly made the balls and I simply fired them. He told me that if we got up a good scheme I would have a job for life, and then he wanted me to get somebody who could corroborate the story. I brought Wilson. He said he thought Wilson was too young, but I thought he would do all right."

"Did you ever speak to Phelan?" asked Mr. Jerome.

"I never spoke to him in my life," said the witness.

Rogers identified Robert A. Kelly, who was in court. Mr. Kelly is Secretary of the Brooklyn Branch of the Citizens' Union. He accompanied Mr. Jerome on his speechmaking tours last campaign and made some speeches himself. The witness then said Kelly had taken him up to the house of Dr. Parkhurst and later to the office of Frank Moss, where he made a few affidavits.

"Did Moss know anything about this business?" asked Mr. Jerome.

"No, Moss didn't know anything about it at all," said Rogers.

Q.—Then you and Kelly put up this job together and agreed to bring this accusation against Shiels and Phelan? A.—Kelly wanted me to work up a job against them. He said he had it in for them and for Detective Reardon of your office and Capt. McDermott and Detective Sergeant Hahn. He said these men were the brains of the department. He said we might as well start off with Shiels, as Dr. Parkhurst hated him, and if we could make him believe that we could land Shiels we would have a job for life.

Q.—Was it suggested that you should slug old Parkhurst? What did Kelly tell you to do? A.—He told me to go to Parkhurst and tell Parkhurst that Shiels had hired me to kill him. I did go.

Q.—When you came down to me and told me about the story you did not say a word about Kelly, but said that Shiels and Phelan had hired you to do the job. A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—And didn't I tell you that the matter was important if true, but that I didn't know whether you were a fraud or not, and didn't I tell you to get together with Wilson somewhere where my detectives could overhear your conversation? A.—That's right, boss.

After he had called on Mr. Jerome Rogers got Wilson to go on Feb. 16 to his flat, where they had a talk in the parlor. County Detectives Platt and Marsden were hidden in an adjoining bedroom taking down the conversation until the perspiration dropped from their brows. The dialogue had all been agreed upon between the witness and Wilson, who is somewhat of an actor.

It was weird. The two sleuths might have thought they were witnessing a scene from a Western melodrama with two villains on the stage at once. Platt kept the record, and turned it over to Assistant District Attorney Hart, who carried to his chief in a great hurry. Mr. Jerome looked at it and then said with his most skeptical smile:

"Those two birds seem to be real hot stuff."

Mr. Jerome lost no time taking the two men before Magistrate Wahle, where they were compelled to swear to their accusations in affidavits.

After Rogers had told his story Mr. Jerome explained to the Magistrate that he had had his doubts regarding the truth of the affidavits, but as the charges had been taken seriously by such men as Dr. Parkhurst and Mr. Moss, he had no choice in the matter.

"Suppose I had refused to entertain them, and Dr. Parkhurst had stumbled on the street and bumped his head, we would have had another McAuliffe case," said the District Attorney in court yesterday.

He then directed Sergt. Shiels to make a short affidavit on which Rogers was held for perjury. He also issued a warrant for Wilson, who is believed to have fled the city.

Mr. Jerome said last night that he had not the slightest doubt that the story of Rogers reflecting on Mr. Kelly was untrue. "I believe Kelly to be the very soul of honor," he said.

Magistrate Wahle and practically everybody in court shook hands with Sergt. Shiels and Policeman Phelan and expressed their pleasure at the unmasking of Rogers. The examination in the perjury charge has been set for this afternoon.

OPPOSE LITTLE BOARD SALE.

Brokers Object to Plan of Sharing with Produce Exchange.

Another objection was brought forward yesterday by those members of the "Little Board" who are opposing the project to sell the Consolidated Exchange Building at Broadway and Exchange Place. One of the features of the selling plan was a scheme to share with the Produce Exchange at least temporarily, part of the big floor of the building at Bowling Green.

This idea has been bitterly opposed by a majority of the commission houses on the "Little Board," who say that it will injure the prestige of the Consolidated to be identified with the Produce Exchange, which has been losing its importance year by year as grain speculation has been leaving this centre for Chicago.

It was recalled yesterday, as an objection on the part of the Produce Exchange to the Consolidated taking up quarters with it, that a rule of the Stock Exchange forbids all wire messenger service between offices of Exchange members and a building occupied by the "Little Board." This would cut off Stock Exchange houses from direct grain quotation service.

HOUSE TO FIGHT SENATE ON STATEHOOD BILL

Republican Caucus Votes to Reject the Amendments.

SPEAKER RESISTS PRESSURE

His Attitude, If Persisted In, Will Result in Refusal of Statehood to Oklahoma.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—By a vote of 125 to 43, with 81 absentees, the Republican caucus voted to-day to direct its conferrees on the Statehood bill not to concur in the Senate amendments. Translated, this means that the Speaker dragooned through the caucus an order to keep Oklahoma out of the Union unless New Mexico and Arizona are welded into one State and admitted with it.

There was no necessity for the extremely radical step which the Speaker was so reluctant to take—the remanding of the bill to the Territories Committee for suffocation without the House taking action on it at all. It will come up Monday, when the instructions agreed on to-day will be given to the House conferrees, and the battle will begin again.

This time the Speaker and his men are on the defensive. It is no longer a question of Statehood for four Territories; it is the naked question whether Oklahoma shall or shall not be admitted to the Union. In the Southwest the feeling on the subject is strong, and a Congressional election is coming on.

The Senate will not yield, and if the Speaker fights to the end the result will be the refusal of Statehood to Oklahoma, the only State created by the bill as it passed the Senate. So difficult is the Speaker's position that in the caucus today he made a special personal appeal to the Republicans of Missouri and Kansas, saying he knew their people felt strongly on the subject of Oklahoma's rights, but urging them nevertheless to stand by the organization.

The Speaker has been bombarded with telegrams from North, East, South, and West urging him to yield and let Oklahoma in, but he preserves an adamantine front. Privately he and his lieutenants have tried to convince the friends of Oklahoma in the House that the fight started to-day is only for effect, and that in the end Oklahoma will be allowed to get in any way if her friends join the Speaker in presenting for a while a united front to the Senate.

But the Oklahoma men do not believe him and see only ruin ahead for the proposed State. Their leaders say that the Oklahoma bill is dead. They say that when the bill comes up on Monday the previous question will be moved and no one will be recognized for the purpose of moving a concurrence in the Senate amendments.

Just before the House adjourned so as to give the chamber to the Republicans for their caucus John Sharp Williams took the floor and made a vigorous appeal in behalf of the admission of Oklahoma.

"I have to talk to you now," he said, "because it is my last chance, and in a few minutes it will be too late. You are confronted by the naked question, which you cannot avoid: Shall the State of Oklahoma be admitted or not? Shall these people, as intelligent as any in Connecticut or Illinois, or Mississippi, who will be entitled the day after their admission to send eight Representatives to this House, be received into the number of States, or shall they be kept out by a parliamentary device?

"That the Speaker has the power to send that bill from his desk back to committee no man will deny, but I deny that he has the right to do it. Any man in this House has the right to move to concur in the Senate amendments, whether he has the power or not is another matter. If that action is pursued it will be the most high-handed act of tyranny that ever took place at that Speaker's desk since the American Congress was organized.

"I say to you Republicans from Missouri, vote to keep Oklahoma out and then go back to your constituents if you dare. The whole west of the river has its eyes on this matter. Kill this bill and everybody west of the Mississippi River will know that the Republican Party is dominated by the northeastern section, which is struggling to preserve its ascendency."

MRS. TODD'S WILL PROBATED.

Beneficiaries Will Appeal in Effort to Oust the Executor.

The will of Mrs. Margaretta Todd, drawn on Jan. 23, 1902, was admitted to probate yesterday by Surrogate Fitzgerald. An appeal will be taken. The instrument was contested by Mrs. Rosalie Tousey and Milton Berolsheim, daughter and grandson of Mrs. Todd, the chief beneficiaries. The trial of the contest, the purpose of which was to oust Ingersoll Lockwood, the executor, who had been Mrs. Todd's confidential adviser for many years, lasted three days.

The contestants held that a later will had been executed, with Mrs. Tousey as executrix. The property disposed of amounted to $150,000. The Von Hoffman apartment house in West Twenty-sixth Street is the largest asset of the estate.

Mrs. Todd, who was an eccentric old woman of 80 or more, lived at the Von Hoffman, as did Lockwood, (at her expense, according to his testimony,) until he was ordered away. On Oct. 27 last, Mrs. Todd, wearing valuable jewelry, a wig, and a striking gown, left the Von Hoffman to visit some town in New Jersey. That night her body was found on the tracks of the Reading Railroad near Philadelphia. She had been robbed. The authorities never have determined the cause of death nor have they accounted for her presence on the railroad tracks.

Bill Helps ex-Detective Sergeants.

ALBANY, March 15.—Senator Fitzgerald's bill relating to the re-employment of former Detective Sergeants, passed the Senate to-day without opposition. It provides that the Police Commissioner of New York may in his discretion reinstate any Detective Sergeant who has been retired within two years.

THE SOCIETY OF ARTISTS.

The Twenty-eighth and Last Exhibition Is Worthy of Its Traditions.

Curiosity will be felt to see how the Society of American Artists manages the last exhibition it is to hold under the name which, for more than a quarter of a century has represented the younger band of painters, and at its annual shows has welcomed more artists of note in other parts of the country than any other society in the city. On Wednesday the Academy accepted the amendments to the constitution which put a final touch to the negotiations and so we may now consider the members of the society as Associates of the National Academy of Design. The next step will be the election of a certain number of Associates into the ranks of Academicians.

The Society, if it still can be called so, has placed an excellent exhibition on its walls. We observe no funeral wreaths or other signs of death, unless the big draped figure by Abbott H. Thayer which occupies the centre of the north wall in the Vanderbilt Gallery be regarded as a classic representative of the angel of death. She is lent by Mr. Charles L. Freer of Detroit. Her large white wings are outlined against a sky full of radiating sunbeams. Thayer has painted better things in this line, but it is treated in a big vein and contrasts well with the smaller canvases on the same wall.

In this gallery we have a capital Dutch shorescape by William Ritschel, "The Schelpen-Fisher, Katwyck," a nocturne by Walter Nettleton, "Midnight and Waning Moon," a good landscape by J. Francis Murphy, "Summer Morning," and a very bright and attractive seastrait by Irving R. Wiles, called "Shelter Island, L. I." Other noteworthy landscapes in the same room are Charles Warren Eaton's "The Clearing," Jules Turcas's "Late Afternoon," Emil Carlsen's "Lazy Sea," Elmer Schofield's "Sand Dunes, Lelant," Mrs. Charlotte Coman's "Upland Farm," Leonard Ochtman's "Dawn," Cullen Yates's "Spring." But the figures and portraits crowd the landscapes out. Mr. Robert Henri has three full-length portraits in his peculiar style of powerful contrasts, of which "Young Woman in White and Brown" is the most characteristic. He gives his sitters a Spanish look and, indeed, his work often suggests Ribera and Zurbaran. Among the other portraits notable in this gallery are a bust likeness by George de Forest Brush, two children by Miss Lydia Field Emmet, a half length of Dr. John W. Burgess by Irving R. Wiles, "Little Miss Muffet" by Mrs. Louise Cox, and "Beatrice" by Sergeant Kendall. The last named has also a family group of wife and two children, which is as unusually successful in brushwork as it is fine in composition. The portrait of Irving R. Wiles by William T. Smedley is vivacious in expression and excellent in style. The portrait of an old lady by Philip Hale and that of Miss Lawson by Alphonse Jongers, "Portrait of an Artist" by William M. Chase, and a likenesss of Dr. Roland G. Curtin by Smedley should not be overlooked.

Of figures more ideal than exactly belonging to portraiture note J. J. Shannon's girlish head, Irving Wiles's "Purple Shawl," T. W. Dewing's "Lute Player," with an enormous musical instrument on her lap; F. Luis Mora's "Don Diego, the Gypsy," a Picaresque figure in a slouch hat; Howard Gardiner Cushing's "The Black Fan," a pale-skinned, large-eyed lady in black feather, hat, and fan, and a white dress, and Alden Weir's "Fur Pelisse," an interesting head with downcast eyes.

The nudes in the Vanderbilt include "The Temptation," by Andrew T. Schwartz, "Susanna at the Bath," by Hugo Ballin, and "Au Bord du Loing," a marble statuette of a boy, by F. M. L. Tonetti. One of the prize-winning pictures this year has several nude figures.

Awards have been decreed to Mr. Childe Hassam, who takes the Carnegie prize of $500 with his "June," a big canvas on the east wall showing bathers, nude women, standing in a maze of golden foliage and golden crinkly waves like a tapestry with somewhat unreal landscape and figures; to Mr. Edward W. Redfield, who receives the Webb prize of $300 for his Winter landscape "The Delaware River," in the South Gallery, a broad expanse of stream, brown hills, and fields cut by sweeps and patches of snow and ice, and to Miss Lydia Field Emmet, who has captured the Julia A. Shaw prize of $300 with her "Boy in White." The Shaw prize of $300 for the best figure composition has not yet been awarded.

The society's room to the right as one approaches the South Gallery from the street has a number of striking pieces. Here are Eli Harvey's capital bronze seated greyhound "Adonis" and his "Lion Cub, Surprised"; Mrs. Gail Sherman's happy family for a dial, a young girl leaning over to watch a lizard whose erect head acts as the finger for the shade on the gnomon, a charming bit in bronze, and Albert Humphreys's "Cubs Playing," a small bronze group. Mrs. Louise Cox has a little girl in a long pink dress and pink ribbons holding up her hands to play "cat's cradle," very amusing and very freshly and spiritedly painted. Walter Nettleton shows two good Winter scenes, "Melting Snow" and "Clearing After Snow and Wind," and Rockwell Kent a powerful shorescape called "Northwest Wind."

The south, central, and other galleries have many pictures and statues which deserve mention, but will have to wait for later comment. The society seems determined to snuff itself out after a blaze of glory. Certainly of recent years it has not had a better exhibition.

GAMBLER LOCKS WIFE IN AND KILLS HER RIVAL

Nosser Then Turns His Revolver to His Own Head and Dies.

TOOK POISON BEFORE THIS

And Estelle Young, the Actress, and Mrs. Nosser Spent a Long Night Keeping Him Alive.

August Louis Nosser's life of gambling, dissipation, and deceit ended yesterday, when, after facing an angry woman and attempting suicide in his apartments at the Pierrepont, 45 West Thirty-second Street, he shot and killed his accuser, Estelle Young, whom he had deceived into believing that he was single. He then committed suicide while his wife, whom he had locked in the bathroom, beat the door with her fists to attract attention.

The circumstances were so pathetic, as well as dramatic, and there was so much that was noble in the conduct of the wife, that Mrs. Nosser, who had been arrested as a witness, was released from custody by Coroner Acritelli the moment he heard her story.

August Louis Nosser was not the dead man's real name. He was born in Belgium of noble parentage. Friends said that, as a boy in Belgium, Nosser was a remarkable player on the violin. King Leopold is said to have regarded him in the light of a protégé, and was accustomed to have him play the violin for him.

When he was still quite young Nosser came to this country. That was the end of his aspirations with the violin, which, however, he still carried, and played in the seclusion of his room. He engaged in race-track gambling and started several poker clubs throughout the Tenderloin, the membership of which was confined to men of family and means. The Wall Street Club, in West Thirtieth Street, was one of these. Nosser was also a part owner of the old Guttenberg track, and was a partner of Gottfried Walbaum, interested in racing enterprises.

About four years ago Nosser met and married a Miss Eva Hale, whom all her friends speak of as a refined and patient woman. Nosser and his wife were happy until two years ago, when he met an actress named Miss Estelle Young Reynolds, whom everybody called by her stage name, Estelle Young. She lived with her sister, Mrs. Ida Morrison, in the Baltimore apartments, 219 West Thirty-fourth Street. Mrs. Nosser often met Miss Young, who was about 25 years old, and was quite friendly with her, not suspecting at that time there was an attachment between the young woman and her own husband.

Miss Young, on the other hand, was not aware that the woman whom she knew as "Eva" was Nosser's wife and was led by the bookmaker to believe that he was a single man. The attachment between Nosser and Estelle Young grew until two weeks ago they reached a mutual understanding. It became apparent yesterday that Nosser and Miss Young had even planned a trip to Europe together. He had promised to marry her. When Mrs. Nosser heard of this she began to understand a number of things relative to her husband's friendship with Miss Young which had not been clear to her before.

When the truth dawned upon her she believed that Miss Young was an adventuress, the fact that she was on the stage tending to strengthen that idea. She had some violent quarrels with her husband, not only on this score, but because of his growing tendency to the use of drugs, as a result of business troubles. About six months ago Nosser was declared bankrupt, and yesterday, after he had killed Miss Young and himself, his desk in the apartments was found full of unpaid bills.

As the quarrels between the wife and her husband had no effect upon the latter, Mrs. Nosser on Wednesday evening wrote this letter to Miss Young:

> The Pierrepont Apartments,
> March 14, 1906.
>
> Miss Estelle Young, 219 West Thirty-fourth Street:
>
> Pardon me for taking the liberty of writing to you. I write to you to ask, as an act of justice, that you give Louis back to me. You have made his life absolutely miserable for the past six weeks.
>
> If I thought for one moment that you were sincere I would not hesitate to leave him with you, as his happiness is more to me than anything else in the world. I have surmised for a long time the state of affairs between Louis and you, but have kept silent, thinking it was only a passing fancy on his part, and that by having patience I could call him back to me through my undying love for him.
>
> What I have suffered no one will ever know. I have been faithful and dutiful to him through it all, and would be perfectly willing to make any sacrifice in the world to have him with me as formerly. I would be satisfied to have him give you anything in regard to money that he has, as I will be thoroughly happy to have him with me without a dollar. It is for himself alone that I love him, and you would be doing a great act of charity if you would release him from this awful bondage.
>
> I have been instigated to communicate with you at this time in order to interrupt Louis's proposed European trip, of which I have been informed.
>
> I await an immediate reply by bearer stating your honest decision in this matter. Kindly say nothing of this to Louis, and oblige,
>
> EVA.

This letter was sent to the Baltimore apartments by a messenger boy, who said he would wait for a reply. Miss Young said that she would reply in person. Mrs. Nosser told the Coroner yesterday that the letter was the first intimation the young woman had that August Louis Nosser was a married man and had deceived her. Miss Young immediately purchased a horsewhip and went to the Pierrepont.

Miss Young, however, did not use her whip on Nosser. Mrs. Nosser stepped between her husband and the actress and prevented Miss Young from striking the man. There was no need, in fact, for any whipping, as Nosser appeared sufficiently humiliated. Miss Young then prepared to go, declaring to Nosser and his wife that she would not enter either of their lives again. The woman appeared so genuinely sorry that Mrs. Nosser asked her to stay a while, as she feared to be left alone with her husband at that time. Nosser, too, declared that Miss Young must not go yet, and, in fact, barred her way every time she attempted to do so. Miss Young then telephoned her sister, Mrs. Morrison, that she was at the Pierrepont and would remain there for some time.

That was about 9 o'clock on Wednesday evening. Shortly after 10 o'clock Nosser, who had been moodily smoking cigarettes in absolute silence for an hour, walked into the bathroom and drank half a small bottle of laudanum. Dr. Townsend, the Pierrepont physician, was immediately summoned. He administered an emetic and told the women to walk the man up and down for some time and he would be all right. He then went away without notifying the police of Nosser's attempted suicide.

Mrs. Nosser and Miss Young then joined forces, both toiling to save the man whose death would have been one solution of the problem. They walked him faithfully up and down the apartments to prevent him from going to sleep. At about midnight he seemed sufficiently recovered to be allowed to lie down. He immediately resumed smoking cigarettes, and, lying on a lounge, consumed one after another.

Until 4 o'clock yesterday morning the two women, with no longer the slightest animus between them, attended to the wants of the man. Several times Miss Young proposed to leave the apartments, but each time Nosser woke up and said "No," and Mrs. Nosser confessed that she needed the actress's aid. At 4 o'clock Miss Young, overwrought by physical and emotional strain, asked permission to be allowed to lie down on Mrs. Nosser's bed. Mrs. Nosser consenting, the young woman took off her shoes, lay down, and immediately went into a sound sleep. Mrs. Nosser, dressed in a wrapper, continued to walk up and down, ready to get anything her husband wanted.

At 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon Miss Young was still sound asleep, lying on her right side, exactly as she had lain down. Nosser was lying on the lounge in the parlor, still moodily smoking cigarettes, while the wife walked softly up and down. At about that hour, seeing that the man was apparently thinking over the whole matter, Mrs. Nosser decided to leave him alone, and went to take a bath.

The moment she closed the bathroom door behind her a hand fell upon the key outside and turned it. Mrs. Nosser was locked in. She then realized that her husband for some reason had been watching for this chance. She beat on the doors with her hands and cried out to Miss Young. Then she heard her husband say: "You've gone back on me. I'll get even." The next moment a single shot came. Then there was a moment's silence, broken by another and more distant shot.

Mrs. Nosser continued to beat on the door, then, remembering another unused door in the bathroom which led into the hall, she hammered upon that. The shots and her cries had attracted Bertha Murphy, a chambermaid, who came and released Mrs. Nosser, who told of what she feared had happened. The apartments were soon entered.

Mrs. Nosser found Miss Young lying unconscious on the bed, shot through the left temple. In the parlor before the mantel-piece she found her husband, shot in the left temple, and a revolver lying beside him. He was dead, and Miss Young expired before a surgeon from the New York Hospital and Dr. Westerman of 6 East Thirty-second Street arrived. Mrs. Nosser, in a state of collapse, needed medical attention.

When she was partially recovered, Mrs. Nosser was taken to the Tenderloin station and detained as a witness. Coroner Acritelli and Deputy Coroner Weston soon reached the Pierrepont. When they had looked over the apartment and heard Mrs. Nosser's story, they agreed that she should not be detained, as papers in the dead man's desk, the letter to Miss Young, and the testimony of Mrs. Morrison, Miss Young's sister, corroborated every detail of Mrs. Nosser's story. Her last word to the Coroner was:

"I tried to be a good wife to him."

Mrs. Morrison said that Miss Young had been married once and was divorced. She declined to tell the name of Miss Young's former husband. She said that Miss Young's real name was Estelle Reynolds, and that they came from New Orleans. She said that when Miss Young telephoned on Wednesday night she had said she was having "a pleasant time." Miss Young wore jewelry worth $10,000.

Nosser was about 40 years old; his wife is 32. Since his losses in business they have changed their address several times. They had been at the Pierrepont only a short time, having gone there from the Hotel Imperial. Previous to that they lived for a year at the Hotel Vendome, where Nosser was staying when his bankruptcy proceedings were started. Louis Todd, the Vendome's proprietor, was Nosser's creditor for $700. Other and heavier debts were for gambling.

The John H. The lease, which has eighteen years to run, was purchased from Henry S. Duncan, who sold his interest because he had purchased the lease and business of the Gilsey House.

LAWYER CLEARS L. E. JULIAN.

Says He Himself Told of Queer Work in Railroad Damage Cases.

Louis E. Julian, the former investigator for the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, who has been stirring up trouble for the company for alleged tampering with juries in damage cases, was cleared by Lawyer Robert L. Turk in the Tombs Court yesterday of the charge of giving "false and libelous information" to a newspaper. He was arrested several days ago.

In spite of Turk's positive declaration that he, and not Julian, gave to a reporter the statement that Dr. Wolfred Nelson, house physician of the Astor House, had been approached by representatives of the Metropolitan with certain proposals, Magistrate Wahle refused to discharge Julian and adjourned the examination to April 2 in order to await the return of the reporter who got the statement and who has just gone on a vacation.

Dr. Nelson testified about a visit paid him by a man named Purdy, who insisted on talking about a damage case until the witness showed him the door. Dr. Nelson said that he only "suspected" that Purdy came from the Metropolitan Street Railway Company.

When Mr. Turk was placed on the stand he said that Dr. Nelson had told him a detailed story, not only about the positive declaration of Purdy that he represented the Metropolitan, but also about a call by "one of the Metropolitan's lawyers," who implored the doctor to save him from prison. Mr. Turk said that he asked for that lawyer's name, but Dr. Nelson refused to give it, as the man was an old friend.

While this was going on in the Tombs Court, Chief Clerk Thomas E. Smith conducted a hearing on the charges against Clerk Edward S. Tully of the City Court that he was instrumental in enabling William H. Tillinghast, now serving a term in the penitentiary for impersonating a juror, to appear as juror in six different damage cases against the Metropolitan tried in May, 1900.

Justice O'Dwyer gave the details of the impersonation of a juror by Tillinghast which led to the latter's arrest and conviction. He said that Tully was the first person to call his attention to the fact that the man he, Justice O'Dwyer, thought was Henderson, the juror, was Tillinghast. The hearing goes on to-day.

NON-UNION GUARD STABBED.

Ironworker Dying of Wounds—Saloon Companions Held.

James Kane, a guard for non-union ironworkers, was taken to Flower Hospital last night from Gaw Brothers' saloon, Fifty-fourth Street and Third Avenue, with his throat cut in two places. John Eustis of New Haven, also a guard, and Charles Miller of 346 East Fifty-sixth Street, an ironworkers' foreman, were locked up on suspicion in the East Fifty-first Street Station.

According to the information gathered by the police, the three men were drinking in the saloon all the evening. A man ran out to the sidewalk about 11:30 o'clock and said there had been a stabbing. Detectives Moran and Van Gilder and Policeman Broderick found Kane sitting in a chair with a towel around his head. They could only get from him:

"I'll get even with them."

Dr. Oberbeck of Flower Hospital said Kane probably would die. Eustis had a blackjack and a revolver and Miller carried a revolver.

Two pieces of a razor blade were found in Kane's neck and the handle of a razor was found in the saloon. The police are investigating on the theory that an attempt was made to murder the man.

ROOSEVELT COMMISSION MAY STAY COAL STRIKE

Mitchell Considering This Plan for Hard Coal Fields.

MINERS URGE IT ON HIM

Leader Beats Dolan at Indianapolis, Executive Board Confirming His Dismissal.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 15.—President Mitchell is hesitating to-night whether to play a diplomatic card which may avert the threatened strike in the anthracite coal regions. This is a move to put the whole dispute between the miners and the anthracite operators up to the Roosevelt Strike Commission which was appointed by the President to settle the 1902 strike.

The miners are turning to this solution of the anthracite problem with eagerness. On all sides Mitchell is being urged to follow this course. The miners' leader himself retains his usual silent attitude, but there are those close to him who prophesy that an appeal to the arbitration body will be made before the adjournment of the miners' convention.

The movement is asserted to have two strong points in its favor. In the first place, it is exactly the thing which the anthracite operators recommended in their letter in which they refused the miners' demands. Again, it is felt that the Arbitration Board would render a decision which would give the miners at least some of the demands they are seeking to enforce. It is known that the commission created by the President is fully empowered to act in the matter. Although appointed especially for the purpose of settling the 1902 strike, the commission was continued after the adjudication of that trouble and officially is in existence to-day.

Little was accomplished to-day by the special convention of the United Mine Workers beyond organization and appointment of committees. There were over 1,000 delegates, representing 1,461 locals, in the convention. President Mitchell delivered his address, in which he explained the reasons for calling the meeting, and counseled conservative procedure in the effort to preserve peace in the coal mining industry.

The Anthracite Scale Committee did not evening approved and confirmed the finding of Mitchell in the ousting of Dolan from the Presidency of District 5. The report to-morrow will also confirm the appointment of three members of the Executive Board to take charge of the district affairs until the office is filled by special election. The report will also approve the ousting of Vice President Uriah Bellingham.

After a heated session lasting three hours the board voted unanimously to sustain Mitchell. Dolan and Bellingham argued their cases before the board.

The Anthracite scale Committee did not meet as planned. The committee is to receive the operators' reply. Members of the committee expressed the belief that no lengthy reply to the operators would be advisable, and it seems probable that the entire matter will be left to an anthracite convention which probably will be called to meet at Shamokin or Wilkesbarre the week after next.

The Scale Committee is composed of the following: Wellington O'Connor, T. D. Nichols, Patrick Gildae, William Dodds, W. H. Haskins, William Dettrey, P. D. Roberts, John Fahy, H. C. Perry, John P. White, George Richardson, Harry D. Outhwaite, Francis Drum, John Nugent, Ed Flynn, Peter Hanraty, C. W. Wells, John Harris, and George Colville.

Previous to adjournment, President Mitchell announced a meeting of the international executive board. He requested Patrick Dolan of Pittsburg and those interested in Dolan's appeal from the decision of the President to appear before the board for a hearing.

In his address President Mitchell told of the conferences in New York with President Robbins of the Pittsburg Coal Company and other operators, which he said led to the hope that there was a possibility of reaching an agreement providing the joint convention were reconvened. The letter of President Roosevelt also, he said, was in itself sufficient justification for making another effort to reach a peaceful settlement of the difficulty. He continued:

"While, of course, the many conflicting and inharmonious statements emanating from various sources purporting to reflect the views of operators seem to indicate an entire absence of unity and concord among them in regard to the question of advancing wages, I am, nevertheless, hopeful, if not fully convinced, that the urgency and seriousness of the situation will prompt them to make such reasonable concessions in wages and conditions as will enable us to join them in the rehabilitation of our joint movement and the perpetuation of the practical business relationship under which we have worked with mutual advantage during the past eight years."

Mr. Mitchell made a plea that personalities be put aside and that it may be proved to the country that the United Mine Workers is a sane and just business association, seeking only that which is just.

SENATE FOR RESERVES BILL.

It Goes Through Senate and Assembly Will Probably Agree to It.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 15.—Senator Stevens's bill to compel trust companies to keep reserve funds went through the Senate without opposition to-day, and it is expected that a similar measure, introduced by Mr. Wainwright in the Assembly, will be passed soon.

The bill provides that in first-class cities the reserve shall be 15 per cent. of the aggregate of deposits, made up of one-third cash, one-third in United States, State, or municipal bonds, and the balance in money on deposit with any bank or trust company approved by the Superintendent of Banks. In smaller cities the reserve shall be 10 per cent., divided in the same way.

The bill provides that the reserve shall be accumulated, two-fifths on the passage of the act, one-fifth on July 1, one-fifth on Oct. 1, and one-fifth on Jan. 1, 1907.

TILLMAN RAISES PARTY ISSUES ON RATE BILL

Outlines Radical Programme for 1908 in Majority Report.

STIRS UP THE REPUBLICANS

Wants Rates Regulated by Commerce Commission and Jurisdiction of Federal Courts Defined.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The majority report on the Hepburn bill, presented by Senator Tillman to-day in the Senate, was received with a good deal of curiosity on the Republican side, and over on the Democratic side Senators sat up and took notice. The Tillmanesque features of the report had been discounted. Both sides expected that he would make the statement that once a year all the money in the country passed through the hands of the railroads, or that if Congress should fail to pass a rate bill the people would rise in their might and the mills of the gods would eventually grind exceeding fine. But the political acuteness of the report was not wholly anticipated.

Although he dwelt on the fact that the action of the Inter-State Commerce Committee was non-partisan in reporting the Hepburn bill to the Senate and placing it in his charge, and the suggestion that the question in the Senate was also entirely non-partisan, Mr. Tillman outlined an issue for his party in 1908 in a manner which set Republican Senators to thinking. His open avowal that the majority report was speaking mainly for himself individually made little difference in the value of it as a political paper.

Mr. Tillman would have the issue of railroad rates regulated by the Inter-State Commerce Commission. He would have the railroads absolutely barred from engaging in private business in any commodity produced by their patrons. He would have them forced to connect their lines with feeder lines and make fair traffic agreements. He would define the jurisdiction of the Federal courts to which rate questions may be taken for review, and prevent the suspension of a new rate by the Inter-State Commerce Commission. These ideas were put compactly together, and at the same time the whole policy of the President as expressed in the Hepburn bill was picked to pieces.

In short, Senator Tillman, speaking in the formal position of spokesman for the Republicans and Democrats who voted with him for the Hepburn bill in committee, planted a Democratic standard and demanded Republican support for it under threat that the overwhelming wrath of the country would be upon them if they refused to fall in behind him.

Mr. Tillman said that the cries of the people were demanding relief for producers and shippers and that it was the duty of Congress to hold an even balance between these conflicting and contending interests.

"Friends of the railroads contend," urged Mr. Tillman, "that Congress cannot limit the jurisdiction of the Circuit Courts, while, on the other hand, it is asserted with equal emphasis that the power to create all courts, other than the Supreme Court, rests alone in Congress, and that such courts, being stautory, are necessarily limited in their scope and power by the authority which creates them.

"I myself incline most confidently to this view and have not the slightest doubt that it is possible to properly amend this bill so as to prohibit the Circuit Courts from interfering with the orders of the Inter-State Commerce Commission by any interlocutory order. As has already been observed in connection with the power to fix rates, this question also must be determined by the Supreme Court should the proposed law be enacted.

"The Senate must determine by its vote what shall be its attitude upon the questions of court review and interlocutory suspensions. The whole question at issue as to giving relief to the producing interests of the country revolves around this feature of the bill. If any decision of the Supreme Court shall declare that Congress is powerless to grant speedy relief through a commission, it needs no prophet to tell that an outburst of surprise and indignation will sweep over the country."

The Republican Senators have their plan of campaign in the debate all mapped out. It is, they claim, a lawyer's debate, and the layman can be so mixed up and make himself look so queer in discussing questions of constitutional law that he has no chance whatever in the fight. Tillman himself talks of his disadvantage in this respect. He declares, however, that common sense and honesty make a strong team and can win the day. He relies on Senator Bailey to furnish the legal support for his fight, but the Texas Senator has not been in active practice for many years, and in the interval the courts have been grinding out decisions and making new law.

Senator Rayner, whose speech yesterday gives Tillman little satisfaction, is so fresh from the courts that he continually in addressing President Fairbanks says: "May it please the court" instead of "Mr. President." Rayner will be against Tillman in the debates, and hopes to lead a contingent for his idea as to the proper remedy for railroad abuses.

Thus it is that there are many Senators who think the real fight is coming between Senator Spooner's plan for settling the rate question and that which Rayner outlined yesterday.

The Senate to-day passed the House joint resolution amending the Tillman-Gillespie resolution for investigating railroads and monopolies so as to authorize the administration of oaths.

Before the resolution was disposed of, Mr. Tillman reiterated that no additional authority was necessary to permit the commission to act under the original resolution, "but," he added, "inasmuch as the President has cast suspicion on the resolution I fear that parties summoned would take advantage of that fact and resist the commission."

YELLOW FEVER AGAIN.

Suspicious Case in Charity Hospital at New Orleans.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 15.—The City Board of Health announced to-day to the press of New Orleans, and to the Health officials of Mississippi and Texas, that the first case of suspicious fever in the city this Spring had developed in Charity Hospital, where Dr. Hamilton Jones, who was in charge of the Emergency Hospital, declared it to be yellow fever.

Dr. Bachelor and Dr. Denegre Martin, both prominent physicians, declared it catarrhal jaundice. Experts from Mississippi and Texas will probably arrive to-morrow.

The patient, Jules Ebernz, a saloon workman, boarded in a cheap lodging house within six blocks of Canal Street, and had visited the Italian quarters only two days prior to his first attack of illness, which occurred March 12.

The health authorities have been watching the case for four days. To-day the city Board of Health announced that every place the man had visited so far as traced had been thoroughly fumigated.

There is such complete confidence in the ability of the city authorities to handle the situation and such confidence in the sanitary condition of the city that there was absolute lack of excitement at to-day's news. The matter was not even much discussed.

CONTRACT MUTILATED, DECLARES MR. COLER

He'll See Grand Jury About Woodbury and the B. R. T.

THE MAYOR WILL INQUIRE

No Ash Stations Built—President Winter Says Woodbury's Permission Is Responsible.

Borough President Coler of Brooklyn announced yesterday that he would go before the Grand Jury to present data on what he termed the "peculiar outcome" of the ash removal contract which Commissioner Woodbury of the Department of Street Cleaning made nearly three years ago with the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company for work in Brooklyn. This contract is said to have been worth $400,000 annually to the B. R. T. people.

Under the terms of the original contract the Brooklyn Rapid Transit people had to construct thirteen stations to receive ashes. Not a single one of these buildings has been constructed, and President Winter of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit says that Commissioner Woodbury himself granted permission to abrogate that section of the contract.

Mr. Coler says that an investigation of the contract on file in the Controller's office, made yesterday, showed that the two pages of the contract referring to the construction of the stations had been torn out and destroyed.

As it is a penal offense for any head of a department to alter a public contract after the contract has once been approved by the Board of Estimate, the matter was taken to Mayor McClellan yesterday. He was asked if the board had ever given Commissioner Woodbury permission to make the change in the Brooklyn Rapid Transit contract for the Brooklyn removal of ashes. The Mayor said that he had no knowledge of the requisite permission ever having been given to Commissioner Woodbury.

"As far as I can remember, Commissioner Woodbury has never asked for permission to change the contract with the B. R. T. people. I shall have the matter looked into at once."

All yesterday Commissioner Woodbury was absent from his office, looking after snow removal in different parts of the city, so that no statement could be obtained from him.

It was learned yesterday that it will be ten days at least before the Aldermanic committee can start work on its investigation of the Street Cleaning Department, as it will be that length of time before the committee can get the $25,000 appropriation made by the Board of Aldermen last Tuesday.

The allegations made by citizens at a meeting held last week in Brooklyn, to the effect that the refuse dumping stations in the Borough of Brooklyn are a menace to the public health and tend to spread disease, were contradicted yesterday by Dr. Walter Bensel, Assistant Sanitary Superintendent of New York City.

Replying to the charge that an entire family of children had been wiped out by diphtheria contracted as the result of the location of an ash dump near their home, Dr. Bensel said:

"I don't believe it possible to trace a single case of diphtheria or other contagious disease to the ash dumps. Infection from ashes is impossible."

The Times Building at Times Square is one of the monuments of Manhattan Island. It is lit from top to bottom with Edison lights; the elevators are operated by Edison power; the great presses in the basement, each printing ninety thousand complete papers hourly, are driven from the Edison mains. During six months of the year not a pound of coal is burned in the building. The steam heating pressure never exceeds four pounds. There are twenty good reasons why the Edison system was adopted.

MARCH BRINGS WORST STORM OF THE WINTER

Nine inches of Snow on the Wings of a Fitful Gale.

BRINGS SUFFERING TO POOR

Many Cases for the Charitable Workers—Clear Weather Promised for To-day.

Leading the reporter into an inner room, the Weather Man explained how it all happened yesterday. The Weather Man was comforting, in a way.

"Yes," he began, meditatively; "yes, the storm that has been moving eastward for the last two days over the southern portion of the country is central this morning over the Carolinas. (Most folks in New York thought it was central in this particular latitude and longitude.)

"The storm has caused rain in the Southern States," he continued, "and snow from the Missouri Valley eastward. It is proceeding northeastward now through the New England States. The storm in the West is still central over Southern Utah, having caused rain in the Southern Pacific States. The weather will be clear Friday, with brisk northeasterly winds. The temperature will fall Friday."

In the technical language of 100 Broadway, that is what happened yesterday. In the language of suffering outer Broadway this is what happened:

In the middle of Wednesday night a fine drizzle began to fall. Soon after 1 o'clock in the morning the rain changed to fine, soft, feathery flakes that sifted over the black face of New York most impartially. Many a verse writer who went to sleep with visions of Spring poetry in his mind awoke to look out, disappointed, upon the universal blanket of snow, beautiful snow, which covered the streets and the houses.

At 9:20 o'clock in the morning the feathery flakes hardened and rounded into fine, wind-swept sleet. The wind, which puffed sometimes at a gale of forty miles, and again lay still, played mischievously with the light sleet, which continued throughout the day and until 9 o'clock last night. About nine inches fell yesterday and last night. The heaviest fall of snow New York had previously known this Winter was six inches. The mercury remained in the neighborhood of 26. It is due to drop this morning.

The ferries were the section of New York's transportation system that was chiefly handicapped by the storm. The snowfall made it dark and murky on the water, and the pilots had to feel their way along. The Staten Islanders suffered the most delay.

The steam roads running into New York suffered little in the morning, and the commuters came in almost on time. Last night these roads were slightly more handicapped by the fall of sleet, so that in several cases the roads sent out their first "double-headers" of the Winter.

The Subway and elevated roads showed the effect of the storm chiefly in that their cars were more crowded than usual, many persons fearing delay on their customary surface cars. Up to last night the elevated third rails hadn't been coated with ice. The sleet was too hard to stick to the rails. In Brooklyn, of course, the elevated trains were slower than usual, and there was a half-hour block on the Brooklyn Bridge yesterday morning. The surface cars in the suburbs were delayed some yesterday and much last night owing to the continued shifting and blowing of the sleet upon the tracks.

Within the city, particularly in Manhattan, the surface system was delayed only indirectly by the snow and sleet. Over seventy-five sweeprs were put to work early in the morning and were still at work last night. The light particles of sleet and snow were so easily swept aside that the tracks were kept fairly clean. The chief delay seemed to be caused by the falling of horses across the car tracks. The Winter has been so mild that few truckmen had their horses shod "sharp," so that yesterday many animals sprawled across the tracks. The wrecking wagons were kept busy racing to untangle blocks by hoisting prostrate animals to their feet.

The arrival of trains from the North and West yesterday showed that the storm outside of New York was severe. Those due from Buffalo and points west of Dover were from fifteen to forty minutes late getting into Hoboken. Trains that left Hoboken reported hard traveling when they got beyond Dover.

The Scandinavian-American Line steamship United States that was to have sailed yesterday at noon waited until after 2 o'clock for over 100 passengers due from the West. All but forty arrived during the wait.

Dispatches from various northern and western points tell of a blizzard worse than New York's storm. At Middletown the country roads, electric lines, and railway traffic were blocked. Reports from Illinois and States west of that tell of the impassable roads and a very severe blizzard.

Soon after noon the snow shovellers began work. Contractor Bradley said he had 3,000 men at work in Manhattan, 2,500 in Brooklyn, and 2,500 teams to cart away the snow.

The storm was, however, an unpleasant surprise to the contractor. A few days ago he had made up his mind that both the calendar and the persistent good behavior of the weather made it safe to reduce his force. So he sold some 170 horses and a few trucks. Luckily, however, he was able to buy the outfit of the John Shields Construction Company and has come into possession of 68 teams at Weehawken, 36 at Homestead, and 8 at West Hoboken. These will be on hand to-day and the snow will be removed as quickly as ever.

The premature Spring poets suffered somewhat yesterday, but the poor suffered much more. According to the various charitable organizations there was much keen suffering, partly because the Winter had been so mild and the prospects of an early Spring so alluring that the storm took everybody by surprise.

Thomas Flynn, 65 years old, who up to a few months ago was a laborer at Bellevue Hospital, was found dead in a coal yard at 434 East Twenty-sixth Street. Exposure and lack of nourishment had killed him.

James Lyon, a 44-year-old clerk, who lives at 682 Melrose Avenue, the Bronx, was found early yesterday morning in a snowbank on 138th Street, near Third Avenue. His ears, hands, and one leg were severely frostbitten. Arraigned later in the Harlem Court on the charge of intoxication Lyon said that he went out Wednesday night to watch prizefight bulletins, and, though the number of rounds was limited, his celebration of their completion was so enthusiastic that he forgot about going home. He was discharged.

In a Twenty-eighth Street basement a widow and ten children were found almost starving. A 17-year-old boy and a 14-year-old girl, who are customarily the family's support, were prostrated for lack of food and clothing. That family and many others received fuel and food and clothing from the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.

Charity workers labored until late last night to answer the many immediate calls for assistance, but they see that the deepest and most general suffering will come in a week or two. Then a wave of pneumonia will sweep over the city, unless history is reversed, and the aftermath of the storm will have its long-drawn ending in hundreds of damp basements and wind-swept garrets. For that the charity workers are girding themselves.

Hudson River Traffic Must Wait.

The snowstorm has again tied up Hudson River passenger traffic. The People's Line now scedules the departure of the C. W. Morse and Adirondack from this city on Saturday, March 17, and from Albany on Monday, March 19. The Troy Line has decided to postpone the resumption of its service between New York and Troy to Sunday, March 18. The Saratoga will make the first trip, leaving the foot of West Tenth Street at 6 P. M.

WHERE IS SPRING, ANYWAY?

The Vernal Poet Is Moved to Suggest Investigation by a Hughes.

Where are the happy Summer days of fair December now; the smiling green of Christmas woods—where is it anyhow? Where is dear January's sun, its cloudlets zephyr-swept; that balmy January breeze that fanned us while we slept? Ask not for those delightful days; of wintry joys don't sing. Resign yourself; sit on a stove; wear rubber boots—it's Spring.

No more we'll bask in Wintry sun's delightful warming ray, for Spring is here with forty kinds of cussed snow to-day. And now we cannot lightly walk in smiling verdant parks, indifferent to overcoats and quite as gay as larks. No more; those are December joys. Spring means the strenuous life—the saddened wail at storms of hail that cut you like a knife.

Whoever runs the weather graft has surely missed his cues, and ought to be investigated by a weather Hughes. He turned on August Christmas time, and made us melt our cuffs, and then he set old Sol to warming furs and ladies' muffs. He made the skating season June, and, thinking Merry May looked like an iceberg, plumped her down all over New Year's Day. And then he tried to set things right (oh, what a Winter's Tale!) by pushing Winter into Spring and giving us all—hail.

Complete investigation will be made, there is no doubt, and if this Spring is found corrupt it will be fired out. Balloons will soon be sent aloft to push away the snow, with Lincoln Steffens to the fore, and Poultney Bigelow. Such drastic steps are bound to come—why should the public sneeze and shiver on the glorious Fourth or in mid-August freeze? Who are the grafters higher up who such a Spring have sent? Why doesn't Congress get to work? And where's the President?

NEW NIAGARA WATER BILL.

Restricts the Right to Take Water—Aimed at New Companies.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 15.—Senator L'Hommedieu introduced in the Senate to-day another Niagara bill, which provides that companies having the right to take water from above the Falls shall not use more than 17,200 feet of water per second. The penalty is forfeiture of their charters.

The bill would not affect the Canadian company, of which the Niagara, Lockport & Ontario Water Company is the American distributing agent. Senator L'Hommedieu tried to put through the Legislature last year measures to increase the powers of the Niagara Company. Gov. Odell vetoed one and the other did not get through the Assembly.

A recent decision of the courts, giving the company rights to construct transmission lines anywhere, made the introduction of the bill this year unnecessary, but early this week the Senator introduced four bills annulling the charters of companies which had not operated under them, and so reduced any competition from these sources. There remain only two American companies in actual operation, and by restricting their use of water the Canadian company and its American agent are in a better position than ever.

LABOR AGENCY REFORM.

Amendments Strengthening Present Law Urged at Albany Hearing.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 15.—Representatives of the State Federation of Labor, the Central Federated Union of Manhattan, the Central Labor Union of Brooklyn, and other labor organizations appeared before the Assembly Cities Committee this afternoon to urge the adoption of Assemblyman Prentice's bill amending the employment agency law of the State. The amendments are designed to leave fewer loopholes for evasion on the part of the employment agencies and intelligence offices.

The Woman's Municipal League, through its representative, Miss Frances A. Keller, and several of the east side settlement associations also favored the amendments.

In opposition to the Prentice bill several of the employment agencies of Manhattan have introduced a measure to take the enforcement of the employment agency law out of the hands of the Commissioner of Licenses in New York City and place it under the State Labor Commissioner. This is the Lee bill, which the organizations represented here to-day are opposed to. State Labor Commissioner Sherman is also opposed to having the responsibility placed on him.

NEW SEASIDE PARK BILL.

Compromise Measure Which It Is Believed Will Pass.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 15.—The agitation in New York for a seaside park, which was brought to the attention of the Legislature by the Tompkins bill providing for the establishment of one, has now brought about the drawing of a bill by the Assembly Committee on Cities which, it is believed, being a compromise, will stand a chance of becoming a law.

The substitute measure authorizes the Board of Estimate and Apportionment by majority vote to appropriate $1,500,000 to establish the park. Power is given to the board to set apart for a period of twenty-five years a part of the park upon which a charitable or benevolent society may erect a hospital for convalescents. It is provided that insane people or those afflicted with contagious diseases shall not be received at the institution.

HALF FARE FOR PUPILS.

Hartman Bill Reported Favorably—Affects Traction Companies.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 15.—The Cities Committee of the Assembly to-day reported out the bill introduced by Assemblyman Hartman of New York which makes compulsory the selling by the traction companies of half-fare tickets to school children to be accepted as full fare only at certain hours.

The Krulewitch bill compelling the sale of six tickets for 25 cents was reported out for amendment. The reporting out of the Hartman bill is a personal victory for Assemblyman Hartman, whose fight for his bill was carried to the office of the Attorney General, the traction companies setting up that it was unconstitutional.

Senate Passes Bill to Protect Deer.

ALBANY, March 15.—Senator Allds's bill to lessen the season in which deer may be hunted by one month at the beginning of the season, was passed by the Senate to-day. The season now opens on Oct. 1, instead of Sept. 1, as formerly, and closes Nov. 15. It was decided after a number of conferences on the matter to cut off the first month so as to give the does a better chance while they were still suckling the fawns.

KINGDON GOULD HAS MEASLES

Ill at His Father's Home—His Sister Marjorie Better.

Kingdon Gould, son of George Gould, is ill of measles at his father's house, 857 Fifth Avenue. The attack began on Wednesday, and though he is confined to his bed, it was said last night that young Gould's attack is slight.

He is supposed to have taken the infection from his sister Marjorie, who has now nearly recovered from her attack. His two brothers, Jay and Vivian, have not been affected so far.

ROADS MAY CUT RATES IN LIEU OF REBATES

Central Western Lines Confer on 15 Per Cent. Reduction.

RECOGNIZE PUBLIC DEMAND

To Adhere to Present Schedules Would Be, in Effect, Increasing Charges, Managers Admit.

The reduction in freight rates being considered by representatives of railroads in the Central West in conference in Chicago this week is intended to counteract the abolition of rebates, according to a representative of one of the roads taking part in the conference. In other words, the railroads of that section are about to lower published rates by an amount sufficient to bring them down to the level formerly paid under the rebate system.

The 15 per cent. reduction in rates is contemplated by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the Chicago Great Western, and other railroads operating between Chicago and the Missouri River. Back of the proposed voluntary reduction is the possibility, recognized by the railroads, of reduced rates being forced on them as the result of contemplated legislation by Congress. Apart from this, the railroads are inclined to take action which will forestall public opposition to their charges for transportation.

The system of rebating to favored shippers may still exist to some extent, but if so, it appears from the statement of railroad officers the rebates are unimportant compared with those allowed in the past. That a 15 per cent. reduction in rates will only mark them down to those actually paid by shippers in the past shows to what great length the rebate evil has gone.

It would appear that the railroads of the Central West, where perhaps the system of rebating had gone to greater length than in other sections, prefer to lower their rates rather than to encountering the opposition of shippers which would result from maintaining the increase in freight charges which has resulted from the discontinuance of rebates.

A representative of one of the roads in favor of reducing rates in the Chicago-Missouri River territory said that it would, of course, be necessary to get concerted action by all the roads operating in that territory, as no one road would care to take the step independently. The railroads running east from Chicago, however, this officer said, would not necessarily be brought into the matter. The plan for lowering rates may be successful without co-operation of the Eastern roads.

This statement was made yesterday by an officer of one of the principal railroads in the Central West:

"The railroads, of course, will not admit that they have been granting rebates nor, of course, will the admission be made that the reduction in rates which is being considered is intended to offset the discontinuance of rebates. Such, however, are the facts. The proposed 15 per cent. reduction will not entirely offset the rebates allowed in certain cases, but on the other hand the lower rates will apply to a larger number of shippers than those who profited by rebates, so that, in the long run, the 15 per cent. reduction will nearly even maters up, as far as net receipts are concerned.

"One cannot count upon shippers helping in any way the permanent abolition of rebates. The shipper will get a rebate if there is any way of getting it. The railroads, however, realize that in the future they cannot escape the consequences of allowing rebates. They will have to bear the punishment, and for this reason they will probably see to it that rebates are no longer granted. There is no way by which a railroad can hide the payment of rebates in such a way that they cannot be discovered by Government investigation. The interests of the railroads are against the granting of rebates, and it is to the interest of every railroad to see that every other road complies with the law forbidding the granting of special favors to shippers.

"It is better, and it may be said that under present conditions it is essential, for the railroads to have the Government back of them rather than against them. A necessary condition of getting the support of the Government against the demands of shippers is for the railroads to refuse absolutely the payment of rebates.

"The Government can accomplish a great deal in this direction if it acts along the proper lines. The trouble in the past has been that the Government has frequently marked out for punishment railroad officers against whom the Government's prosecuting attorneys could make out only the weakest cases. I know of one case in particular at present before the courts, in which railroad officers were indicted for granting rebates, although, as a matter of fact, the rates paid on the shipments which were the basis of the indictments were publicly announced with all the formality required by law."

F. F. NUGENT, PROMOTER, HELD

P. G. Vandewater, Who Was to Manage Title Concern, Alleges Fraud.

Frederick F. Nugent, President of the defunct Equitable Title Guarantee Company and promoter of several kindred concerns which, according to the District Attorney, have had existence principally on paper, was arrested yesterday on a charge of grand larceny and put under $1,500 bail by Magistrate Wahle in the Tombs Court pending a hearing this afternoon.

The complainant is Percy G. Vandewater, who charges the prisoners with having got $300 in cash and a note for $700 from him by fraudulent representations concerning the Equitable Title Guarantee Company. Nugent told Vandewater, the latter alleges, that he had obtained a license for title insuring from the State Insurance Department, while in fact no such license had been issued.

Vandewater was to be general manager of the company, with a salary of $35 a week, and had to buy stock to hold the place. The stock, he alleges, was never delivered to him. Nugent's various concerns, including the Gotham Safe Deposit Company and the Van Cortlandt Bank, were housed for a while in an old building at Dey and Greenwich Streets, from which he was dispossessed several weeks ago for non-payment of rent.

No Monuments to Kings Here.

ALBANY, March 15.—Something of a curiosity in legislation was introduced to-day in the Assembly by Bernstein of New York. The measure provides that there shall not be erected in this State a monument to a ruler of any foreign country.

PHILADELPHIA TRACTION MONOPOLY THREATENED

New Company Proposes to Build a Railway in the City.

RAPID TRANSIT STOCK DROPS

Wabash Railroad Said to be Interested in the Plan—Elevated and Underground Line Proposed.

PHILADELPHIA, March 15.—Competition with the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, which controls all the street railway lines in this city, is promised in a communication received by Mayor Weaver from the Philadelphia and Western Railroad Company and transmitted by him to-day to City Councils.

The new company proposes to build an elevated and underground railway from Sixty-third and Market Streets, the western boundary of Philadelphia, across the city to the Delaware River, a distance of about five miles. The line, if constructed, will parallel the elevated and underground railwaynow being built by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company. In general character the contemplated railway is similar to the line now under construction; that is, an elevated road from Sixty-third Street to the eastern bank of the Schuylkill River, where the trains will dip into a subway which will extend to the Delaware River. Half of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company's subway is completed and in operation.

The communication of the Philadelphia and Western Railroad Company states that the company is a Pennsylvania corporation, and is now constructing a railroad from Parkesburg, 44 miles west of Philadelphia, eastward to the Philadelphia County line. If it obtains the franchise to enter the city the company will agree to pay to the city 2 per cent. of the gross receipts from the transportation of passengers within the city during the first two years of the line's operation, 3 per cent. during the third year, 4 per per cent. during the fourth year, 5 per cent. during the fifth year, and thereafter 5 per cent. of its gross receipts annually for thirty years.

At the end of this period the company will agree that the entire line within the city shall be transferred to the City of Philadelphia, but the company is to have an option to lease the railway for a further term of forty years for an annual rental of $400,000, plus 5 per cent. of the gross receipts from business within the city. At the end of the term of the lease the company is to deliver the entire property to the city. The company also agrees to complete the line in three years.

The proposition arouses great interest. The stock of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company dropped 3 points to-day, and closed weak at a net loss of 2 points. It was reported that the Wabash Railroad was interested in the new company, and that the Wabash Road would eventually gain an entrance to this city over the Philadelphia and Western's right of way.

There was no discussion in Select Council when the communication was read, and it was referred to the Committee on Railroads. Common Council to-day took up the ordinance granting an extension of three years to the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company for the completion of its subway along Market Street east of City Hall, and it was passed with little opposition.

MURDERED MAN A KIDNAPPER.

Body Found in Morris Canal Identified by Boy Held for Ransom.

The body found in the Morris Canal last Tuesday morning was identified to-night as that of one of the kidnappers who guarded Antonio Bozzuffi of 1,149 First Avenue, New York City, while he was being held for a ransom last week.

The dead man was identified by the boy himself, who said he was reasonably sure that he was one of the men from whom he had escaped in New York. The body was also identified by Arthur Salomore, a clerk in the bank of the boy's father, John Bozzuffi, as that of a man who had been in the bank two days before the kidnapping. As soon as he had taken a look at the body young Bozzuffi exclaimed:

"That was my keeper."

Security Company's Change of Name.

ALBANY, March 15.—Assemblyman Young in the House to-day called up and had passed his bill authorizing the Security Assurance Company of New York to change its name and increase the number of its officers and Directors. Claims were made that the bill revived a charter which had been allowed to lapse. Young quoted the Attorney General to the effect that the charter was perfectly valid.

Veterans' Retirement Bill Passed.

ALBANY, March 15.—After a lively fight in the Assembly to-day the Burns bill, providing that a veteran of the civil war who has been in the service of a municipality for more than fifteen years shall be retired on a pension, was passed. Assemblymen Hartman, Burns, and Hapeman led the fight for the bill and Agnew and Prentice against it.

Days like yesterday show the value of our "Shopping by 'Phone" system. Our records show that nearly one thousand women saved themselves the trouble and danger of a shopping trip through the snow by "calling 4000 Chelsea."

This system gives an immediate telephone connection with the very person best able to talk with you about the goods wanted. Its chief features are directness and speed. Your order is not given to a "telephone clerk" who transmits it to somebody else, who gets somebody else to do the buying. You give your order at the counter itself, talking with a salesperson who has the goods before her.

DEAD-LOCK AT ALGECIRAS DUE TO ROUVIER'S FALL

After It Germans' Uncompromising Attitude Was Renewed.

RUPTURE SEEMS VERY NEAR

The New French Ministry Is No More Inclined to Give Way Than Was Its Predecessor.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cables. Copyright, 1906.

PARIS, March 15.—When the truth comes to be known it will probably be found that the less accommodating attitude of Germany in the last few days has been due to the change of Ministry in France. No fresh concessions would have been made by M. Rouvier—that was as well known in Berlin as in Paris. The soi-disant concessions made by Germany consisted chiefly in the abandonment of wholly unjustifiable pretensions, universally regarded as such.

After M. Rouvier's fall it naturally occurred to the Germans that his successor might perhaps be more accommodating, so they resumed their uncompromising attitude. Germany, however, will find that she is once more out of her reckoning. The new French Government is no more inclined than its predecessor to surrender the legitimate rights of France.

I should say that the foreign policy of France is as safe in the hands of M. Bourgeois as in the hands of any living Frenchman. If Germany reckons on reaping any advantage in the Algeciras Conference from the recent Ministerial crisis in France she is likely to be disappointed.

ALGECIRAS, March 15.—I have repeatedly said that if the conference was to have a successful issue attention must be concentrated on matters of direct practical interest and so-called "grands principes" be kept in the background. Unfortunately these great principles are now coming prominently to the front, with the result that the chances of a rupture were never greater than now.

The general question on which France and Germany find it impossible to agree is how far Morocco is to be internationalized. The particular point on which a rupture is likely to occur is the organization of the police of Casablanca. In all the discussions about this port there are two distinct questions. The first is whether the police of Casablanca are to be organized by French or Spanish officers or by officers of a neutral power. The second is how far the Inspector of neutral nationality is to control the detachments organized by French and Spanish officers.

On the second question a compromise might be found without much difficulty, but on the first an agreement seems impossible, because it is regarded as the hinge on which turns a great principle. In other words, the Casablanca police force has come to be considered the wedge of internationalism which Germany insists on driving into the alleged scheme of Franco-Spanish predominance in Morocco.

Germany has never concealed the fact that such is her view. When the so-called Austrian project was submitted to the conference Herr von Radowitz declared openly that France and Spain alone could not be allowed to organize the Moroccan police because they would thereby obtain an exceptional position which would endanger the principle of economic liberty for all. From this position he has never retreated.

France seems equally unbending. Though she has made very large concessions, she can be as firm as Germany on points which seem to involve complete internationalization and which might accordingly lead to the loss of that predominant position in Morocco which she considers herself fully entitled to hold.

ALGECIRAS, March 15.—The conference situation is unchanged. A complete deadlock prevails.

The conference is not holding any sessions, and it is not known when the delegates will reassemble.

The interruption of the discussions is due to the lack of elasticity in the French and German instructions.

BERLIN, March 15.—The delay in arriving at an agreement at Algeciras causes a recurrence of mild pessimism, which was evident on the Boerse to-day. Imperial threes declined, and the money market was slightly affected, as the French are not disposed to lend money freely until the Moroccan question is settled.

No one mentions war even as a remote possibility, but the finances of Germany are so closely connected with international politics that investment and speculation are affected by the dead-lock at Algeciras.

LABORITES' FIRST REVOLT.

Oppose British Government and Vote for Reduction of Army.

LONDON, March 15.—In the House of Commons, sitting as Committee of Supply on Army Estimates, to-day Major Seeley (Liberal) moved a reduction of the army by 10,000 men.

Major Seeley's motion was rejected by a vote of 206 to 56.

The division revealed the first revolt of the Labor members against the Government, the majority of the 56 votes for the resolution being those of Radicals and Laborites.

NO FRANKING ABUSES.

Committee Absolves the House from Press Imputations.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Action was taken to-day intended to clear the House of an imputation that members had abused the franking privilege. Mr. Sibley (Penn.) reported unanimously from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads that an investigation made under the Sims resolution, had developed no truth in the charges, and the committee asked to be discharged from further inquiry.

The report states that all official action is a proper subject of press criticism, but it respectfully submits that the press which stands as censor owes it not alone to the public, but to itself, that when a general indictment is drawn there should be a substantial basis of facts before Congress is arraigned at the door of public opinion.

POLISH PRISONERS TORTURED

Starved, Beaten, Jumped On, and Cut—Story of the Torturing of a 17-Year-Old Girl Confirmed.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 15.—Three journalists in Chita have been sentenced to be shot under Gen. Rennenkampff's orders merely for publishing subversive articles.

According to the Slovo, over 200 persons were executed last month by sentences of courts-martial in the Baltic Provinces alone. This does not include numerous executions without trial of any sort.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 15.—Prof. Courtenay, a member of the Academy of Sciences, in an open letter to-day describes horrible tortures to which, he asserts, political prisoners at Warsaw were subjected by Chief of Police Greun.

He cites as examples two cases. In these cases prisoners were starved and on four consecutive nights were beaten with clubs and jumped on.

Their hair was pulled out by the roots and the soles of their feet were cut with knives until they signed statements confessing their guilt.

The Procurator at Tamboff has investigated the case of Mlle. Spiridonovo, the seventeen-year-old girl who shot M. Luzhenoffsky, Chief of the Secret Police of Tamboff, and who, the Procurator found, was treated in prison with extreme cruelty. The case is attracting great attention, and the papers are filled with letters from people of all classes demanding legal action against the girl's persecutors.

On Feb. 25 a letter from Mlle. Spiridonovo was published, in which she alleged that after her arrest she was knocked down and beaten by Cossacks with whips and rifle butts. She was then dragged by her hair down stairs to a sleigh, taken to the police station, undressed, and thrust into a damp, cold cell, where she was subjected to eleven hours of torment in order to force her to reveal the names of her accomplices. Mlle. Spiridonovo added that two officers repeatedly kicked her back and forth across her cell, tearing her hair, burning her flesh with their cigarettes, and threatening her with abandonment to the Cossacks unless she confessed. Her skull was fractured in two places, one eye was injured, and her body was a mass of bruises from head to foot.

REFUSE TO RETURN TO LODZ.

Factory Owners Stay in Berlin—Workmen to Send Deputation.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 15.—Since the uprising in Lodz, Russian Poland, most of the owners of factories there have been living in Berlin. The factories are not closed, but are managed by representatives of the absent owners, who exhibit strong distaste to returning to Lodz.

Recently the workmen at Lodz again threatened to strike and asked the owners to go back in order to settle the trouble. The owners declined to do so, and now the workmen have decided to send a deputation here to confer with them.

The attitude of the owners is not hard to explain when it is remembered that half a dozen proprietors of factories were murdered at Lodz last Autumn.

MAY END JEWISH INEQUALITY.

Czar, Amazed at Revelations, Ordered Witte to Prepare a Law.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 15.—Out of the violent anti-Semitic agitation of the Reactionaries may come unexpected good to the Jews. The entire Jewish question has been raised in an acute form and may be settled forthwith.

The Emperor is said to have been amazed at the revelations made by the Jewish deputation which the Premier received in audience on March 7 and to have informed Count Witte that it was urgently necessary to settle the question immediately. He instructed Count Witte to prepare a project providing for the equality of the Jews for presentation to the National Assembly.

NO GRAIN RATE CUT.

Freight Officials Decide Against Plan of Vanderbilt Roads.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 15.—Freight traffic officials of the roads running east from Chicago met here to-day to discuss a proposition to reduce grain rates on the opening of navigation to prevent the lake lines from carrying all the grain.

The Pennsylvania Road was strongly opposed to any reduction because of the great volume of other and more profitable traffic now moving, but the Vanderbilt lines wanted to have the domestic rate reduced from 17½ cents to 15 cents, the export rate from 13½ cents to 11½ cents, and the export rate from points west of the Missouri River 11 cents. The decision of the meeting was against reduction.

T. affairs would admit it.

New Haven Dry Goods Firm Fails.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 15.—Announcement was made here to-night that the Howe & Stetson Company, dry goods dealers, had gone into the hands of a temporary receiver. It is understood the firm's liabilities are about $200,000. The assets will not be known until an inventory is made.

SIR PURDON EXHIBITS NEW MUSEUM TREASURES

Rogers Money Bought Millais's Portia and a Maes Portrait.

CURATOR TELLS NEW POLICY

Collection Hitherto Without a Fixed Purpose, Says Mr. Fry—Effort for Historical Sequence.

At a reception yesterday afternoon at the Metropolitan Museum of Art three of the new acquisitions, two almost priceless pictures, were shown. One was of Ellen Terry, when she first played the part of Portia, and the other "A Portrait of an Old Lady," by Nicholas Maes. A half-tone of the latter was printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES last Sunday.

Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, acting as host, took his guests into the Directors' room to show the treaures he had been able to purchase out of the income from the Rogers bequest. The cost of the purchases was not given.

The "Portia," by Sir J. J. Millais, is so different from the stage heroine known to Americans as to suggest that the painter had idealized the expressive face. This was true only in that the artist substituted large eyes for the small ones of the actress, and gave them the expression of thoughtfulness and legal learning, characteristic of Ellen Terry in the rôle of Portia.

Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke hovered about the picture with affection. He said:

"Millais was among the greatest of the British painters, and I ought not to say that, because he was from Jersey. You see, we love art in our island, but most of our great painters were foreign born, Frenchmen, Americans, or others. They did find, however, a hospitable, friendly appreciative people with us. Millais came from Jersey, and was an uncle of Mrs. Langtry.

"He was again and again a surprise to his admirers. When he had gained fame by his marvelous work with the little brushes of three or four hairs each, he threw them aside and with the bold brush painted this masterpiece, among the most popular of the paintings in Great Britain. When he was known as the greatest portrait painter he turned to landscapes. This picture has been engraved and printed in colors. The best reproduction was a chromo-lithograph showing even the hair marks of the brush. It is behind glass in many an English home and in America."

Sir Purdon then guided his guests to the Maes painting. It was the picture of an old woman in black.

"I don't believe you would want her for a mother-in-law," said Sir Purdon, as he tilted the picture to the light. "She looks so severe, you know."

In the slanting light the eyes were filled with kindliness. There was the suggestion of a smile in the corners of the old woman's mouth.

"She could be my mother-in-law, if Portia were her daughter," said the youngest in the party. Sir Caspar let the picture rest in its natural position, bringing an austere expression to the face, and said:

"You might have a bad quarter of an hour now and then."

The third treasure was a water color reproduction, one-third the size of the cope, for which J. Pierpont Morgan paid £2,000 and returned to the Cathedral of Ascoli, from which it had been stolen. This was the gift of Mr. Morgan to the Museum. He has given others to other countries, the cost being only a little under what he paid for the cope.

Before tea was served in the Museum restaurant the guests were supplied with the fourth number of the monthly "Bulletin of the Metropolitan Museum of Art." This deals largely with the gifts of American art to the Museum by George A. Hearn. They have not yet been hung, owing to the recent illness of Mr. Hearn, and the authorities of the Museum wish the fact made public so that visitors may not be disappointed in not finding the collection. In the Hearn collection are the paintings, "Evening," by Louis Paul Dessar; "Young Woman," by Abbott Thayer; "Passaic River," by F. Pallard Williams, and "Cannon Rock," by Winslow Homer.

At the tea Roger E. Fry, curator of paintings, gave the following outline of the policy of the Museum.

"The collection here has been brought together with no fixed purpose. It is the result of generous and public-spirited impulses, springing up in the minds of benefactors of diversified gifts. We have the best of the nineteenth-century painters, splendid examples, and what we are trying to do is to get other pictures giving historical sequence. We are a little late in the field, and cannot expect to get examples of Michael Angelo and the masters, but we can get the works of the next best artists of their time.

"We are delighted with the crowds that throng the galleries, but we must not work alone for the visitors, but for the students. We must better our library and add to our collection of photographs, that the student, before going abroad, may have such works as will add to the value of his studies there.

"There is another point. The pictures regarded as masterpieces by authorities should be so placed that the public may know which are judged as among the best. That in itself is an education. We are sadly hampered for space, but this will not always be so, with coming additional buildings. The work must be done patiently, and it is in this way that we are doing it."

LOW PRICES AT ART SALE.

$8,760 for Seventy-five Canvases at Curtis and Brown Auction.

There was a good number of persons, considering the storm, at the American Art Galleries last night to take part in the sale of the paintings belonging to the estates of Mrs. Eliza Curtis of New York and of J. W. Brown of Brooklyn. The prices, however, were low, and the seventy-five canvases sold brought in a total of only $8,760. The highest price, $800, was paid for an excellent De Thoren, "Cattle," which went to Frederic C. Brown of Clinton Avenue, Brooklyn.

Mr. Brown was the biggest buyer, in total amount of purchases, of the evening. He paid $370 for "Lake Windermere, England," by John W. Casilear; $180 for Wiegand's "Midsummer Morning," and $35 for a flower piece by Gerard S. Backheusen, a total of $2,385. C. M. Warner of Syracuse was the largest buyer in point of numbers, bidding in fifteen paintings for $1,750. The most important was a "Girl Knitting," by the Finnish artist Edelfelt, for which he paid $250.

FRED SCHWED'S TRACTION CO.

It May Not Succeed in Settling the Curb's Merger Dispute After All.

Broker Fred Schwed, who, as told in THE TIMES yesterday, has incorporated the Consolidated Traction Company of New York, supposedly with a view to settling some curb disputes over Traction merger stock, said yesterday that his new company was "a private venture for future acquisition of street railway properties."

There is no immediate prospect of a settlement of the dispute unless a test case is brought in the courts. Many curb brokers say that the simplest way out of the mix-up would be to declare the transactions in "Consolidated Traction" off, but this would not suit everybody.

All Pure Beer Is Not Good Beer
Some Large Brewers Claim Purity and Sterilization and little else.
We Guarantee Purity, Sterilization and Excellence of Materials.
Superiority of Quality is the Test.

MOST beer, no matter by whom brewed, is clean, pure and sterilized.

These primary conditions prevail in nearly all breweries. Many pure, clean beers, however, are not good beers.

○○○○○

Clean, pure beer may be made from almost any cereal—and may be aged and sterilized, but it will not necessarily be good beer.

CORN OR OTHER CHEAP MATERIALS WILL NOT MAKE GOOD BEER.

The maximum of Quality is not there.

The brewers of Corn-made beer can and do justly claim purity, cleanliness and freedom from germs.

BUT THEY CANNOT JUSTLY CLAIM QUALITY.

○○○○○

Science and experience have proved that good beer MUST contain two essential ingredients—HOPS and BARLEY, and for pale beer a small percentage of rice.

But it is much cheaper to use Corn-Grits as a substitute for Barley-Malt.

This is why some of the large brewers use Corn—it costs less.

○○○○○

We use those materials which are recognized in the science of brewing as the essential elements for a really healthful, palatable, honest and superior beer; and of these only the very best, regardless of cost.

Not a grain of corn ever enters our brewery in any manner or for any purpose.

Our precautions for pure, clean and perfectly sterilized beer are unequaled.

○○○○○

Our storing capacity of 600,000 barrels, exceeding that of any two other breweries in the world, enables us to lager (age) our beer from four to five months.

CASTLEMAN AND JOYCE BEFORE INVESTIGATORS

Arbitrators Try A. A. U. Charges Against Crack Athletes.

COLLEGIAN ADMITS OFFENSE

Says Infringement Was Unwitting and Immaterial — Joyce Denies Indictment—Both Cases Continued.

The cases of John Joyce and Frank R. Castleman, the Irish-American Athletic Club athletes who have been under suspension since last July by the Amateur Athletic Union, and in behalf of whom injunctions were sought and obtained in court to compel the Amateur Athletic Union officials to allow them to compete in the Irish games at Madison Square Garden, were aired before the arbitrators appointed to decide the issue at the Grand Union Hotel yesterday afternoon. After testimony had been taken at length, the cases were adjourned pending the filing of exhibits pertaining to the testimony, when another session will be held at which a judgment will be rendered.

The cases after hanging fire for months were forced to an issue by a threat of the Registration Committee of the Amateur Athletic Union to discipline the Irish-American Athletic Club for the course it had pursued. An agreement was then reached to withdraw them from the courts and submit them to three arbitrators to be named by Secretary James E. Sullivan. Each side agreed to abide by the decision reached. The men named were Gustavus T. Kirby, Chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Intercollegiate Association; Patrick J. Walsh, President of the Metropolitan Amateur Athletes' Association, and Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick of the Public Schools Athletic League.

Both Castleman and Joyce were present at the meeting yesterday afternoon, together with their counsel, Daniel Colahan, and President Patrick Conway of the Irish-Americans. The Amateur Athletic Union case was prosecuted by Bartow S. Weeks, while John P. Boyle represented the Registration Committee. Joyce, Castleman, Conway, and J. J. McHugh were examined.

The charges against the two men were brought out publicly for the first time. Castleman, who was first examined, is charged with two technical violations of the Amateur Athletic Union rules, and is under suspicion by reason of playing baseball in the Summer in the Adirondacks. The technical violations were established and some evidence taken on the Summer nine question.

It was admitted by Castleman that he competed in June, 1905, in games in Elmira under the Elks' auspices, at which he won five first and three third prizes, and which were unauthorized by the A. A. U., and again at Pittsburg in July, 1904, at unauthorized games, where he won five prizes. At the latter meeting he accepted diamond studs as prizes, although such prizes are forbidden by the Amateur Athletic Union. He testified that he had paid his own expenses to and from the games, something over $20, spending more money on the trip than he made in a month's service in the Adirondacks. He produced the diamonds, and when Bartow Weeks asked if they were inscribed, as required, pleading poor eyesight, Castleman replied that the diamonds would not dazzle the attorney's eyes sufficiently to conceal the fact that they were not inscribed.

He admitted receiving $20 a month at Paul's Smith's, where he claimed to be employed as bellboy during the Summer, and denied a receipt for a greater sum, which Mr. Weeks said he could produce. Castleman pleaded ignorance of the laws of the Amateur Athletic Union relative to the prizes and as to whether either set of games had been authorized or not. Attorney Weeks contended that he was obligated to ascertain that before he competed.

No specific charge was brought against Joyce, who followed Castleman on the stand, further than suspicious circumstances. It was demonstrated that Joyce had been entered and advertised to run last Independence Day at Celtic Park, and in spite of this had gone to Medford Park, Boston, and competed there against Hines, the Irish runner. Joyce denied entering at Celtic Park; said he had informed Father Hardy, who arranged the games, and President Conway that he did not intend to compete, and that the use of his name was unauthorized.

He was suspended on the information furnished by Father Hardy to James E. Sullivan, that President Lally of the Galway Men's Association had stated that Hines and probably Joyce might have been secured for Celtic Park, but they were to appear at Medford Park, and added that the payment of $100 would secure Hines, whom he asserted he managed.

J. J. McHugh, who managed the games, said he had entered Joyce on instruction from President Conway, who in his turn testified to the contrary, and a letter was submitted from Hines stating that Lally assumed to be his manager without authority. The impression appeared to be that Hines and Joyce were hippodroming when the latter was suspended, having run three races, Joyce winning the first, Hines the second, and Joyce the third. The meeting then adjourned.

Columbia Juniors Win at Hockey.

With the 'Varsity hockey forward line playing for the Columbia juniors, the 1907 boys defeated their rivals, the seniors, by 2—0 in a match in the university championship series yesterday at St. Nicholas Rink. The game was a rough-and-tumble affair, marked throughout with the spirit that is evident at interclass matches played by college boys, but Dederer was the only man ruled off. By winning from the seniors, the juniors will have the freshmen as their rivals for the final game. Summary:

1907. (2.)	Position.	1906. (0.)

Dirt Track for Pastime A. C. Games.

Athletes competing in the Pastime Athletic Club games at Madison Square Garden on Saturday night will be permitted to wear spikes in their running shoes. This is made possible by the substitution of a dirt track for boards. Many members of the American Olympic team will take part in the events, among them being Archie Hahn, W. D. Eaton, H. L. Hillman, Jr., Myer Prinstein, J. P. Sullivan, Harvey Cohn, C. J. Bacon, George V. Bonhag, Martin J. Sheridan, James S. Mitchel, and Richard Sheldon. Five teams have entered the one-mile high school relay championship, and the same number of teams will contest the tug-of-war.

OUTLAWS AFTER THE GIANTS.

Big Offer to Gilbert to Jump to Williamsport—Others Approached.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 15.—The outlaw baseball teams in Pennsylvania, said to have solicited Donlin to join their ranks, attempted to invade the ranks of the world's champions again to-day, making a tempting offer to Billy Gilbert, the Giant's second baseman. The popular little fellow was promised $500 per month to play for Williamsport.

Donlin, who was suspended last night by Manager McGraw, reiterated his statement to-day that he would desert the Giants and play independent ball. Williamsport offered him $600 per month to play in Williamsport. Later, however, he apologized to Manager McGraw, and asked to be reinstated, but McGraw only promised to consider it. He may play to-morrow.

It is understood that Gilbert and Donlin are not the only men who have been approached by the outlaws, though none of the other men admit receiving propositions to jump.

McGraw is not worried. He says that no player deserting could hope for clemency, but would be placed on the blacklist and kept there.

Christy Mathewson's condition has considerably improved. He may practice in the next few days. Cold weather and wet grounds prevented play to-day.

LAUDER'S BASEBALL SCHOOL.

One Freshman's Idea of the Game and His Chances for the Team.

"Billy" Lauder, coach of the Columbia baseball team, called his charges together yesterday to have a "heart-to-heart" talk with them on the scientific method of playing the game. Lauder is not satisfied with having his men get a mere practical knowledge of stick work and base running, but has taken up the scheme of periodic "lectures" to give the 'Varsity aspirants the finer points of the game. With charts and diagrams and a pointer Lauder is a real schoolmaster, with all the honor pertaining to the position as well as its incidental disadvantages.

"With two men on bases," said Lauder to an aspiring freshman, "and two out, what would you do if at the bat?"

"Sacrifice," promptly responded the freshman, while the coach and old 'Varsity players gasped for breath.

"What in the name of intercollegiate baseball would you do that for?" roared Capt. Tilt in disgust.

"To give the fellows on base a chance to steal," chirped the youngster, satisfied with his progress.

"That will do," said Lauder.

"You've got a swell chance of making the team," echoed Tilt; "better go home and eat brain food."

AMERICANS PLAY INDOORS.

Cold Weather Drives New Yorks from the Ball Field.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 15.—On account of a sudden descent of cold weather on Birmingham to-day the game between the "Barons" and the "Highlanders" was again postponed. Manager Griffiths raised the temperature a few degrees by some remarks concerning perpetual Summer in the Sunny South before putting the players to work in the morning at indoor baseball.

Delehanty, Moriarity, and Laporte have not arrived on the scene as yet, and it is now doubtful whether or not they will appear. Griffiths says, however, that he is not worrying. Delehanty persists in demanding a portion of the money paid by New York to Birmingham for his release.

COURT TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

Championship of the United States to be Held on Sept. 3.

The annual tournament for the cup offered by the New York Racquet and Tennis Club and the Boston Athletic Association for the amateur court tennis championship of the United States will be held on the courts of the New York Racquet and Tennis Club on April 3 and the following days. Entries will close March 26. All matches will be best of five sets, and only sets that may decide a match will be vantage sets.

Each entry will play every other entry if the number of entries does not exceed four. If the number of entries exceeds four the drawing will be made and the tournament conducted on the Bagnal-Wilde system, which is similar to the outdoor tennis tournaments. The cup will be held for one year by the club whose member has won the tournament for the year, and the winner will be presented with a special cup. Among those who will compete are Charles E. Sands, Jay Gould, and Pierre Lorillard, Jr.

To Enlist Schoolboy Oarsman.

An effort will be made by the authorities in charge of the American regatta on the Schuylkill to enlist interscholastic crews from various parts of the country in an interscholastic championship race in that regatta. Boston has organized an interscholastic association, and will hold a regatta in June, and will probably send the two crews to finish first and second to Philadelphia. The Quaker City schoolboys have long had interscholastic rowing, and Chicago is taking it up. Letters are being sent to various schools about New York and Long Island suggesting the organization of crews and the entrance into the race. The projectors of the contests say that the introduction of rowing in the schools will mean the improvement of club and college aquatics a hundredfold.

Deplore College Athletic Abuses.

CHICAGO, March 15.—W. H. P. Faunce, President of Brown University, deplored the "universal deception and trickery characterizing college athletics" at the annual dinner of the Chicago Alumni Association of that institution last night.

"The Faculty of Brown University has taken radical action to remedy these evils," said President Faunce, "but it has received little co-operation from other colleges and will be compelled to make the fight alone.

"Members of the Brown Faculty believe they have done much toward a solution of the problem by giving the students a free hand in forming and enforcing their own rules. The students already have begun to do this, and the prospect is encouraging."

Ambassador Reid's Son Hurt.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 15.—An accident to Ogden Mills Reid, son of Whitelaw Reid, the American Ambassador to Great Britain, has taken him out of athletics for a time. He was Captain of the Yale water polo and swimming teams, and has been obliged to quit swimming for the present. In a frolic in his dormitory he stuck his hand through a broken pane of glass, cutting the arm. The wound has been stitched. Reid expects to be able to rejoin the water polo team in time for the intercollegiate matches.

Two Races for Vanderbilt.

PARIS, March 15.—At the St. Cloud races to-day W. K. Vanderbilt's Prestige, with Ransch up, won the Prix de St. Cloud, and his Malta, with Ransch in the saddle, captured the Prix Villamblain.

GLIDDEN TOUR CHANGE WANTED BY WESTERNERS

Detroit Now Suggested for Start with Run Through Canada.

NEW ENGLAND OPPOSES IT

Paul Deming's Committee Will Soon Meet to Settle the Difficulty—Favorable Report on Roads.

Paul Deming, Chairman of the Touring Committee of the American Automobile Association, has received a number of suggestions since his appointment regarding the route for the coming Glidden Cup tour. Although a resident of Detroit, Mr. Deming is well known to New York automobilists, and he is so frequently in this city that the first meeting of his committee to discuss plans for the tour will probably be held here within a few days. Like Mr. Thompson of the Racing Committee, he has been in conference with President John Farson, and it is expected that announcements of the complete A. A. A. committees will be made within a week.

Since the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers was asked by the A. A. A. to present its views upon the conditions and route of the Glidden tour, interest has been aroused among prospective contestants, and there is a general eagerness to know definitely where the run will start, where it will end, and what the altered conditions may be that must be observed to win the cup.

The Western automobilists are insisting strongly that the tour start from their section of the country, and, as the chief officers of the A. A. A. are now Western men, the inference seems to be that the Westerners will carry their point. There is, however, considerable opposition to choosing a Far Western point, and this will not be weakened in view of the latest suggestion that Detroit be made the starting place instead of Cleveland.

The Boston and New England autoists are insisting upon a run through New England for a part of the route. During the show in Boston this week several conferences have been held on this subject, and a New York visitor who returned yesterday said that the Bostonians were practically united in the demand that New England be included in the route. Louis R. Speare, President of the Bay State Automobile Club and an A. A. A. Director has expressed himself firmly against the Canadian and far Western tour to the absolute elimination of the excellent touring conditions in New England.

The Canadian route will undoubtedly be insisted upon by the committee on account of the international flavor that it will give to the contest this year. The Glidden Cup Commission does not wish the impression to go abroad that the trophy is held entirely for American touring interests. It is really open to the world, and although the Canadian trip may excite opposition from certain sections, it is believed that automobile interests will be greatly benefited by holding an important endurance run of the best machines in new localities.

A. W. Church of this city, a well-known automobilist, said yesterday that he was not personally opposed to Canada. He thought that exaggerated statements had been made regarding the miserable roads there.

"If the tour starts from Detroit," he said, "the contestants will cross to Sarnia, the nearest Canadian point. From Sarnia, I presume the tour would lead through Hamilton, Woodstock, Toronto, Belleville, and Kingston. This gives a route of about 400 miles and there are good macadam roads nearly all the way. As a hill climbing test, there are two hills just outside of Sarnia that will demonstrate the abilities of the competing cars to get up steep ascents fully as well as any of the climbs in the White Mountains. This trip to Kingston will make a beautiful, picturesque tour, but at Kingston it ought to end and arrangements could be made to ferry the cars across to Cape Vincent on the New York border."

From Kingston to Montreal, Mr. Church said was perhaps a trifle over 100 miles, but the road is abominable. There is a fifteen-mile stretch that is practically a path through the woods, filled with stumps and boulders. He only knows of one car that ever attempted to travel this road and it took five hours to go the fifteen miles. To reach Montreal by any better route a long detour toward the north would be necessary.

Several tourists who have taken their cars into Canada have complained of the exasperating delays they met in getting through the Custom Houses. Mr. Church said that he had never experienced much difficulty in this direction, and as satisfactory arrangements could easily be made in advance, he did not think there ought to be any trouble for the Glidden tourists in this direction. If the tour should end at Kingston and be resumed again at Cape Vincent, the cars could find tolerable roads to Albany, and then take in Saratoga and continue to New York to finish.

Berkeley School Hockey Team Won.

Purdy of the Berkeley School hockey team scored the winning goal last night for his side in their match with the seven of the Groff School. His long shot for the netting was the only one that went straight to the mark during the keenly fought contest on the ice of the St. Nicholas Rink. The match was practically a resumption of the tie game which was played several weeks ago, and resulted in the score of 1 goal to 1. The feeling between the teams ran high when they met last night, and during the first half neither side was successful in getting the rubber disk into the netting. Line-up:

Berkeley, 1.	Position.	Groff, 0.
Ferguson	Goal	Mulligan
Suydam	Point	Lane
Sturges	Cover point	Butz
Wilson, Tausey	Forward	Dillingham
Purdy	Forward	Carhart
Barber	Forward	Farrell
Nathan	Forward	Noble

Referee—Benny Phillips, Hockey Club of New York. Goal Umpires—M. Edson, Irving School, and G. B. Carhart, Groff School.

Amendment to Rapid Transit Act.

ALBANY, March 15.—The campaign of the City Club to bring about certain changes in the Rapid Transit act was carried further to-day by the introduction of a bill by Assemblyman Prentice providing that before the terms of a contract shall be fixed or agreed upon the Transit Commissioners shall give hearings open to all citizens upon the proposed terms and conditions of the contract.

SECRETARY SULLIVAN SAILS.

Olympic Games Representative Sanguine Over Team's Prospects.

James E. Sullivan, Secretary of the American Committee of the Olympic Games, to be held at Athens, Greece, sailed yesterday on the Hamburg-American liner Deutschland. He will visit London on his way to Athens, where he will meet the officials of the English Amateur Athletic Association, and complete the details for an international athletic alliance between the United States and England. When Secretary Sullivan was in London last December plans were almost perfected, but the serious illness of the Secretary of the English Athletic Association prevented the completion of the arrangements at that time.

Before his departure Mr. Sullivan expressed his gratification over the amount of money that has been subscribed to the fund, which was started several months ago, to send the American team to Athens. In relation to the team Mr. Sullivan said:

"The team as selected is the best team that an American committee could possibly select at this time of the year. After the American Committee was appointed our committee asked the Olympic Committee at Athens to try and change the date of competition, but after it was learned that this could not be done, and that the Greek Committee positively insisted on April being the date, the American Committee proceeded to do the best it could, under the conditions, from the material that presented itself.

"We could not select a team of America's strongest athletes simply because college men could not make the trip at this season of the year. Those who have not been selected are men who are at college and could not get from their college authorities permission to take this trip. Still others who were not selected are men, whom the committee felt it would not be wise to take as members of the team.

"The team is a strong one, but not as strong as it should be, and we will have to work hard to finish ahead of the teams from other countries. At present, it looks as though the winnings will be divided up between several foreign countries. England will have a team of the strongest possible distance runners; France, a champion pole vaulter and a good long-distance runner; Australia, a sprinter, and it is said Ireland will have two capital jumpers. We all, perhaps, know that England is ahead of our distance men in that branch of sport. It is to be hoped that our men will use every possible endeavor to get into condition and keep in condition. With hurdlers, weight throwers, and jumpers we will more than hold our own, and in the swimming department we all look to Daniels to score several victories."

MARKSMEN'S GOOD SCORES.

Excellent Shooting in the Zettler Rifle Club Tournament.

The rifle tournament in progress on the range at 159 West Twenty-third Street under the auspices of the Zettler Rifle Club has developed some excellent scores. Starting last Saturday, to continue for seven days, there is every probability of some very notable performances being recorded. The best work has been done in the contest for the Zimmerman Trophy, three shots at a Zimmerman taget at 75 yards range, unlimited re-entry. The target presents a slit three-eighths of an inch long for a 13 score, surrounded by rings one-eighth of an inch apart. R. Gute and L. Ittel have each scored three 38s, but no one has scored a perfect 39.

At the re-entry ring target, one-eighth inch rings, three shots on a target, possible 75 score, there have been 13 perfect scores and many 74s and 73s. In this the same two men lead, each with three perfect scores. A. F. Laudensack shares the honors with them. L. Buss has two 75s, and E. H. Van Zandt and W. J. Carr one each. Among those making 74 are F. R. Geisel, M. Dorsler, F. C. Ross, M. Baal, A. Hubalck, O. Smith, H. M. Thomas, P. Muth, and W. A. Tewes.

The best score in the 100-shot championship, one-quarter inch rings, possible 2,500, A. Hubalck leads with 2,468, with W. A. Tewes 7 behind him. O. Smith, 2,451; M. Baal, 2,448; W. J. Carr, 2,435; L. Buss, 2,434; W. H. French, 2,433; W. Rosenbaum, 2,419; E. H. Van Zandt, 2,412; G. F. Conti, 2,411; F. L. Farr, 2,401, and R. Busse, 2,400, are those within 100 of perfection.

In the re-entry match for the best bull's eye by measurement eight have bettered 20 degrees, with M. Rosenbaum leading with 16½; L. Ittel, 17½; L. Buss, W. E. Glenn, M. Dorsler, and L. Bernius, 18½; F. H. Keller, 19, and W. J. Zingsheim, 19½.

F. H. Kellar has scored the largest number of bull's eyes, 52, with M. Dorsler second with 37, P. Muth third with 36, and Gus Zimmerman fourth with 21.

A number of prominent out-of-town marksmen are competing.

Columbia's Weekly Track Meet.

The Columbia Track Association held the sixth of its weekly indoor track meets in the gymnasium yesterday, C. E. Grunsky and B. Sanders winning again in the 176-yard run and half-mile run, respectively. Grunsky holds first place in the one and two lap series, Sanders having the greatest number of points in the mile and half-mile events.

"Josh" Crooks, the coach, expected that this would be the last of the series; but owing to weather conditions it is the intention to continue these meets until the men can go outdoors. Summary:

One Lap, 176 Yards.—C. E. Grunsky, '07, S., (scratch,) first; T. C. Morgan, '09, C., (2½ yards,) second; F. H. McCoun, '09, (5 yards,) third. Time—0:20 4-5.

Half Mile.—B. Sanders, '09, (scratch,) first; R. W. Cauchois, '07, S., (10 yards,) second; C. R. Brodix, '07, C., (70 yards,) third. Time—2:07.

Changes in Cornell Crews.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 15.—The Cornell crews received their first shake-up to-day when Coach Courtney made some important changes in the combinations. Goodier took the place of Dulaney, who has been rowing in the first combination for several weeks. Dulaney went back to the second 'Varsity.

The freshmen received a shake-up all around. The crews are now rowing as follows:

First 'Varsity—Bow, Newman; 2, Barton; 3, Stowell; 4, Dods; 5, Prushs; 6, Goodier; 7, Lee; stroke, Foote; coxswain, Taylor.

Second 'Varsity—Bow, Earle; 2, Powers; 3, Hooper; 4, Dulaney; 5, Gavell; 6, Sumner; 7, Acklin; stroke, Cox; coxswain, G. A. Rankin.

First Freshmen—Bow, Clark; 2, Wurst; 3, Seymour; 4, Simpson; 5, Conant; 6, McCallum; 7, Vail; stroke, Weed; coxswain, Treene.

Second Freshmen—Bow, Dullen; 2, Wells; 3, Frost; 4, Sanger; 5, Cosgrove; 6, Wegman; 7, McCutcheon; stroke, Halberg; coxswain, Sloan.

Doubles Racquet Entries.

Entries for the doubles racquet championship of the United States, which will be held at the New York Racquet and Tennis Club on March 26 and the following days, closed last night. Ten entries have been received up to the present, although an additional entry is expected from Boston to-day and one or more from Montreal. New York will be represented by five teams, Philadelphia has entered four, and Boston one. The entry list is the biggest on record and includes several former champions.

The entries from the New York Racquet and Tennis Club are E. T. Irvin and Erskine Hewitt, Clarence H. Mackay and George C. Clark, Jr., Ford Huntingdon and R. P. Huntingdon, Morton S. Paton and partner, and Lawrence Waterbury and partner.

SNOW BALKS TRAINING ON L. I. RACE TRACKS

Bennington's Two-Year-Olds in Mile Work-Outs.

BENNING STARTERS DELAYED

Leased Youngsters Will Largely Comprise the Oxnard Dinner Stake Field—Good Race Expected.

Trainers who have been preparing their horses for a season at Benning had a setback yesterday when the blizzard hit Long Island. As a matter of fact, the track at Gravesend was in good condition for gallops, but there was a driving hail that made anything like speed tests most uncomfortable for both the horses and the boys. About the only stable that accomplished anything like real work was that of Newton Bennington. Trainer Burlew had the two-year-olds under saddle, and in all he worked five sets. Seven of them were put to a nice open gallop at a mile, while those in the other sets were not asked for quite so much.

At this season of the year a trainer does not like to lose a day after he has once commenced the sharpening of his horses, and though there was not a horse shown on the yearling track, many had light exercise under the shelter of the stable sheds. James Rowe had his big string exercised in that manner, and A. J. Joyner, J. Hyland, W. O. Scully, and W. H. Karrick, with those of the Oneck Stable, followed the same plan.

The change in weather conditions made necessary the postponement of the departure of "Jimmy" McLaughlin and his big Benning string. All the packing had been completed Wednesday, and all was in readiness for an early start yesterday, even to the car, which was on the siding at Sheepshead Bay, ready for loading. When the storm came up, McLaughlin decided that he would postpone his departure until to-morrow. Should conditions permit, he will give his horses a final breezing exercise and have an early start for the track of the Washington Jockey Club. McLaughlin will probably ship a larger string than any of the trainers to leave from New York, and the manner in which his horses have been going along of late suggests that they will be well worth remembering when the season opens.

"Father Bill" Daly, who is seldom deterred by bad weather, is one of the Benning contingent that would not face the weather yesterday. He has all of his horses well advanced in their training, and gave them a rest through the driving storm. He will probably ship Tuesday.

John Hynes, who was expected at Gravesend from his Stamford, Conn., farm, did not arrive, doubtless having been held up by the storm. He has several good ones in his care, and his arrival will be not without its importance to the training colony.

Some few trainers had horses under saddle along the Boulevard, but the day was one of the dullest that has been had since the commencement of the Spring training operations.

When the field of two-year-olds goes to the post for the Oxnard Dinner Stake at Benning it will be composed largely of youngsters, leased specially. In many stakes of this character starters are frequently leased, but for the Oxnard there appear to be a greater number than ever before. Some of the latest rented ones for the occasion are from the Chelsea stable to Horace W. Westcott, Sprigtail, and L'Orpheline. From Oakley stable to E. A. Mitchell, Mammymoo and Bettie Landon. From W. F. Presgrave to James Kerr, Wicomico, and from the Albemarle stable to George Howard, Manila. All of these youngsters have shown excellent trials, and there is every probability that the fashionable stake will furnish an excellent contest.

POGGENBURG'S GOOD CUE.

New York Billiardist Wins in Championship by Close Play.

CHICAGO, Ill., March 15.—Phenomenally close balk line billiards on the part of J. Ferdinand Poggenburg of the Liederkranz Club, New York, resulted in his winning his match in the National amateur championship tournament to-day at the Chicago Athletic Association. Poggenburg counted the final 228 points of his string on his last eight turns at the table. The best run that he made during this period was a cluster of 112, all gained by marvelously delicate nursing along the end rail and in the limitless centre panel. The most remarkable feature of the match was that the New Yorker should defeat Harry A. Wright of San Francisco, the favorite for the titular honors this year, by a score of 300 points to 160. Poggenburg's average for the competition was 16 12-18. In the other match of the day's schedule Calvin Demarest of Chicago defeated Charles S. Norris of New York by the score of 300 points to 129.

Both Poggenburg and Wright began their strings at the fourteen-inch balk-line game, two counts in balk, showing somewhat erratic cue manipulation. The New Yorker failed repeatedly to coax the ivory balls into position for anything like close play. At the end of his tenth inning his string only tallied a total of 72 buttons, while Wright was slightly in the lead.

Upon his eleventh turn at the table Poggenburg by three masterful round-the-table shots brought the ivories together in a lower corner. From excellent position he proceeded to weave the balls back and forth over the chalked lines until he had up to a total of 112 carroms, one more than the run made by Wright on the day previous. This big cluster distanced the skillful amateur from the Pacific Coast. He vainly attempted to overcome the ex-champion's lead, but Poggenburg had found his stroke and he brought out double figure runs as if by magic with his cue. The performance of the New Yorker elicited considerable applause. He has not yet met with defeat and is now regarded as the most promising aspirant for the National championship honors.

The young Western amateur, Demarest, did all of the playing in his match with Norris. The latter found it difficult to hold the balls at all close even when splendid opportunities were presented to him. From the twelfth inning Demarest played strongly and easily won the competition.

In to-night's game Gardner defeated Conklin of Chicago, 300 to 207. Gardner reached 300 in the twenty-second inning. He played a game that was brilliant in spots and at other times poor. His high run for the game was 88, in the twelfth inning. The balls rolled into a straight line at this point, however, and he missed with a total score of 268 points. This gave Gardner a good opportunity to make the high average so far in the tournament, but he fell off in the succeeding innings. Conklin played his usual game, but it was not good enough to win. At the time Gardner ran the game out Conklin's total stood at 207. His high run for the game was 52, made in the tenth inning. Summary:

J. Ferdinand Poggenburg, New York—Total, 300 points; average, 16 12-18; high runs, 112, 40, and 39. Harry A. Wright, San Francisco—Total, 160 points; average, 8 16-18; high runs, 36, 32, and 32.

Calvin Demarest, Chicago—Total, 300 points; average, 11 14-26; high runs, 66 and 43. Charles S. Norris, New York—Total, 129 points; average, 5 4-25; high run, 29.

FINE BILLIARDS BY HOPPE.

Two Runs of Over 100 in High Average Game Against Gallagher.

Willie Hoppe, the world's champion billiardist, was in fine form last night in his game against Tom Gallagher in Hoppe's billiard rooms, 56 West Thirtieth Street. He made a splendid run of 444 in 16 innings, averaging 27 12-16, and made two runs of over 100, the first time since he began practicing for his coming match with Slosson that he has scored over 100 twice in one game. Gallagher did 219. The scores are:

Hoppe—0 7 143 34 0 51 17 15 11 4 104 4 5 30 9 10. Total, 444; average, 27 12-16.

Gallagher—38 6 20 58 0 15 13 6 3 17 12 5 2 12 12 0. Total, 219; average, 13 11-16.

Hoppe played 18.1 balkline and Gallagher 18.2. The men completed their three nights' series last night, Hoppe scoring the full 1,200 points to a total of 1,019 for Gallagher. The latter, however, beat Hoppe on the two previous individual games, but Hoppe's fast play last night brought him ahead in the total result.

In the afternoon game Hoppe scored 200 against 17 for P. Da[illegible]. Hoppe averaged 13 5-15, and his best run was 42.

OARSMAN CODY A "PRO."

Resignation of Lieutenant of Harlem R. C. Requested by Governors.

The resignation of W. E. Cody of the Harlem Rowing Club has been requested by the Board of Governors of that organization. This action was decided upon at a special meeting which was called to investigate the charges of professionalism which had been lodged against Cody. The specific charge against Lieut. Cody is that he coached the members of the Nautilus Boat Club of Bay Ridge two years ago and received payment for the same.

The action of the Harlem Rowing Club officials will be a big surprise to the rowing element of this city, with whom Cody was very popular. The accused oarsman is one of the oldest members of the Harlem Rowing Club and rowed under the club colors in many races.

While it was known that Cody had coached the Nautilus Boat Club crews, it was generally supposed that he had done so through friendship for several of the officers, and no particular notice was paid to the fact. Two months ago Cody announced his candidacy for the office of Vice President of the Harlem Regatta Association in opposition to Emil Kimmelberg, who was a candidate for re-election. While electioneering, Cody antagonized many oarsmen, and hints were dropped reflecting on his amateur standing. Cody was defeated by the vote of 10 to 7. After the election, Cody was openly charged with professionalism, and the Board of Governors of the Harlem Rowing Club investigated the charges.

The accused oarsman was informed that the club would stand behind him if he was guiltless of the charges, but otherwise his case would be dealt with as any other member of the club. Cody admitted receiving money from the Nautilus Boat Club for services as a coach, and the request for his resignation followed. It is likely that the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen will take action on his case at its annual meeting to-morrow.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

A report has recently been made to the Governors of the Automobile Club of America by George F. Chamberlin, Chairman of the Committee on Tests. It is the intention of the club to offer special prizes for tests of various sorts this year for the purpose of increasing various elements of automobile efficiency. The Governors will discuss the plans proposed at the next meeting, which will be held soon after the return from the South of President Dave Hennen Morris, who is expected back next week.

The New Jersey automobilists, notwithstanding the fact that the obnoxious Frelinghuysen bill has passed the Senate, are not discouraged. Quiet methods are at work to defeat the bill in the House, with, so it is claimed, very fair hopes for success.

That the recently organized Motor Federation of Pennsylvania is inclined to be more closely affiliated with the American Motor League than with the active principles of the American Automobile Association is beginning to be realized by automobilists who understand the somewhat peculiar motor conditions in Pennsylvania. The fact that several officers of the federation are office holders in the Motor League gives credence to this view. Indeed, statements have already been made to American Automobile Association members that if that organization would consent to consolidate with the Motor League the Pennsylvania Federation might be induced to return to the American Automobile Association fold.

M. J. Rothschild has sold to P. F. Collier two Rothschild bodies for a new C. G. V. chassis, which Mr. Collier has just bought. One will be a touring body, while the second transforms the car into a semi-racer.

For the opening automobile meet of the year to be held at the Atlantic City beach April 26, 27, and 28 the Atlantic City Club announces a programme of events which offers an opportunity for every type of automobile to show its worth in competition. There will be eighteen races over the beach track and record trials for cars of all weights. Besides the speed events, there will be a quarter-mile race on the reverse gear and a tug-of-war.

LOZIER

TROUBLES

Motor Car trouble are of at least two kinds—what you buy and what you make.

You buy trouble when you purchase a car that is poorly designed, poorly constructed and alluring in price.

You make trouble even when you buy a good car by not giving it proper care.

In either of which cases, you probably get all you deserve.

In THE LOZIER CAR you can't buy trouble—we can't give you any—and you must make a mistake to make any.

Deliveries: 35 and 40 H. P. at $4,500 and $5,500 and bookings; 60 H. P. for May delivery ($7,000.)

WHOLESOME FUN FOR OLD AND YOUNG

The Roosevelt Bears Arrive in Boston

Things went well till half-past six
When the Roosevelt Bears got in a mix.
The train had stopped at a little town
When TEDDY—G stepped out and down
And across a platform to a stand
Where folks eat breakfast from their hand.
He ordered steak, well-done, and ham,
And a chicken pie and toast with jam,
And fried potatoes and coffee hot,
And Boston baked beans in a pot.
The waiter nearly had a fit
But he placed the order bit by bit
While TEDDY—G stood by and read
The signs while the train had gone ahead
To another town at a lively rate
Where TEDDY—B who had risen late
Got a telegram from his traveling mate
Which read this way: "I'm off my trolley;
I'm left behind: my breakfast's jolly;
Get off yourself and wait for me;
Let the train go on," signed "TEDDY—G."

SIXTEEN PAGES.

THE CINCINNATI ROOSEVELT CLUB.

We note with much interest that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft have accepted honorary membership in the Roosevelt Club of Hamilton County, Ohio. The cardinal principles of the club are opposition to bossism and machine politics and advocacy of direct nominations and the separation of municipal from National party politics. They are very sound principles and doubtless the President can do much to promote them.

We are bound to confess, however, that we cannot see much chance of abolishing bossism in the Republican or in the Democratic Party by a mere change in the machinery for making nominations, because the bosses will always be on the alert, inspired by the most potent of motives, to control the machinery, whatever it is. Unless the body of the party is willing to take a great deal of trouble not merely at one season of the year but all the year round, the bosses will swing them. It does not follow that the machinery should not be made as simple and as fair as possible and that undue opportunities for manipulation should not be abolished wherever practicable. But when all has been done that can be done the men who make a business of politics will be more efficient at it than the common citizens who have only an indirect, partial, intermittent interest. To take a striking example, Mr. Roosevelt himself has shown what persistent, tireless, acute, and careful attention to politics can do for the gratification of honorable ambition. The means are unfortunately equally efficacious when the motives are not so commendable.

There is another phase of this highly important subject to which it is permissible to direct public consideration. Most men who make a business of politics do so for the profit there is in the places and in the illegitimate use of the places. The greed for these advantages is the motive power of what the Hamilton County Roosevelt Club calls "machine politics." It is by his ability to handle the places and to dispense the gains therefrom that the boss is secure in his authority. Mr. Roosevelt has done very much in the course of his political life to take this source of power away from the professional politician. As President of the Civil Service Commission in Washington, as the chief promoter of the present sound civil service law in this State enacted when he was Governor, and in many of his acts since he became President, he has aided greatly in making appointments depend on tested merit instead of on personal or party favoritism. He has also at times, in his recognition of Senators and of State leaders as the purveyors of patronage within his own discretion, done very much for the strengthening of the system of bossism and machine politics. We do not think that in any other way he could have organized the tremendous victory over all opponents that he won in the last Republican National Convention. With his clear consciousness of the high ends for which he was determined to use the office of President, and with the certainty that he could not be elected unless he were nominated, his conviction that the ends justified the means is natural and logical. Nevertheless, the particular crusade on which the Hamilton County Roosevelt Club has entered and with which he has associated himself will encounter insuperable obstacles unless these means are to be abandoned in the future. It will be seen that the subject is a complicated one and that resolutions of the most commendable sort will not suffice in themselves to dispose of it.

THE SPEAKER'S DESCENT.

It is soothing to see even the Speaker of the House of Representatives climb more or less gracefully down, acknowledge, in effect, that he is not the whole thing in the legislation of this Republic. Speaker Reed magnified his office to the entire extent, if not beyond the entire extent, to which it could reasonably be carried. His was a despotism tempered by personal geniality. Such, for that matter, is the Czardom of Speaker Cannon.

All the more gratifying that Speaker Cannon has been compelled to recognize that there are limits. Nobody can be ignorant that the Statehood bill, as he knows it, including in one Commonwealth New Mexico and Arizona, is near his heart, or his liver, or whatever organ may be the real seat of his political indigestion. He has used, not without too much scruple, the whole force of his office to dragoon the bill through the House, and to introduce into the astonished Union two communities unequally yoked together and violently chafing at the yoke.

What New Mexico and Arizona may think about it, the Speaker has made manifest, is a matter of entire indifference to him. But it seems that the American people, at large as well as at small in the two communities in question, have views upon it. And their notions have finally availed to make an effective obstacle even to Speaker Cannon's "fixed idea." "The consent of the governed" may not be a very active political force in Porto Rico or the Philippines. But there are increasing signs that the consent of the governed, in communities seeking admission to Statehood, is still enough of a political force to cause even the headlong and precipitate Cannon to abate his muzzle velocity and sharpen his flat trajectory. The demonstration that even a Speaker of the House of Representatives "sometimes hears to roll the thunders of Heaven in the voice of a united people" is of political value and of political importance.

LABOR ANARCHISTS.

Following so closely upon the attempt to destroy a building in Twenty-third Street, the successful attempt to wreck a grocery store in Duane Street ought to attract the attention, no doubt primarily of the police, but also of every citizen who believes in the reign of the law. The firm concerned had objected to paying its teamsters as much as the teamsters thought they ought to have. No firm, it may confidently be asserted, pays its teamsters as much as they think they ought to have. When the difference becomes acute between the view of the employers and the view of the employed, either the employed strike or the employers "lock out." In this case the crisis has culminated in a strike.

Sometimes there is no way of determining whether the employer can or cannot get his work done on better terms for himself than his actual employés demand except by a strike or a lock-out. The right of dissatisfied employés to quit work is as sacred and secure as the right of dissatisfied employers to endeavor to secure other labor. But it is no more so. Every effort on the part of the employers to prevent their late employés from getting work in the open market and on the terms thereof is no longer a legitimate exercise of legal rights, but a criminal conspiracy. Likewise, every effort on the part of the employés to prevent by violence the employers from filling their places with men willing to take them on terms more satisfactory to the employers than those which they demand is no longer the exercise of legal rights, but a criminal conspiracy.

One is almost ashamed to repeat these truisms. But it seems one must. When a party of strikers becomes a party of wreckers, their "cause" ceases to be that of labor, and becomes simply a case of crime. That is what happened in the attempted explosion in Twenty-third Street. That is what happened in the actual explosion in Duane Street, which was accomplished, it seems, in particular contempt and defiance of law, and almost under the nose of a policeman. It behooves every New Yorker who is not an Anarchist to do his part toward securing the community against the repetition of such outrages. And the very first step toward attaining such a security is entirely to disregard the plea of the trades union in behalf of which the outrage was committed that it did not order the outrage by which it was to profit. The business of a detective, in such cases, is to make clear the connection between the perpetrator and the beneficiary, and to pay no attention whatever to the protestation of the beneficiary that he was not the instigator.

"ARTIFICIAL MEN."

Senator Tillman struck a fundamental note in his report upon the railway rate question, which he rightly treated as part of the larger problem of the unequal distribution of wealth. Discontent is growing because some amass millions while others are working for meagre wages, and the chief tool of the unduly rich is the corporation. Discussing pernicious corporate activities Mr. Tillman discerns > a struggle between the actual man and the artificial man represented in the corporation; it is a struggle between man and money; it is a struggle between citizenship and capitalists. The final outcome will determine whether or not the people are really capable of self-government.

The trouble arises from the assumption that with the artificial man goes an artificial morality, which warrants an honest citizen doing as President or Treasurer what he would not do as an individual. This was not the original idea. There is nothing of free will about the corporation's morality, and nothing of foreordination respecting its fate. A corporation lacks a conscience because it has no need of one, possessing in law no power of choice between good and evil because it has no power to do anything except those acts which the law enables it to do. It is not meant that the corporation, like the King, can do no wrong, but only that if it does any wrong, it violates the condition of its existence, and can suffer even worst penalties than those natural individuals who have bodies to be kicked, as the phrase goes. A corporation cannot be sent to jail, but it can be annihilated, and the officials who assume to do as corporate officials what it is wrong for the corporation to do discover, if suitably prosecuted, that they have no license for guilt nor any charter as libertines. The temptation is strong to adopt Senator Tillman's diagnosis because of its promise of relief. If that is all that is wrong, it will be put right speedily. There is no need of revolution or bayonet to curb these "mere creatures of the law," to use the phrase of the Dartmouth College decision. Instead of being free to ravage and devour, to enslave and pauperize, they are strictly limited by the conditions of their creation, and are subject to the same morality as all of us. Twelve men in a box will give them shorter shrift than a "natural man" thief if ever they get a fair chance.

If it be objected that this is rather a statement of legal principles than of actual conditions, it remains true that but a single step is necessary to convert the unlawful conditions into lawful. Senator Tillman thinks that the Hepburn bill is a necessary preliminary to reforming that section of his problem which is involved in the railway rate question. This is not the first time that we have expressed the opinion that there is statute law enough to punish proved wrongdoing. There is excellent authority to say that if there were no statute law the common law would punish excessive or discriminating rates. And above both laws is the economic law, which cannot be repealed or evaded. We cannot unreservedly accept Senator Tillman's diagnosis, because the case is much more complex. Corporations have escaped punishment because they have not been proved guilty, whether because of defective administration or because of inherent difficulty. Senator Tillman's own report recites disagreement among his own committee regarding both the wrong and the remedy.

"The people want the railroads regulated," says Mr. Tillman. The people want the laws enforced, say Senators who hitherto have rivaled Mr. Tillman in the confidence of Republicans and Democrats alike. If the laws are wrong, by all means make them right. But while there are "radical differences" as to what sort of law is needed, why not enforce what law we have? Mr. Tillman will catch attention with his phrase, although it lacks novelty or curative power, but he exposes himself to suspicion of hysteria and demagogism and would profit by pondering upon Judge Parker's Jackson speech.

RUSSIAN REACTIONARIES AND REVOLUTIONARIES.

There is no more unenviable man in the world at present than Count Witte. Decorated and promoted by his Emperor for a most striking and unexpected success in diplomacy, in relieving Russia from the fate of war, he finds himself now "up against" a far harder proposition than he had at Portsmouth.

It is no longer a question whether anybody else could have done it better. It is a question whether anybody else could have done it at all. Count Witte's success at Portsmouth was of course the occasion of his promotion. But his task at Portsmouth, aided as it was by the Russian consciousness that the Russian bureaucracy had miserably failed, and also by the Japanese consciousness of the ultimate weakness of Japan, was probably one that no other born subject of the Czar would have achieved.

When, upon the strength of that success, the Czar appointed Count Witte to modernize Russia, it was evident that Count Witte would have to contend with two very difficult obstacles. One of the obstacles was constituted by the Russian Reactionaries, whose opposition was perfectly explained by the consideration that they were the chief beneficiaries of the existing order of things. The other obstacle was created by the Russian Revolutionaries, whose leaders had possibly the objection to practicable reform that it would endanger their leadership, but against whose followers there was only to be said that they lacked the political education which could arise only from the political experience from which they had been debarred.

It may or may not be true that the Reactionaries are planning a "Jew massacre" transcending in extent all the previous atrocities of that kind. It may or may not be true that the Revolutionists are planning explosions and outrages intended to accentuate their dissatisfaction with the measures proposed by Count Witte. It remains true that Count Witte is the one man in Russia capable of formulating circumspectly and of executing gradually a plan that will, if executed, bring Russia into the list of modern nations without too violent a break with Russia's past. He is the hope alike of the Reactionaries and of the Revolutionists, in so far as both or either of them may be patriotic Russians. It would be a great pity for mankind if his efforts toward that end should be frustrated. But it would be a pity for Russia first and most of all.

THE CITY COURT JUDGES.

The misconduct and removal from the bench of Judge Herman Bolte brought about in 1897 the rotation of Judges in the Municipal Court districts, in the same manner as the Supreme Court Justices rotate from county to county in each judicial district. The Cooper-Weber bill, which is vigorously opposed by the Legal Aid Society and is discountenanced by the Bar Association, would abolish this healthful rotation, allowing the Judges to vegetate and rot in the malign political atmosphere of their petty districts.

Manifestly, the service of these Judges is to the city as a whole. Let the Legislature remember Judge Bolte.

> I don't know anything about bridge building, but if what I am told is true, that the city can save $3,000,000 by adopting eye bars and can build the Manhattan Bridge in two years less than cables would take, I want to know why we don't have the eye bars.—Controller Metz to Bridge Commissioner Stevenson.

That is what every lay taxpayer wants to know.

Health Commissioner Darlington has notified twenty-five managers of buildings in Manhattan that their chimneys are belching forth too much smoke. It is reported that about fifty more forbidding orders have been or are being issued. We assume that if no consequent abatement of the nuisance is observed the Board of Health will cause summary arrest of the guilty, in accordance with its vested powers under Section 1,264 of the City Charter, as follows:

> Any member of the police force, and every Inspector or officer of said Department of Health, as the regulations of either of said departments may respectively provide relative to its own subordinates, may arrest any person who shall, in view of such member or officer, violate, or do, or be engaged in doing or committing in said city any act or thing forbidden by this chapter, or by any law or ordinance, the authority conferred by which is given to said Department of Health, or who shall, in such presence, resist or be engaged in resisting, the enforcement of any of the orders of said department or of the Police Department pursuant thereto. And any person so arrested shall be thereafter treated and disposed of as any other person duly arrested for a misdemeanor.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Persuaded by Queer Arguments.

That Dr. Slicer should have changed his mind as to the wisdom and propriety of repealing the Percy-Gray law is sufficiently amazing, but that he should have changed it because he has been assured that there are vicious influences behind the repeal movement is nothing less than astounding. However, the ease with which he was led to make the first revision of his opinion renders it likely that he will not hold obstinately to his present view of the existing situation. It seems to us, now, that the "influences" behind or otherwise contiguous to the Cassidy bill are of no particular relevance to its intrinsic merits and that the thing for Dr. Slicer and other honest people to decide is whether they believe in the impartial enforcement of the constitutional provision against public gambling. It is true, we suppose, that certain keepers of city poolrooms are now, as for some years past, eager to break up a form of gambling in which they cannot participate with safety and from which they have often been debarred for longer or shorter intervals. That, we presume, is the vicious influence to which Dr. Slicer refers, but we have no knowledge that it has been at all effective either in securing the introduction or the passage of the Cassidy bill. Whether it has or not in no way affects, so far as we can see, the question of legalizing felony on one side of a fence while letting it retain all its abhorrent qualities on the other. Nor is it quite obvious why the peril which horse racing would incur from the suppression of betting on races should receive any tender consideration from Dr. Slicer. He might be expected to hold that, if racing be dependent on betting—as it undoubtedly is—racing had better go. His argument in favor of restricting this form of gambling to places where it can be controlled—and exploited—by responsible persons is equally applicable to other criminal industries, and especially to one which need not be mentioned because its name is so readily recalled by any mind even a little sophisticated. And surely Dr. Slicer cannot like it that he has placed himself in the company of those cynical rustics who say that they must have money with which to support their annual fairs and that their share of the Percy-Gray revenue is not tainted to a degree at all offensive to their nostrils. They admit that they would just a little prefer to get the same sum by a direct appropriation from the State taxes, but unless they get that they don't want anything disturbed. Dr. Slicer has made a serious mistake, and he has led Bishop Doane into it with him. He really should think again and quickly.

Stopped Trains but Not Ticket Sales.

Again on Wednesday there was an accident with a long stoppage of traffic in the Subway, and again no attempt was made to warn the public of the probable length of the delay. As a result, the unavoidable annoyances and inconveniences of the Spring Street derailment were extended to thousands of people who could easily have been saved from them if the Subway officials had cared to save them. One of our neighbors sought information on this subject at the office of General Manager Hedley and says that there a somebody unnamed made a most remarkable statement—so very remarkable that it's no wonder that the somebody guarded his name carefully; so very remarkable that one is almost tempted to see in the statement the work of a genial humorist. Anyhow, he is said to have said: "The public cannot expect us to be explaining every little accident that happens in the Subway. There are bound to be delays at times and the public must make the most of it until the causes are removed. We cannot stop the sale of tickets and turn the tide of passengers back at the stations. We should be busy all the time explaining things and helping the public take care of itself in transit if we attempted to do this sort of thing. The official statement that has been given out to the newspapers about to-day's accident ought to be sufficient. Of course the public will kick so long as the newspapers go for the management as they do all the time." As already intimated, we find it difficult, and almost impossible, to believe that any Subwegian in authority talked for publication in this frankly impudent way, but, if "not true," it is at least "well found," and however weak it may be as an explanation of the management's policy, it is a fairly correct description of that policy as the public sees it. As for the accident, that ought to be, or may be, reassuring rather than alarming. The conditions were such as might have been expected to cause a serious disaster, for the train was moving rapidly, but nobody was hurt and the precautionary measures and devices all "worked." This may be called luck, and pessimists will, of course, insist that next time all sorts of terrible things will happen, but it is just as well to take a more hopeful view and to say that future mishaps are not likely to be much worse than this one.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Since Elder Bennet, the young Congressman from New York City, made an exhibition of Representative Hopkins of Kentucky in the House the other day in replying to the speech of Mr. Hopkins on the subject of immigration, some of the other New York City men have been hoping Hopkins would attempt to reply. He was such an easy mark for Elder Bennet that they want a shy at him themselves. One of them tackled him on the subject yesterday and asked if he did not intend to come back at Bennet.

"Not on your life," said Hopkins. "I know when I've been well skinned, and once is enough for me."

John Sharp Williams was taunting the Republicans to-day because they were going into caucus on the Statehood bill, and reminding them he had told them the first day of the session how they would deliver themselves, bound and gagged, to the House machine. He made the picture so clear that Miller of Kansas, who is one of those in trouble between Uncle Joe and their constituents on the Statehood matter, could stand it no longer, and butted in.

"Would you accept an invitation to that caucus?" he asked.

"Yes," drawled Williams, "I will if you will promise that after I am there I shall not be gagged and bound and sent back to the rear row to sit silent through it all."

Judge Palmer, the hard-headed old lawyer who represents the Wilkesbarre district, called on his old friend Aleck McDowell, Clerk of the House, the other day. While he was there a Scranton man came in, and Uncle Aleck introduced him to Judge Palmer and went on with his work.

"Where are you from, Judge?" asked the newcomer.

"I'm from Wilkesbarre way," replied Palmer.

"Is that so? Well, years ago, when I was a boy, they had an old duck named Palmer over there who was a crackerjack at pulling wires and got into politics a heap. I think he got to be Attorney General of the State."

"Yes," mused Palmer, looking into the fire, "I remember. I am that old duck."

Reeder of Kansas, a red-hot Statehood insurgent, and Wachter of Maryland, always an organization man, had a lively tilt to-day as to the difference between a caucus and a conference.

"If this thing the Speaker has called is a caucus, I stay out," said Reeder, "because a caucus binds those who attend, and a conference does not."

"Nonsense," retorted Wachter. "There is no difference at all between them."

"I know there is," insisted Reeder, "and this performance to-day just shows why. That's why Cannon is so dead set for it. You don't know what 'caucus' means."

"Well, what does it mean?" demanded the Maryland man.

"It comes from an Indian word 'cawcawwassough,'" replied Reeder, "and means 'one who pushes on.' That's just what Cannon is doing now. He's trying to push us all on."

"Nobody seems to want our Territory," said ex-Delegate B. S. Rodey of New Mexico to-day, "and there is no telling where we will have landed by the time the Statehood fight is settled. Our status is as uncertain as that of an old negro slave I once heard of. Somebody asked him whom he belonged to.

"'Ah don't know, Suh,' he replied. 'Ole Marse, he upstairs playin' pokah.'"

ANOTHER WOMAN OBJECTS.

More Criticism of the Englishwoman, and a Guess at Her Identity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I think that Mary Mortimer Maxwell is trying to tell us, in the articles she writes for The Sunday Times under the title of "An Englishwoman in New York," about things that she knows less about than we do, and even if I am nothing but a woman who isn't yet married, I am sure that a "Sidetracked Husband" is as selfish as he can be and that his wife must have a very hard time of it.

I was talking to some friends the other day about "An Englishwoman in New York," and one of them told me that she had heard that the writer of the articles was Mrs. Craigie. I know that Mrs. Craigie was in New York not long ago, but even if she is the author I don't concede that she is any better authority on American sweethearts or American husbands and children than ninety-nine out of a hundred Misses Smiths or Mrs. Joneses.

I may be sensitive, but even if she does come uncomfortably close to the truth every now and then, I feel when I am reading her criticisms of us just as I would if some one took dinner at our house and criticised our cooking while the meal was in progress. I must confess, though, that I am always just as interested as I am indignant while I am reading what she thinks of us.

While I am, as I said, unmarried, I have a sister who has a splendid husband, and two little daughters. At first her husband was inclined to believe that he was neglected when sister left him to take care of the newcomer in their home, but that soon wore off. Before the first baby was a month old he was just as crazy about her as his wife was, and it was the sweetest thing in the world to see them together, working over the baby when she cried and trying to amuse it. I suppose all men are more or less selfish, but if they are the right kind of men they will soon realize that, while they can do anything they want for themselves, little babies are utterly helpless.

I know it is pretty hard on a man when he is in love with his wife to have to see her lavishing her affection on somebody else, but men like my sister's husband soon see how unreasonable it is to say that they have been forgotten, and that their wives don't love them any more when they leave them to take care of the children.

There is a gentleman who calls on me very frequently, and he tells me that my brother-in-law is crazy to let his wife make him stick in the house all the time and help amuse the children. He says if he had a wife he would like to take her out to the theatres and to get some pleasure out of life. He agrees with everything The Englishwoman has ever written, even that the American sweetheart is apt to spend less thought on his fiancee than the Britisher. He argues, though, that if he does spend less thought on the girl of his choice, he makes up for it by spending more money. He asked me if I wouldn't rather have a box of candy or a bunch of roses, with a telephone message every day, than a love letter calling me "Old Girl." Of course, I told him that the American man was the best.

I wish the Englishwoman would devote some of her time to investigating and then pleading the wife's side. Perhaps, as "F. F. C." wrote, she hadn't had a wide enough field to pass final judgment. I hope, if he reads my letter, a "Side-Tracked Husband" will feel ashamed of himself. If he doesn't, he should.

FAVORITISM IN RATES.

Admitted Discrimination in the Enterprise Transportation Company Case.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The recent editorial in The Times concerning the Enterprise Transportation Company and the Inter-State Commerce Commission, headed "Why Not Enforce the Law?" bears so poignantly upon the moot question of railroad regulation that a fallacy therein contained deserves correction. The recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Citrus Fruit cases is cited as settling the contention of the Enterprise Company, yet the contention in the former case was that the shipper should have absolute right to dictate to the initial carrier the route over which his goods should be forwarded, although he accepts a through rate specifically reserving that right to the carrier, in order to put an end to unlawful rebates. The claim of the Enterprise Steamship Line is that when it, as initial carrier, delivers goods to the trunk lines, such trunk lines should, as common carriers, transport the goods at the same rate that they charge any others for identical service. This, it is admitted, the railroads refuse to do, but instead give lower rates to a favored Fall River line.

Though "not a complaint of extortion or discrimination between shippers or places," to quote from the editorial, this is a broad discrimination against all the goods and all shippers who choose to use this independent line. Does it not seem obvious and necessary justice that the great trunk lines forming the arteries of commerce should render their services impartially, whether the goods brought to them for transportation bear the bill of a favorite, if not an allied, line, or are brought to them by any shipper or "combination of shippers," so long as the service demanded is identical?

To recall the President's message: "We do desire to see the system of railroad transportation so handled that the strong man shall be given no advantage over the weak man."

The revealing of the actual facts of the situation, showing a glaring sort of discrimination which new legislation alone must prohibit, would seem ample justification for the recent investigation by members of the Inter-State Commerce Commission. It should arouse the public to demand the eradication of every form of discrimination, this being the effective cure of our greatest transportation evils.

NOT A PARTY TO AGREEMENT.

Audubon Societies Object to New Scheme for Selling Game.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of this date, under the title "Game Sold All Year If New Bill Is Passed," you state that the Audubon societies were represented at the conference and were parties to the agreement between the New York Poultry and Game Trade Association, the Attorney General, the State Fish and Game Commission, and the sportsmen's societies.

Will you be good enough to correct this statement, as the Audubon societies were not present, and positively will not agree to any compromise that will permit the sale of game of any kind, whether it be native or foreign, during the closed season in this State.

The Audubon societies asked Commissioner Whipple to give them notice when a hearing was to be held on Assembly Bill No. 464, introduced by Mr. Young, but the hearing on the bill was held without the Audubon societies receiving any notice of it whatever, and consequently they were not represented at the hearing and could not protest against the bill, as they intended to do.

The news item as published does a serious injury to the Audubon societies, as it makes them a party to a compromise on the subject of the sale of game in the closed season.

The Audubon societies do not now nor will they ever agree to the passage of a statute that will legalize the sale of any kind of game in the closed season.

In order to make the position of the Audubon societies clear on this question, will The Times give the same prominence to this communication as it did to the news item?

Prohibition in Kansas.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With some amusement I read in this morning's Times Miss Cousins's declaration concerning the failure of prohibition in Kansas. She has made a hard effort to say something. I have spent eight years of my life in that State, and as a traveling man put up at hotels from one end of the State to the other, and I want to say that the moral standard of the people of Kansas is high. The law is so well enforced that there are no bleareyed "drunks" sitting around hotel offices or staggering along in the way on the streets. I have talked with many young persons who have grown up in Kansas under prohibition, who have never seen a drunken person, and there are no "Raines law hotels."

Speaker Cannon's Boots Ready.

From The Charleston News and Courier.

The boots for Mr. Cannon have been finished. They were made by Jacob Steiber of this city, and may now be seen for a day or two at his shop in Broad Street. They are to be presented to Mr. Cannon on St. Patrick's Day, and we do not venture anything in saying that they will be the finest and best and altogether the most comfortable footgear he has ever worn. The subscription lists have not yet been closed. It would look just now as if there is likely to be a deficit in the Joe Cannon Boot Fund, but that is because our people have been so much engaged with the frivolities preceding the Lenten season, and with their religious duties since they began to repent, that they have not responded as promptly to the various patriotic calls that have been made for their pennies as might have been expected, and particularly in view of the fact that they would like to keep on very good terms with the most powerful figure in legislative work at this time.

Sir Thomas Lipton Arrested.

From The London Mail.

Sir Thomas Lipton had during a recent motor tour in France a somewhat unpleasant experience of the ways of the French peasant where motorists are concerned.

In company with Col. Neill, R. E., Sir Thomas was on his way to Bordeaux, and passing through Castelsarrasin, in the Garonne, on a market day, was run into by a dogcart. The horse was restive and unmanageable, and in the collision the occupants of the dogcart were thrown out.

Immediately every one in the neighborhood rushed around the travelers and, regardless of explanations, insisted that Sir Thomas and his friend should go to the police station. They were arrested by gendarmes and conveyed there with the car. The matter looked for a time black, but was speedily compromised, however, on Sir Thomas Lipton slipping into the hand of the driver and owner of the dogcart a few louis.

"It was the only way out of the difficulty," Sir Thomas said last night. "As soon as he got the money the man changed his tone completely and became quite courteous and 'supple,' even to the extent of saying that the accident was his own fault."

DR. MAXWELL OPENMINDED.

Ready to Accept Good Ideas from Dr. Shearer or Any One Else.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dr. Shearer's reply to Dr. Maxwell in to-day's Times discloses what, to my mind, is a weakness. He says his figures are from Dr. Maxwell's own report, and adds that these figures are inconsistent and unreliable. Why did he not so characterize them when he used them as a basis of attack? It was on the facts of the figures he attacked Dr. Maxwell.

Let me call attention to this fact. Dr. Maxwell called the attention of the public to these figures before Dr. Shearer did, for they are in his report. Why did he put them in the report if not to remedy the conditions? There is every evidence that not only he, but, inspired by him, the Board of Superintendents, Principals, and teachers, are struggling with these mighty problems. I await Dr. Shearer's constructive words, his plan of help. When that comes, if it is better than anything else offered, I believe Dr. Maxwell will adopt it; for, as one of his Superinetndents told me some time ago, the City Superintendent is looking for real ideas.

Just here is the weakness of Mr. Coler's position. He came out publicly with the statement that he would appoint only anti-Maxwell men on School Boards. How a self-respecting man can accept appointment on such a condition puzzles me, but how can a great system be run successfully on the issue of hostility to its head? It is fashionable just now to attack Dr. Maxwell, but it is sensible to help him, even if you differ, and that is the position now, I believe, of the Mayor and the present Controller.

"City Salaries and the Cost of Living."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Among the wild statements of some of your correspondents that of "An Interested Observer" in yesterday's Times is one of the wildest. He says: "It must be borne in mind that living expenses are almost double what they were fifteen or twenty years ago." Dun's Record shows the actual wholesale cost of a year's supplies of all the necessaries of life for a single individual for the past forty-five years. Omitting fractions of a cent the cost per capita for 1880 was $108.65; 1881, $111.90; 1882, $123.23; 1883, $107.24; 1884, $99.70; 1885, $90.69; 1886, $89.22; 1887, $93.62; 1888, $95.13; 1889, $89.69; 1890, $91.54; 1891, $96.09; 1892, $90.10; 1893, $90.61; 1894, $83.29; 1895, $81.51; 1896, $74.31; 1897, $72.45; 1898, $77.76; 1899, $85.22; 1900, $91.41; 1901, $91.50; 1902, $101.91; 1903, $99.45; 1904, $97.19; 1905, $98.31.

"An Interested Observer" may be surprised to learn that the cost of living per capita in 1860, before the civil war, was $16.87 more than in 1905. For the ten years, 1893 to 1905, inclusive, the average yearly cost of living per capita, was $81.52. For the sixteen years 1880 to 1895, inclusive, the average yearly cost was $101.65—being $20.13 greater than for the later period. Dun's tables are carefully compiled up to July 1 of each year, and are generally admitted, I believe, to be accurate and reliable.

Men and Their Vanities.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In answer to "A. P. H.'s" letter, I would say yes, men quite frequently wear low shoes in Winter, but they are very different from those worn by the "smart young ladies." They are not slippers or pumps, but regular walking shoes. Nor does he wear open-work cobweb socks, nor does the wind have the same opportunity to blow his clothes up to his knees.

Of course there are male asses also, who probably have "A. P. H.'s" ideas of comfort at heart, the type who wear gloves turned down at the wrist and adopt every other extremity of fashion.

DUDLEY MOORE WATSON.

NO AUCTION, AND CROSS RIVER IS ALL CUT UP

Which Shows the Perils of Pruning Trees at 70 Years.

THE TRADINGS OF AVERY

They've Been Going On Six Decades—Hence That Collection, Including Fluid Lamps and Batpins.

If George R. Avery, trader, had not attempted to prune an apple tree at threescore years and ten the great auction sale of Cross River, Westchester County, N. Y., would have kept right on yesterday, storm or no storm.

The fall from the apple tree, however, left lasting hurts upon the person of Mr. Avery—hurts which are always aggravated by a fall in the temperature—and when the day dawned with a baby blizzard sweeping down the valley the sale was forthwith declared off until such time as the skies are clear and the sun shines.

Undaunted by the weather Auctioneer William Moore, himself verging on three score years and ten, trudged all the way from Pound Ridge through the drifting snow. He was much disappointed when he was blown into the general store of J. S. Hunt, just across the single street that the village of Cross River boasts, and found therein farmers from far and near, who had braved the elements to bid on the stock intrusted to him for disposal.

He hunted up Mr. Avery, who said he was "always peevish" when it was snowing, as bad weather brought back the pains which followed his fall from the apple tree, and that he wouldn't stir out of the house for all the money from Katonah to Ridgefield.

"I've been keepin' some of the stuff for sixty year," Mr. Avery declared. "I guess it won't hurt to keep it a few days longer."

The Hunt emporium is the country store of fiction. There may be found the red-hot stove, a never-failing circle of men about it, the soda crackers, the cheese and sardines, the "two-fers," and everything else that constitutes the fabled clearing-house of rural communities.

Life is peaceful in Cross River. One day of auction sale is sufficient to furnish material for a week's discussion.

"Wa-al, here y'are, what do yew bid?" was the stereotyped greeting to newcomers, as they stamped in from the wintry outside world, and invariably came the response: "Jest drapped in fer a spell to plague John a bit."

Mr. Hunt's Little Joke.

John is proprietor of the Hunt emporium; he is also Cross River's Postmaster, notary public, Commissioner of Deeds, druggist, and adviser in chief. He had his little joke all framed up before he took down his shutters yesterday morning, and everybody got it. Here it is:

"Gettin' pretty wintry 'raoun' here. Guess it's about time tew make my annull trip to Floridy."

Bill Brent, who lives over Ridgefield way, was telling of the days when Mr. Avery introduced kerosene oil to the valley when a reporter for THE TIMES, who had come over from Katonah, came to thaw out.

"They used to burn fluid lamps in them days," he was saying. "I kin recollect it like it was last night. One evenin' mother was cleanin' souse in the kitchen by the light and father was out in the barn, hitchin' up tew go tew town. She turned the lamp over, and the 'tarnal stuff blazed up like gunpowder. Looked like the whole haouse was afire. Father he cum runnin' in, leavin' the hoss half harnessed, but by the time he got in the room mother had smothered the flames with some bed-spreads she was dryin' by the stove. It cert'ny was inflameable—that fluid they sold then."

There was silence for some minutes. The loungers were studying the "post bills" which told of the auction, and which had been tacked up all over the interior of the store. This is the way the "post bills" read:

William Moore will sell in the village of Cross River on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, March 14, 15, and 16, 1906, beginning at 10 o'clock A. M. each day, the merchandise and personal property of George R. Avery, comprising the most extensive list of goods ever put up at auction in this vicinity. We can only enumerate a partial list:

He Had a Little List.

The list, perhaps, gives a flattering idea of the versatility of Mr. Avery along mercantile lines. There are still to be sold:

Platform spring wagon, with extra seat, dash, and pole; a square wagon, a buckboard, bobs and bob runners, cutters, a top carriage, a peddling wagon, a one-horse sled with steel shoes, a refrigerator, a hay cutter, doors and window sashes, shovels, spades, forks, ice-tongs, bush hooks, window cleaners, men's clothing, horse blankets, boxes of popular articles and writing paper in use fifty years ago, letter heads of the Crystal Palace and the laying of the Atlantic Cable, war envelopes, umbrellas, pictures and picture frames, fluid lamps in use before oil was struck, kitchenware, lawn mowers, furniture, felt petticoats, ladies' muffs, braids in silk, ruching, augurs, corsets and corset strings, hay cutters and hemlock boards, hoopskirts and paper cravats, perfumery and toilet articles, joice and studding, jewelry and spices, gents' hats and second-hand lumber, feather and spice, bat pins and hand bells.

In large letters the terms of sale are set forth, lest purchasers should overplay themselves. "All sums under $10, cash. Over $10 sixty days credit on approved notes."

"Who'll approve the notes?" the reporter questioned.

"Guess Avery'll do th' approvin' an' the collectin' both," came the response in chorus.

To Mr. Hunt the reporter turned for information as to how long it had been since Mr. Avery had closed his place of business and why.

"All I know is," he said, "that George never did actually quit tradin'. He'd set aroun' in this store an' wait 'till somebody started tew buy somthin' an' then he'd git up and hunch the man in the ribs an' tell him he had the goods better and cheaper. He'd git het up by my stove and then take my customers away jest like nothin'."

Why Avery "Shet Up."

Mr. Hunt had heard the story that the Avery store had been "shet up" because its proprietor refused to pay the war revenue tax after the fall of the Confederacy. He had also heard that after the death of Mr. Avery's first wife the bereaved husband had vowed never to take down his shutters again.

Mr. Moore happened in, on his way home after his call on Mr. Avery, and readily consented to retrace his steps to introduce the reporter to Mr. Avery. Mr. Avery pleaded guilty to being on the brink of eighty.

"I've alluz had a stock uv somethin'," he said, "ever sence I wuz a boy. I used to sell the youngsters quill pens, stationery, an' slate pensles. When steel pens came in I sold them, tew. I guess I wuz the first to introjuce steel pens 'raoun' here, jest like I wuz the first to introjuce kerosene."

Which reminded Mrs. George Raymond of Norwalk, sister of Mr. Avery's second wife, now dead, that there were some fluid lamps in the house. She went upstairs and got one, and Mr. Avery explained the making of the fluid, of which he had sold "bar'ls and bar'ls."

"You take eetheereul oil," he explained, "an' mix it with alkyhol. Th' eetheereul oil mayn't have no rozzum in it—it's turpentine, y'sce—or it'll smoke. Th' alkyhol must be ninety-five proof, tew, or it'll smoke. That's burnin' fluid fer lamps."

Mrs. Raymond remembered that there was a "Revolootionary trunk" upstairs, too. The trunk belonged to Mr. Avery's grandfather, who was a tailor and who was wont to sit "all quirled up" on its top while he cut out Cross River's "britches." She also dug up from the trunk the minutes of the Baptist Union Church from 1810 to 1870, which told of parsons and flocks long since dead and forgotten. The Revolutionary trunk will not be sold.

Back at the Hunt emporium they were still uncovering the idiosyncrasies of the House of Avery, and speculating on the wonders that were still to be unfolded when the auctioneer got busy.

"Good-bye," called Mr. Hunt, proprietor and Postmaster, notary public, Commissioner of Deeds, and Cross River's adviser in chief. "I cert'ny must pack up an' head for Floridy if this weather keeps up."

As the homeward miles spun away under the wheels "Jimmy" Smith, Liveryman Lent's Katonah-bred driver, whose eighteen years sit heavy on his youthful shoulders, broke into a rare spasm of speech.

"It ain't only Mister Avery an' Mister Avery's stock," he said. "All th' houses tew th' left uv the State Road an' all them to the right as far up as the Methodist Church is got tew go. It's pretty bad. There's lots uv life in Cross River to put under water. Why, they have a dance up there most ev'ry week, and sometimes amachoor thee-atricals. It's all churches in Katonah. Ain't never nothin' lively there."

RIP VAN WINKLE IN BRONZE.

MacMonnies, the Sculptor, for a Jefferson Memorial in the Park.

Arrangements are being made for the erection of a monument in Central Park to perpetuate the memory of Joseph Jefferson, the actor. James S. Morrissey said yesterday:

"As the result of conferences with Stanford White, the architect, William Frederick MacMonnies has been appointed the sculptor. The statue will represent Mr. Jefferson in the character of Rip Van Winkle, life size, wrought of bronze and mounted on a pedestal of granite. The cost of the work will be $50,000.

"The committee includes Stanford White, John D. Crimmins, W. Bourke Cockran, Frank Tilford, John H. Starin, Edward Lauterbach, Heinrich Conried, Walter Damrosch, Francis Wilson, Thomas Hamilton, and Eugene M. O'Neill. The Lincoln Trust Company has consented to act as Treasurer."

DRAMA AND DOUGHNUTS.

"Good Old Days" of Both a Fiction, Says Skinner.

The American Academy of Dramatic Arts held its graduation exercises at the Empire Theatre yesterday afternoon. Twenty-four pupils, representing eleven States, and including students from Vienna, London, and Odessa, received diplomas. The David Belasco Medal, for technical skill, was awarded to Edward G. Longman of Brooklyn, and the Mrs. Esther Herrman Gold Medal for earnestness and progress to Forrest H. Orr of Dallas, Texas.

Besides the formal exercises, the pupils listened to addresses by Otis Skinner, George Fawcett, Clara Bloodgood, and Katherine Grey.

Mr. Fawcett praised the American public's contempt for the degenerate, and prophesied that the unclean and morbid drama never would find a hold in this country.

"Talk about the drama of the old days is pretty much on the order of the tradition of 'the pies and doughnuts mother used to make,'" said Mr. Skinner. "They were very, very wonderful things, but really I think they never existed.

"Much is said of the old stock days. The present is subject to strict conditions of stage management, that cause naturalness, and with natural results you have convincing results. The play then had practically no stage direction. If an author was allowed to sneak in and occupy a convenient corner, he was fortunate. To-day he is there to say: 'I want this and I want that.'"

"The value of the long run," he said, "lies in the actor's ability to investigate, study, and improve with each performance the part he is playing. He must strive constantly to express the emotion of the part at each performance. If he drops back to the mere mechanics of his art he is lost."

Mr. Skinner reminded his audience that the Hamlet of Edwin Booth was not at first considered a great interpretation, and that Joseph Jefferson was an old man before his "Rip Van Winkle" was recognized as faultless.

THE OPERA TICKET SQUAD.

Speculators Banded Together, with an Old Hand at the Head.

Six men working together under the direction of an old Barnum & Bailey speculator named Marks are said to represent the force of Metropolitan Opera House speculators, against whom there has been so much complaint.

These speculators last night handled a good many tickets in anticipation of big profits from the benefit performance at the Metropolitan, counting on Mrs. Roosevelt's presence as an added attraction to the opera.

While the performance was on, and as the speculators stood outside with many unsold tickets a Detective Sergeant told a TIMES reporter that the same speculators were always on hand and always divided up their profits. The circus man, he said, owned the "scalping" right with Barnum & Bailey, and seemingly owned the same privilege with the Metropolitan.

"How do they get their seats?" the detective was asked.

"They get them in blocks of eighteen and twenty at regular prices," he said, "and I suppose they split up with the box office on the profits."

Farewell Banquet to Mr. Gericke.

A farewell banquet in honor of Wilhelm Gericke, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was given last evening in the Café Martin. Mr. Gericke has resigned his post as conductor of the orchestra, and his present visit to New York in this capacity will be his last. Walter Damrosch presided at this supper, and there were present also Gustave Schirmer, Rudolph Schirmer, Frank Damrosch, Rafael Joseffy, Harry Harkness Flagler, Marshall Kernochan, Charles W. Clark, David Mannes, Alexander Lambert, Arthur Whiting, H. E. Krehbiel, Ferdinand von Inten, Dr. Edward K. Dunham, Charles O. Brewster, Paul Warburg, Lawrence Abbott, and others.

Playwrights Call In Dittenhoefer.

Playwrights Bronson Howard, Charles Klein, and Edwin Milton Royle, who are representing the American Dramatists' Club before the Senate Committee on Copyright, have asked ex-Judge A. J. Dittenhoefer to look after their interests before the committee. Judge Dittenhoefer went to Washington Wednesday. The dramatists will try to defeat any more to modify the existing law which makes infringement of copyright a crime.

Ellen Terry's Jubilee.

LONDON, March 15.—A committee having in charge the celebration on April 28 of the fiftieth anniversary of Ellen Terry's connection with the stage includes all the leading actor-managers, Charles Frohman, Stephen Coleridge, and many other influential men.

Double Bridal in Alice Blue Gowns.

WHITE HOUSE, N. J., March 15.—Postmaster William C. Swackhamer of White House Station and Miss Elizabeth Specht and Abram F. Hall and Miss Louisa Specht, sister of the bride, were married to-day at the brides' home. Many guests from New York and Newark were present. The brides wore gowns of Alice blue.

MRS. ROOSEVELT SEES 'HAENSEL UND GRETEL'

And the Legal Aid Society Is $5,000 Richer.

STRATEGY TO AID DEPARTURE

House Kept Dark Till President's Wife Made Her Exit—Crowd Didn't Sing "Star-Spangled Banner."

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt was in a very quiet way the feature of the benefit performance of Humperdinck's fairy opera, "Haensel und Gretel," at the Metropolitan Opera House last night. There was no "stir" created by the presence of the wife of the President.

Mrs. Roosevtlt had selected the opera, and had given her aid in making the benefit a success, to the end that money might be turned into the treasury of the Legal Aid Society. It was estimated after the first act was under way that the society was about $5,000 better off because of the performance.

When the curtain went down on the first act the orchestra played "The Star-Spangled Banner," Alfred Hertz, the director, turning to the audience and leading as if the audience had decided to burst forth in song. No man, woman, or child sang or tried to sing, but Herr Hertz waved his baton at the occupants of the boxes and the seats in the grand tier, the orchestra, and the galleries, and all of them stood up and leveled glasses at Mrs. Roosevelt.

For half a minute the "first lady of the land" withstood the glances. Then she smiled to right and left and sat down.

Herr Conreid and the Directors sent Mrs. Roosevelt a large bouquet of orchids. Then the director himself entered the J. Pierpont Morgan box, in the centre of the "horseshoe," and bowed low over the hand of the President's wife, while a ripple of interest passed around the house. Some of the women who were in the tier of boxes above the "horseshoe" leaned perilously over the rails to see this part of the performance.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Robinson, the host and hostess of Mrs. Roosevelt, received callers in an adjoining box. The two boxes were filled with flowers and the air was laden with the scent of blossoms in that part of the corridor on which they opened.

Before the opera was finished Mrs. Roosevelt sent for Mr. Conried again and thanked him for the excellency of the production.

When the last curtain fell everybody wished to see Mrs. Roosevelt at close range. The stairways were crowded, but the management of the house had foreseen a possible blocking of the exits, and the house lights were kept down until Mrs. Roosevelt and her party had made a start. Before there could be any serious congestion in the lobby, the President's wife and Mrs. Robinson were in their carriage and away.

Gen. and Mrs. Frederick D. Grant, who were late in reaching the opera, paid their respects to Mrs. Roosevelt, as did J. W. Seligman, Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Windmuller, and others interested in the benefit.

On the strength of the presence of Mrs. Roosevelt the speculators bought up hundreds of dollars' worth of seats. But at 8:30, the time for the first curtain, they were selling $5 seats for $2.

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY.

Mr. Gericke's Last Appearances In Its Final Concerts.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is giving this week the last concerts of its season in New York. They are also the last concerts which Mr. Gericke will conduct here, since he has resigned his place at the head of the orchestra and will return to Vienna in May. The audience at the concert last evening in Carnegie Hall was anxious to make him understand its regard for him, and when he appeared there was a great burst of applause, long continued, which Mr. Gericke must have felt was a genuine tribute.

The programme was one of strong contrasts. It began with Bach's orchestral suite in D minor, the one that contains the much-abused air, and much else that is strong and vigorous, tender and merry; a wonderful piece that has retained its freshness and interest so long. It was played with splendid spirit. There was also for orchestra Debussy's prelude, "The Afternoon of a Faun," that Mr. Damrosch performed here recently. There is much imagination, much suggestion, behind the vague outlines of this music, the vaporous and filmy orchestration, the strangely shifting harmonies; there are glimpses of the golden days when the world was young; woodland vistas and glinting lakes, naiads and nymphs, and the dreams of old and far-off things. The texture of this musical fabric is exquisite and of gossamer thinness; but it is beautiful, and it was ravishingly played.

Mr. Henri Marteau was the soloist, and played a violin concerto dedicated to him by Emile Jaques-Dalcrõge, a Swiss composer hardly known here, or if at all, chiefly by some melodious children's songs. Yet he has written much, even in some of the larger forms; and this concerto shows a skilful hand. What is of as much importance, it shows also a strong imagination and ingenuity, if not exactly a strongly creative musical gift. Mr. Dalcrõge is familiar with the modern orchestra and its possibilities, and he has written a work that is in many ways striking. It is the kind of thing that artists, in speaking of pictures, call "amusing"; and that in a highly complimentary sense. There is a vein of fantasy through it that is frequently erratic, and in the last movement grotesque; and there are many beauties in the themes and their ingenious development, and in the brilliant orchestration. Mr. Marteau played it with a fine and sweeping energy, and a perfect conviction that was contagious. It abounds in sonorous and effective passages for the solo instrument, and these he made the most of. The work pleased greatly and called forth much applause.

Instead of Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony, that closed the programme, Mr. Gericke originally intended to play Strauss's early symphonic poem, "Aus Italien," the work that marks his transition from the cultivation of the symphony and sonata to that of the programme tone picture. But Mr. Gericke thought better of it, and substituted Beethoven's symphony; and it is possible that the audience, too, may have thought better of it.

At the close of the symphony there was long-continued, enthusiastic applause. Mr. Gericke was recalled and bowed many times. Finally he stilled the applause and spoke a few words expressing his thanks for himself and for the orchestra, adding that without the support given by New York the orchestra would probably not have been able to go on.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

James K. Hackett has arranged with Kingston & Sleath to present Edgar Selwyn's new farce, "It's All Your Fault," at the Savoy Theatre on April 2, following "Mr. Hopkinson." This comedy on that date will move to Mr. Hackett's new playhouse, the Fields Theatre.

Florence Roberts begins an engagement at the Liberty Theatre on April 16, presenting a play by Alice M. Smith, entitled "The Strength of the Weak." The scenes of the play are laid in Long Island and this city.

At the Broadway Theatre this evening in the performance of "The Vanderbilt Cup," Elsie Janis will introduce an imitation of Yvette Guilbert in costume. The new burlesque of "The Lion and the Mouse," which was postponed because of Miss Janis's illness, will be given to-morrow afternoon.

MOUNT SINAI DIDN'T BENEFIT.

Hospital Now Asks Hammerstein to Explain Sunday Programme Notice.

Patrons of Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, in Times Square, on Sunday night, March 4, noticed on the programme:

BENEFIT MOUNT SINAI HOSPITAL.

The performance that night was while the case was pending of Heinrich Conried of the Metropolitan Opera House, who had been summoned to court for alleged violation of the law by giving a theatrical entertainment on Sunday. The law does not apply to benefits for hospitals, charity organizations, and the like.

The day after the performance the Directors of the hospital, at 100th Street and Fifth Avenue, received a copy of the programme from a man who wanted to know why the Victoria Theatre had been used by Mount Sinai as a means of raising money. President Isaac Wallach immediately wrote to Oscar Hammerstein, demanding to know by what right he had used the name of the hospital. Mr. Wallach said that the hospital never had accepted the proceeds of any theatrical benefit performance; that the hospital did not adopt such methods of raising money, and that when it wanted money it appealed to the public directly.

On Tuesday, March 6, Mr. Hammerstein sailed for Europe without replying to Mr. Wallach's letter, and the following Sunday the advertisement appeared again. Mr. Wallach immediately laid the matter in the hands of Edward Lauterbach, as counsel, who demanded that the advertisement cease. He received a reply from the theatre saying that next Sunday no mention of Mount Sinai Hospital would be made.

"The Victoria management has promised not to use the name of the hospital again," said Mr. Lauterbach yesterday. "Mr. Conried won his case, I understand. I am not decided just what shall be done next—whether to let the case drop or pursue it."

J. W. CONANT'S DEATH.

Needless Mystery at Hotel About Pittsburg Amusement Man's End.

The police and the Coroner had some trouble early yesterday morning finding out about the death here of James Wallace Conant of Pittsburg, an amusement manager, who was known all over the country. They were not aided by the clerks at the Hotel Navarre, where Mr. Conant had been for a day or two as "J. C. Wallace," and where he remained until a few hours before he died at 220 West Thirty-eighth Street.

Mr. Conant's death was not reported until several hours after it occurred. When it was reported and a story got around that there was something wrong about it, the hotel clerks denied ever having seen Mr. Conant.

Mr. Conant had suffered from heart disease for some time and he was liable to violent attacks.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 15.—The sudden death of James Wallace Conant, the amusement manager, was a great shock to his friends in this city, where he was one of the best known "men about town." Mrs. Conant said to-day:

"Mr. Conant left home a week ago last Saturday. He was going to Boston and New York to look up two amusement propositions, one of which he proposed to take hold of. The last letter I received from him was dated Boston last Saturday. He said he was going to New York that evening."

Mr. Conant was born in Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1862, but came to this city when 15 years old and made Pittsburg his home. After following the river a few years he became interested in amusements. He managed the Casino indoor skating rink here until it was destroyed by fire. Then he went to New York and took charge of the ice palace. When the Duquesne Gardens were opened here he returned as manager of that resort. He had been connected with many other amusements throughout the country.

FUNERAL OF MISS ANTHONY.

Flags at Rochester Half-Masted and Buildings Draped in Black.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 15.—Flags on public buildings and on the University of Rochester were at half-mast to-day, when the funeral of Susan B. Anthony was held. Private buildings throughout the city were draped in black.

The funeral service was held at 2 P. M. in the Central Presbyterian Church, which was crowded to its utmost capacity. The Rev. Dr. Charles C. Albertson, pastor of the Central Church; the Rev. Dr. William C. Gannett, pastor of the First Unitarian Church, and the Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw of Philadelphia officiated.

Among the speakers were William Lloyd Garrison, Mrs. Jerome Jeffries of this city, and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt. The Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw pronounced the benediction. The burial was at Mount Hope Cemetery.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Bacon, a daughter of Dr. Gorham Bacon and Mrs. Bacon, and Arthur Cheney will take place on April 5 in the Church of the New Jerusalem, in East Thirty-fifth Street, the Rev. Julien Smyth officiating. It will be at 4 o'clock, and will be followed by a reception at the Bacon residence, 47 West Fifty-fourth Street. The bridesmaids are to be the Misses Kate De Forest Prentice, Annette Whipple, Marion Smyth, and Ruth Cheney, a sister of the bridegroom. The little Misses Faith Simpkins of Washington, a cousin of the bride, and the bride's sister, Elizabeth Bacon, are to be the flower girls. Mrs. Richard March Harper, (Miss Mabel Bacon,) whose marriage took place in January, may come on from Colorado to be her sister's matron of honor. Mr. Cheney's attendants will include his college friends, the Messrs. Greenleaf, Allsop, Martin, and Putnam, and his brother, Frank Cheney, will be his best man.

⁂

The sewing class for the Maternity Hospital is to meet to-day at the residence of Mrs. E. C. Berwind, 2 East Sixty-fourth Street.

⁂

A subscription masquerade and fancy-dress ball will take place at Delmonico's on the evening of Friday, April 27. The patronesses include Mrs. Augustine N. Lawrence, Mrs. L. Casimer de Coppet, Mrs. W. Howard Gilder, and others, and the invitations are confined to the younger dancing set.

⁂

The Thursday Evening Club was entertained last night by Mrs. Robert Winthrop at her residence, 37 East Thirty-eighth Street, the programme consisting of readings and recitations by Jerome K. Jerome and Charles Battell Loomis, from their writings. There was a large attendance of members and guests. This club is one of the oldest social organizations in New York society. Among the members are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Whitridge, Mrs. Cadwalader Jones, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. De Forest, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Cooper Hewitt, Gen. Lloyd Bryce and Mrs. Bryce, Prof. Sloane and Mrs. Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Post, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Mali, Amos R. Eno, Mrs. William H. Draper, and Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Barney.

⁂

From Washington comes the announcement by Commander I. S. K. Reeves, U. S. N., and Mrs. Reeves, of the engagement of their younger daughter, Miss Joan Howie Reeves, to Dr. Frank Jay Duffey of New York. No date has been set for the wedding.

⁂

The benefit performance for the Vassar Students' Aid Society, which is scheduled for Monday afternoon, April 2, at the Hudson Theatre, will consist of "The Mallet's Masterpiece," by Edward Peple; "The Land of the Free," by W. C. De Mille; "The Watteau Shepherdess," by Harold MacGrath, and "The Dance of the Iris," by Miss Francis Nathan.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. Karrick Riggs, who spent the Winter in New York, were booked to sail yesterday on La Lorraine, as was also Mrs. Griswold Gray of Paris, who spent the Winter here with her sister, Mrs. J. Abercrombie Burden, Sr.

THE TRIUMPHS OF EUGENE VALMONT

By ROBERT BARR.

If you were a detective—and you were employed in the house of an English peer—and a young man living close by was suspected of a crime—and the peer had a daughter—and she loved the young man—and she asked you to be a witness at a mock marriage ceremony between them—what would you do? Read this detective novel by Robert Barr and see what the great French detective Eugene Valmont did.

SAMUEL H. KAUFFMANN DEAD.

Washington Evening Star Proprietor a Well-Known Art Connoisseur.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Samuel Hay Kauffmann, President of the Evening Star Newspaper Company, President of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, and formerly President of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, died early to-day. Mr. Kauffmann was born in Wayne County, Ohio, April 30, 1829. Early in life he had learned the printing and the telegraph business, and at Wooster, Ohio, while operator there, taught telegraphy to Thomas Eckert, formerly President of the Western Union Telegraph Company. In 1854 he became a publisher and newspaper editor at Zanesville, Ohio, continuing that work until 1861. Then he came to Washington, and during the sixties was intrusted with many important Government duties, and enjoyed the confidence of Secretary Chase. In 1867 he became associated with Crosby S. Noyes, A. R. Shepherd, and George W. Adams in the purchase of The Washington Evening Star.

He was an authority on equestrian statues in America, and had collected material for a work on equestrian statues of the world. His residence on Massachusetts Avenue contains one of the finest private art collections in Washington.

Mr. Kauffmann was a member of the Philosophical Society, the Anthropological Society, the Columbia Historical Society, the Literary Society, and the National Geographic Society of Washington, the Shakespeare Society, the National Sculpture Society of New York, the Cosmos Club, Washington; the Chevy Chase Club of Maryland, the Grolier Club, the National Arts Club of New York, the Bibliophile Society of Boston, the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club of Maryland, the Blue Ridge Rod and Gun Club of Virginia, and the Percy Summer Club of New Hampshire.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

John I. Dunn.

John I. Dunn, who for years had been financial editor of The New York Press, died yesterday morning of typhoid fever at his home, in Ridgewood, N. J. Mr. Dunn was in his fortieth year. Prior to his association with The New York Press he had been in the banking business in this city and in the West and South, having been connected for many years with the Lombard Investment Company.

In 1890 he came to New York to deal in commercial paper, and while in this line of work he wrote on the sound money question and financial topics in general, which finally led to his acceptance of the financial editorship of The Press. Under the pen name of "Hamilton Jackson" he was widely known as a finished and able commentator on financial subjects.

Mr. Dunn was the son of the Rev. John K. Dunn of Kansas City, Mo. He was born in Detroit, Mich. He leaves a widow and three children. His father and mother, a sister, and two brothers also survive him.

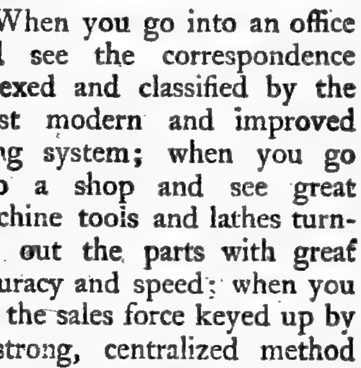
Ketchum, Mrs. William Watt of Vergennes, Vt., and J. Winslow Ketchum, also of Vermont. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

THOMAS REEVES ASH died on Monday at his Atlantic City residence, and was buried yesterday in Philadelphia. He was a grandson of Lieut. Ash of Gen. John Cadwalader's Brigade, Pennsylvania Militia, 1777. He was born in 1833, and married Miss Ellen M. Harland in 1857. His wife and three children survive him. The children are Mrs. John T. Farrell of 28 West Twenty-fifth Street, this city, and Frank R. and G. M. Ash of Philadelphia.



It is not a sentimental reason for a manufacturer to pay the full price of a page in THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL merely for the effect of that expenditure upon his trade. It is just as good policy to buy the best in the way of advertising space, and have that fact known, as it is to buy the best in business systems or manufacturing machinery and have that fact known.

When you go into an office and see the correspondence indexed and classified by the most modern and improved filing system; when you go into a shop and see great machine tools and lathes turning out the parts with great accuracy and speed; when you see the sales force keyed up by a strong, centralized method of sales instructions, and kept in constant touch with the home office by a good series of straight-from-the-shoulder talks, you have more respect for that business, and you ought to have.

And so, when you see a manufacturer advertising in the best mediums, buying the best advertising money can buy, because it is the best, you have greater confidence in that man's advertising than you would otherwise have.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The Southern Alabama storm is now central off the Southern New England Coast, attended by northeast gales and snow. It appears to be moving rapidly northeastward over the Atlantic. The plateau depression is working to the southeastward and is now central in New Mexico, while the northwestern area of high pressure has not changed its position in the last twenty-four hours.

Snow has fallen in New England, the Middle Atlantic States, the Upper Ohio Valley, the lower lake region, and throughout Nebraska, Kansas, and in scattered localities in the middle Rocky Mountain and plateau regions.

Rain has fallen generally throughout the South Atlantic States and the southern portion of the Middle Atlantic States.

Low temperatures prevail in all parts of the country except along the South Atlantic Coast. The weather will clear Friday in New England and the north portion of the Middle Atlantic States, and the temperature will rise slowly in the Northwest and the interior valleys Friday and Saturday.

Winds along the New England Coast will be high north, shifting to northwest; on the Middle Atlantic Coast, brisk northwest; on the South Atlantic Coast, fresh west; on the East Gulf Coast, light to fresh north; on the West Gulf Coast, fresh southeast; on Lake Michigan, mostly fresh northerly.

Steamers departing Friday for European ports will have high northwest winds and cloudy weather, with occasional snow squalls, to the Grand Banks.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND SATURDAY.

Eastern New York, fair on the coast, snow in the interior Friday; Saturday fair; brisk to high northwest winds.

New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Delaware, fair and cold Friday; Saturday fair; brisk northwest winds.

New England, snow Friday, clearing in the afternoon; Saturday fair; high northwest winds.

Western New York and Western Pennsylvania, snow Friday and Saturday; fresh northwest winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermomter at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

	1905.	1906.		1905.	1906.
3 A. M.	29	30	4 P. M.	39	25

The Genius

A stirring romance, by Margaret Potter, based on the life of a famous Russian composer—the sensitive, gifted son of a powerful, iron-handed government despot. His career is a strange and deeply moving tale of shifting fortunes, dramatic episodes and final artistic triumphs.

The novel follows the hero into the high social and military circles to which he was born; into musical society, to which his art led him and into that of plotting revolutionists, where he fell by chance. Each shifting scene has an intense dramatic interest, and the whole is a striking presentation of the artistic temperament in its most interesting phases.

Miss Primrose

The freshness and tender simplicity of Roy Rolfe Gilson's works have won for him a large circle of readers. Readers of "In the Morning Glow" and "When Love Is Young" know the potent charm of this perennially refreshing fiction. Mr. Gilson's portrayal of little Bertram has the same simplicity and charm that have made his former books so popular. The pictures of village life are exquisitely shaded, and Miss Primrose's romance adds a touch of sentiment and humor to a story of delightful originality.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Lower; Call Money Rates, 4@9 Per Cent.

Public Utility Issues Decline—Missouri Pacific Breaks at Close.

After a day of utter dullness, in which the volume of transactions fell over 100,000 shares below the contracted trading of Wednesday, the final fifteen minutes of yesterday's stock market session provided a most spectacular development in the violent decline of 4½ points in Missouri Pacific on transactions of few more than a thousand shares. The immediate cause of this break was found in a statement issued a few moments earlier by the company, in which were set forth the earnings of the property for the year 1905, showing that the road's surplus applicable to dividends had fallen $2,052,000 below the corresponding amount for the previous year, and that it had failed to earn the present 5 per cent. dividend on the stock by some $18,000. Such an exhibit in Wall Street's estimation foreshadows a reduction in the dividend rate, especially so since the burden of financing the many extensions and improvements now under way on Gould lines is borne, either directly or indirectly, in large measure by the Missouri Pacific. The effect of the publication of this statement heightened by the announcement earlier in the week of the retirement from the Missouri Pacific Board of Directors of two gentlemen who represented on that board a powerful financial interest, which, it is fair to presume, is no longer intimately concerned in the road's welfare. The sudden decline in this stock yesterday at the end of the day was attended by no unsettlement elsewhere in the stock market, but an explanation of this fact may be found in the slender attendance upon the floor of the Exchange and in the proximity of the development to the closing hour. Outside of this matter the day's trading was confined to lines similar to those pursued on Wednesday. Consolidated Gas was once more under pressure, falling away in all 5¼ points, while Chicago Union Traction preferred fell 5⅛ points, making the total decline of this issue since Monday, the day of the announcement of the Supreme Court's decision on franchise matters, 30 points. This almost unparalleled break has not occurred without working harm in several directions, as was revealed by the heavy selling and 2¼-point fall in People's Gas stock yesterday. In Chicago, where the bulk of these securities are held, there has been an urgent demand for additional margin, and liquidation in other shares for protective purposes has resulted, this movement explaining in large part the course of People's Gas. In spite of the depressing influence which these declines may well have possessed, many stocks, including Union Pacific, Pennsylvania, and Reading, displayed consistent firmness and closed without loss, while the average decline in other issues was inconsiderable.

Call money rates worked up to 9 per cent. late in the day, the causes underlying this advance being largely those which brought about Wednesday's upturn in rates, comprising shipments of money to out-of-town points and preparations for yesterday's dividend disbursements, matters which, under ordinary conditions at least, are temporary in their influence. Foreign exchange rates were unaffected by the advance in money rates. European markets were again influenced by the uncertainty at Algeciras.

WOULD HURT SMALL BANKS.

Much Opposition to Cooper Branch Bank Bill at Albany Hearing.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 15.—As a result of a hearing before the Commitee on Banks of the Senate to-day, the Cooper Branch Bank bill will be materially amended or not reported at all. It provides that banks and trust companies operating branches shall, immediately on the passage of the bill, increase the capitalization of the parent bank to $500,000, and for each branch $100,000 additional.

The measure has met with a storm of opposition from the smaller banks, which have been doing business on small capital and which could not profitably employ the enormous increase called for in the act.

At the hearing to-day Clarence Lexow appeared for the Twenty-third Ward Bank, in the Bronx; L. Harry Fisher for the Williamsburg Trust Company, Mr. Bonner for the North Side Bank, Herman Aaron for the Hamilton Bank, and John M. Bowers for the Corn Exchange Bank, which operates twenty-one branches.

The general contention of those opposed to the measure was that the increase of capital demanded would tend to make banks unsafe rather than as safe as they now are. Mr. Lexow said that the bill would destroy the small banks in the interests of the larger institutions. He said it was clearly more safe to have branches of a parent institution than a number of independent banks. The retroactive clause, which would require every bank operating branches to increase its capital forthwith or go out of business, was wrong in every particular, he said.

Senator Cooper admitted that there would be modifications in the bill, although in what particular he did not state.

BAD YEAR FOR EARNINGS IN MISSOURI PACIFIC

Stock Breaks on Showing of $18,205 Draft on Surplus.

GOULD EXPLAINS LOSSES

Snow, Floods, Yellow Fever and Small Cotton Crop Some Reasons Why Dividend Wasn't Earned.

The report of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company for 1905, issued yesterday, shows that the surplus earnings fell short by $18,205 of the amount required to meet the 5 per cent. dividend on the company's stock. The publication of the report in the financial district was followed by a sharp break in the stock. Very little of the stock was traded in, but the price broke 4½ points, to 95, closing at the lowest.

The weakness of the stock strengthened the belief in Wall Street that more significance was to be attached to the retirement this week of the Rockefeller representatives from the Missouri Pacific board than had been admitted by the representatives of the Gould interests.

The statement of earnings is made in the form of two reports, each covering a period of six months. The statement was made in this form for the reason that the end of the company's fiscal year was changed last year from Dec. 31 to June 30. By combining the half yearly statements the gross earnings for the Missouri Pacific system for the full year 1905 are found to be $42,510,272, a decrease of $1,175,344 compared with the previous year. The total income of the system amounted to $14,779,921, and total charges to $10,907,258, leaving a balance of $3,872,663. The 5 per cent. dividend paid on the company's stock called for $3,890,868, leaving the deficiency of $18,205.

In detail the earnings for 1905 compare as follows with those for 1904:

	1905.	1904.
Gross earnings	$42,518,272	$43,693,616
Operating expenses.........	30,177,727	30,406,040
Net earnings..............	$12,340,545	$13,287,576
Other income...............	2,439,376	2,937,274
Total income..............	$14,779,921	$16,224,850
Deduct—
Taxes	$1,123,256	$1,298,771
Fixed charges and rent.....	8,683,096	7,718,108

Total surplus..............	$13,025,929	$13,044,134

*Surplus.

It appears from the report that, of the year's surplus earnings of $3,872,663, $2,880,765 was earned in the last six months of the year, while in the first six months the earnings applicable to dividends amounted to only $991,898.

This means that in the first six months of 1905, the Missouri Pacific earned only a trifle more than half the dividend paid for that period. This showing was due to the very unfavorable conditions under which the company operated early last year. Severe snowstorms in January and February and excessive rainfall later, followed by floods, adversely affected the earnings of the company.

George J. Gould, the President, in his report to the stockholders says that these conditions necessitated for a time the diversion of traffic to other lines and later on called for large expenditures to restore the property to its former condition. He estimates that the losses suffered by the company from these causes reduced the net earnings for the first six months of the year by at least $750,000.

While the earnings showed a great improvement in the second half of 1905 the company still was handicapped by unusual conditions. The prevalence of yellow fever in New Orleans and the surrounding country and the quarantine affected a large part of the Missouri Pacific's lines. Added to this cause of loss was the falling off in traffic due to the shortage of the cotton crop. President Gould says that these incidents were followed later by renewal of the floods which again caused serious loss.

Reference is made in the report to the advantages which are accruing to the Missouri Pacific from operation of the new bridge across the Mississippi at Thebes, Ill., in which the Missouri Pacific has a two-fifths interest. President Gould says that the use of this bridge will relieve traffic to and from the Southwest, and, by affording a continuous low-grade line from East St. Louis to the South, will greatly facilitate the movement of traffic.

The report draws attention to the fact that the Missouri Pacific system is deriving revenue from two new lines, the Memphis, Helena and Louisiana, which was put in operation late in December, and the White River line, opened for traffic on Jan. 1.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 15.—The local money market remains unchanged.

Call loans, 5½@6 per cent. Time loans, collateral, 4¾@6 per cent. Time loans, mercantile paper, 5¼@5½ per cent. Clearing House loans, 5 per cent. New York funds, 10c. discount. Clearings, $27,704,490. Balances, $1,854,111. Sub-Treasury debit, $290,683.

The local market opened quiet and irregular. Selling pressure was again seen in Boston Consolidated and the price lost two points in the early trading, but buying orders soon came in and the stock advanced nearly five points. Nevada Consolidated was strong and gained a point on Western buying. Bingham was weak and lost a fraction. Trading outside of Boston and Nevada was light and price changes but nominal.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 15.—A rather sensational break of three points was made in Philadelphia Rapid Transit to-day. Under heavy and persistent selling the price broke from 31 to 28. It was believed at first that the decline was the result of the week's severe break in Chicago traction securities, in which Philadelphia is heavily interested. Later, however, the real cause was traced to City Councils.

It was said that the ordinance granting an extension of time for the completion of the Market Street Subway would be "held up"; that an ordinance would be introduced granting the Philadelphia and Western the right to build an elevated road and subway down Chestnut Street. It was also stated that the Commonwealth Electric ordinance would be amended so as to admit of a merger or consolidation. The weakness of Rapid Transit affected all the public utility stocks, United Gas Improvement declining 2 points. The market generally was weak and unsettled, the only exceptions being railroad stocks, Lehigh Valley in particular was strong and higher.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Three members of a Stock Exchange firm formed a syndicate yesterday and took their only visible customer out to luncheon. Immediately after luncheon the o. v. customer discovered that the weather beckoned him home and betook himself thither to the disgust of the syndicate.

***

The caldron of Stock Exchange speculation simmered at low temperature. Traders with short sticks stood around it idly, agitating the surface, waiting for the real witches with the long sticks to come and explore the lower depths. The few who attend the caldron are just as much under its spell as the many who stand outside the circle, but the few are those who know what makes it boil, or why it doesn't, while the many are permitted to see only the results and receive explanations—which are mostly untrue. Activity in the stock market is rarely spontaneous. The factor of personal initiative is of much greater consequence from day to day than the average layman could be supposed to believe. The dullness of the moment is the result rather of an absence of initiative than of conditions prohibitive of speculation. Conditions are never prohibitive of speculaton, for if prices may not go up they may go down, and there is speculation both ways, but conditions sometimes are unfavorable to speculation of a certain kind, and then, in the absence of aggressive leadership in the other direction, there is likely to be no speculation at all. It is evident that the long sticks have been temporarily withdrawn from the caldron, and that the fire is desired to smolder. That has now been the case for some time, and as the fire sinks and the temperature falls the dance lags within the circle, while those outside of it cease to dance at all.

***

A cynical member of the professional fraternity suggests that in the event of a coal strike it will be the thing to buy Anaconda with the idea that there may be a strike of anthracite on some lower level.

***

Since the Directors were authorized, at their discretion, to issue $18,000,000 of new stock, the weakness of Pennsylvania has been regarded with some suspicion. Some disgruntled speculative bulls are asking if the stock's behavior in the market might not be attributed to quiet selling of the new supply out of the company's treasury. That happened once before. Wall Street knew that a large amount of new Pennsylvania stock was to be issued, and while everybody was thinking that the company's bankers would have to make a good market for the old stock in order to insure a favorable reception of the new, the new certificates began suddenly to be delivered.

***

Mr. Hamilton, who himself was a stock market paragrapher for several years, writes cynically of the paragraphing tribe, and reflects that "criticism on price movements suffers much from an insufficient appreciation of the value of words." Out of his experience he submits a scale of adjectives. A condition of equilibrium, he thinks, may properly take the adjective steady, and from this he works up a bull market gradually with hardening, firm, strong, very strong, booming. From steady he reaches a panic by six adjectives—dull, heavy, depressed, weak, very weak, panicky. Each paragrapher, he thinks, should get this scale by heart. It would prevent him from accompanying a half-point advance in the market with a 2-point jump in adjectives. It is to be hoped that Mr. Hamilton will not let his educational work stop at the misuse of adjectives. He might train his cynicism upon the following example of circumlocutory paragraphing: "A certain Stock Exchange firm which often acts for the brother-in-law of the President of the above-mentioned bank has been talking very bearish of this stock [Reading] in its market letter." The "above-mentioned bank" was not mentioned at all; the writer referred to it as "a prominent banking institution which boomed Reading up to 140." This is surely not libelous.

***

Nearly everybody who has been selling Reading short expects to cover it on the announcement of a coal strike. It could be overdone, and, besides, what if there should be no strike!

***

Brokers find that time money is more freely offered, and also that money-lending institutions are somewhat more tolerant in their scrutiny of collateral. Some of them attribute this to an abatement of the fears with which a banking investigation on the lines first suggested was regarded in Wall Street. Trust companies have been lending time money more freely this week.

***

The stocks of public utility corporations are a drag upon the general market. Chicago Union Traction shares declined again yesterday, the preferred stock touching 16¼, a decline of 31 points since Monday. People's Gas declined 3 points. Consolidated Gas suffered another bad break, going to the lowest price so far touched on this decline. The Metropolitan issues also were weak. The selling of People's Gas stock was generally associated with the collapse in Chicago Union Traction shares.

***

The plight of the Chicago Union Traction Company obviously has increased the distrust with which Chicago securities, especialy its public utility securities, have long been regarded by conservative investors in the East. It is a prejudice that has been growing steadily for several years, owing to the trend of legislative thought in Chicago, and the events of this week have intensified it greatly. A financier of prominence, one who made most of his money in Chicago, declared several months ago that he was getting out of his Chicago investments as rapidly as he could, intending ultimately to be without a dollar's interest in the financial future of that city. He referred to People's Gas. It was, in his judgment, one of the finest properties of its kind in the country, but so harassed by hostile political bodies as to make its future extremely uncertain. As a property he thought very well of it, but People's Gas stock was not an investment that could appeal to him personally, because he knew Chicago. The drastic revaluation of Chicago Traction shares in the market this week, as a result of the United States Supreme Court's decision, strikingly illustrates the truth that fortune hath wings. Many millions of investment wealth appear to have vanished.

***

For some little time after the publication of the company's annual statement Missouri Pacific, which had been heavy, but not conspicuously weak, hung at a quotation of about 99. In the last ten minutes of the session it began to braek, and it declined in this manner: One hundred shares at 98⅞, 100 at 98¾, 100 at 98½, 200 at 98¼, 100 at 98, 100 at 98¼, 700 at 98, 100 at 97¾, 200 at 97½, 100 at 97¼, 200 at 97, 200 at 96, 500 at 95½, and 600 at 95. The report was very bad, showing that the company had failed to earn quite the full dividend on the stock, but even more startling was the absence of support when the decline started. It is unusual for a stock of Missouri Pacific's position and prominence to fall 4 points in a few minutes under sales of less than 3,500 shares. The incident is likely to be remembered to its discredit for a long time. The Wabash issues were not sympathetically affected to any such extent as might have been expected. Wabash common closed at a decline of 1⅛ per cent., but the preferred stock closed at a fractional advance. Because of its age and traditions, it seems reasonable to assume that Missouri Pacific stock is widely distributed among investors. There has not been an active Wall Street speculation in it since 1902. For several weeks it has been fluctuating over a narrow range between 99 and 102 or 103.

LAKE CANAL FREIGHT TRAFFIC

53,639,086 Tons Carried on the Detroit River in 1905.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The Department of Commerce and Labor to-day issued a statement saying that the domestic freight traffic of the Detroit River has for the first time been fully measured, and the reports filed with the department covering the season of lake navigation of 1905 show a total of 53,639,086 net tons of domestic freight traffic, of which 39,991,085 tons were south-bound and the remainder north-bound.

The freight traffic through the canals at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Ontario during the same period aggregated 44,270,680 net tons, of which 36,778,738 were south-bound. Of these two canals the total freight movement through the United States canal amounted to 38,802,190 tons, while that through the Canadian canal totaled 5,468,490 tons.

The total through traffic of the Welland Canal, showing the volume of waterborne traffic between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, aggregated in 1903, the last available data, 979,807 tons, of which only 263,212 were up-bound.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Buyers Holding Out for Lower Pig Iron Prices Are Disappointed.

Those buyers who have been holding out for lower prices in pig iron find little encouragement in the trade reports of stocks on hand, which, latest advices say, are growing smaller in the South as well as in the North. Southern stocks are said to be little in excess of 100,000 tons, and the United States Steel Corporation is credited with less than a week's supply on hand. The blast furnaces of the Shenango and Mahoning Valleys have little, if any, surplus for sale. While the new business in iron has not been lively recently, the product seems to find its way to the melting pots as rapidly as it is turned out.

The Republic Iron and Steel Company, the largest producer of bar iron in the country, is selling bar iron on a basis of $1.75@$1.80 per 100 pounds, Chicago, which is equivalent to $1.60@$1.65, Pittsburg. Not many weeks ago the Republic Iron & Steel Company was quoting as high as $40 a ton, Pittsburg. Bar iron prices are now nearer the prices of steel bars than for some time past.

COPPER MARKET REPORTS.

Spot copper advanced in London yesterday and futures declined. The closing quotation for the former was £80 2s. 6d., 2s. 6d. above Wednesday's close. Futures lost the same amount, 2s. 6d., closing at £78 2s. 6d.

The closing prices of copper and other metals on the New York Metal Exchange yesterday compare as follows with those of the preceding day:

CHICAGO RAIL STOCKS CONTINUE TO FALL

Four to Six Point Drop Yesterday—Bond Values Shaky.

SOME AT 50C. ON THE DOLLAR

Yerkes Estate Holdings of $6,750,000 Offered at $2,600,000, with No Takers.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 15.—Confusion as to values still exists in the minds of holders of the local traction securities, which were affected by the Supreme Court decision on Monday. There was a break of 6 points in North Chicago stock after a rise at the opening to-day, which gave false hope. West Chicago dropped 4 points, an aggregate of 39½ points since Monday's high figure.

Of the first mortgage 5s there are outstanding $3,790,000. If they are worth but 80 cents on the dollar, this may also be considered the value of the West Chicago consolidated 5 per cent. bonds, of which there are $6,201,000 outstanding.

At present there is nothing but the tangible assets, and what little of value there may be in unexpired franchises, to gauge bond values. Assuming the estimate of B. J. Arnold that $15,000,000 in round figures will cover the tangible assets of the North and West Chicago Street Railroad systems, the Consolidated 5s can hardly be worth 50 cents on the dollar. Ahead of them, among other things, are $4,012,000 of first mortgage West Division 4½ per cent. bonds and the $3,799,000 West Chicago Street Railroad first mortgage bonds, making a total of $7,811,000 first mortgage bonds ahead of the Consolidated issue.

On the north side there are $500,000 North Chicago City Railway first mortgage 4s, $2,500,000 North Chicago City Railway second mortgage 4½ per cent. bonds, and $3,171,000 North Chicago Street Railroad first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, all of which outrank the West Chicago Consolidated 5s. There is a total of approximately $13,981,000 of paper ahead of the Consolidated issue in the event all the assets were lumped. This is nearly $14,000,000, against which there are assets of $15,000,000 as a whole. The equity for the $6,201,000 Consolidated 5s would be roughly $1,000,000.

But if Mr. Arnold's figures include the assets of the Chicago Consolidated, then there is something over $5,000,000 first mortgage bonds additional spread over the underlying properties in the Consolidated Company, and which would come ahead of the West Chicago Consolidated 5s, leaving the latter nothing.

So far as the Yerkes estate is concerned it is said to hold $6,750,000 Chicago Consolidated 4½ per cents. To-day 40 was asked for these, representing about $2,600,000, but there were no takers. According to Mr. Knight, the Yerkes attorney, Mr. Yerkes got out from under the Union Traction crash and held bonds only of the Chicago Consolidated.

Gas Meeting Adjourns Again.

The annual meeting of the Consolidated Gas Company, held yesterday, was again adjourned, until May 5. The meeting was originally called for Jan. 22, but on that date was adjourned to March 15. At the offices of the company no reason was given for the further adjournment of the meeting. A quorum of stockholders was present, but no business was transacted.

The issue of Treasury stock of The Pittsburgh Bullfrog Mining Corp'n, Ltd., at 35 cents per share being nearly subscribed, the price will be

ADVANCED TO

45 CENTS PER SHARE

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21st.

The two veins recently discovered on our Sapper claim, composed of quartz and white talc, the identical Shoshone formation, indicate that equal development will make the shares of this Corporation worth many times par, as it has already done for the Montgomery-Shoshone. That this fact is thoroughly appreciated by the knowing ones on the ground, is shown by the large number of orders being received for the stock from Bullfrog and Rhyolite.

Immediate application is therefore advisable on the part of those who wish to secure this stock at 35 cents, as no more than the allotted amount will be sold at this price.

The right is reserved to reduce or return any subscription.

APPLICATIONS BY MAIL should be accompanied by check to the order of this Corporation, at the rate of 35 cents per share for the number desired. Minimum subscription accepted, 100 shares.

MATCH TRUST EXTENDING?

Wall Street Hears Reports, but an Officer Says They're Baseless.

Wall Street heard by way of Chicago that the Diamond Match Company, which was one of the earliest "trusts," was negotiating for the purchase of several of the independent manufactories, notably the Union Match Company of Duluth. The company never had a complete monopoly of the trade, and its proportion of the output, which was formerly reckoned at 70 per cent., is now put at only about half of the total business.

An official of the company denied that such negotiations were on. "That's what some of the independents would like to have happen," he said, "but there is nothing in the story."

CONFER ON WALSH ROADS.

Railroads, However, Don't Want to Pay Clearing House's Price.

Conferences were held yesterday by the representatives of the Chicago Clearing House Association and those of the Pennsylvania, New York Central, and Rock Island systems on the subject of a sale of the Walsh roads. No conclusion, however, was reached. The Clearing House Committee is still holding out for a larger price than the roads are willing to pay.

The railroads that are expected to purchase the Walsh properties have made no counter proposition in the matter of price, and are waiting for the Chicago committee to name a smaller price. The railroads are not yet committed in any way to the purchase.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Frank C. Littleton was elected to membership in the Stock Exchange yesterday, taking the seat of the late C. T. Minton.

The stockholders of the Nassau National Bank of Brooklyn have voted to increase its capital from $300,000 to $750,000. Stockholders have the privilege of subscribing to the new stock at the rate of one and a half shares for every share owned at par.

The American Bank Note Company has declared a dividend of 1 per cent., payable March 31. The rate is 6 per cent. a year. The Reorganization Committee has arranged that the holders of receipts for the old stock deposited with the Bankers' Trust Company will get these dividends.

The United States Smelting, Refining and Mining Company has declared the initial quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock, payable April 16.

One hundred and seven shares of Bank of Commerce stock sold on the Stock Exchange yesterday in small lots at prices ranging from 189⅝ to 188½.

The Corn Exchange Bank will open a Brooklyn branch at Court and Montague Streets about March 20. R. D. Brown, formerly of the Fulton Bank and latterly in charge of several of the Corn Exchange Bank's Manhattan branches, will manage the Brooklyn branch.

The Hudson Realty Company has raised its dividend rate from 6 to 8 per cent. annually, and has changed the dates of payment from half-yearly to quarterly. The first quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. is payable March 31. Emil S. Levi has been elected Vice President to succeed Henry S. Herrman.

The $5,000,000 Birmingham Railway, Light & Power Company 4½ per cent. general mortgage bonds, recently purchased from the company by N. W. Harris & Co., have been sold to investors.

The Safety Car Heating & Lighting Company has declared an extra 2 per cent. in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent., payable April 2.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Trading Dull and Irregular on the Curb.

Boston Copper Regains Some Lost Ground — Industrials Have Sluggish Day.

Trading on the curb yesterday was dull in most issues and the Industrial list especially felt the lack of interest. The sales in this branch of the market were fewer than have been recorded in months, totaling under 6,000 shares if the trading in Bay State Gas is not counted, which yesterday amounted to 4,500 shares between ⅜ and ½. Mining shares were not as active as has usually been the case in recent markets. Boston Copper recovered much of the ground lost in Wednesday's trading and sold 12,800 shares between 20⅝ and 25½, closing at 24½. This was the first upward movement in this stock since the drop began Monday.

Nevada Consolidated continued its strong selling, 12,200 shares passing between 18⅞ and 19⅝. Some sales were made, buyers option, at 20. Interborough-Metropolitan common lost ½ point on sales of 2,500, closing at 51¾.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 15.—There was further dribbling liquidation of local tractions on the home Exchange, of a character which suggested the selling of investments held many years by "widows and orphans." In one instance some West Chicago stock, which was the first investment of a well-known corporation attorney, made twenty years ago, came on the market. The salvation of prices seemed to be the fact that no great amount of stock was being thrown over. North Chicago sold from 35 down to 29 before noon. West Chicago from 30 to 28.

In the New York market, Union Traction common was sold freely, and broke somewhat lower than its level of yesterday, selling early at 5⅛. The preferred fell from 22 to 16⅛, a low record. Other local stocks were quiet. Match sold at 139. Edison was easy at 158. Carbon lost a fraction at 92. Swift's was ex dividend 1¾ per cent. at 107.

Money, 5@6 per cent. New York exchange, par@5c premium.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—Events in the wheat market took a more bullish turn yesterday, and at the close prices were from ½ to ⅝c net higher, May showing the greatest strength. Immediately after the opening, which was a firm one, bears made an effort to hammer the market under 84c for May, but found that the market had a stubborn undertone whenever it approached that figure. Unable to force prices lower, bears attempted to replace sales, and prices jumped about ⅝c per bushel around midday, and were advanced still higher in the last hour by prospects for smaller Argentine shipments. The Paris market closed 5 to 15 points higher on wheat and flour, Berlin was unchanged, and Budapest 2 points lower. The cash market closed steady, with No. 2 red quoted at 84⅛c, elevator, and 86⅛c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, 87¼c, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—The corn market was generally firm all day, with the exception of one or two unimportant reactions. Its main factor was a drop in receipts, which promoted activity and firmness in the Western cash markets. Total Western receipts were only 274,000 bushels, compared with 612,000 bushels a year ago, and the estimates for Friday continued light. Liverpool was partly ⅛d net higher, but exporters did not appear to take an interest in the market. There was considerable activity among shorts throughout the day, and some buying through commission houses. At New York closing prices were ¼c net higher. No. 2 corn locally closed 51c, elevator, and 47¾c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 48⅜c, and No. 2 yellow, 48⅜c, free on board, afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market was quiet yesterday, sales for the day being estimated at only 150,000 bales. The undertone was steady, however. The market opened steady at an advance of 3@7 points, and sold at a net advance of 6@9 points right afterward on covering of shorts and a little buying for a turn on a better demand for spot cotton. But there was no sign of bull support, and this emboldened local bears to again attack the list on the bulge, which they did to the extent of forcing prices off to about the closing of the previous day. But New Orleans showed no disposition to follow the reaction; private reports from the South continued bullish both as to the weather and spot conditions.

Southern spot markets were unchanged to ⅛c lower, according to official reports, but only one market reported any loss, and most private advices received indicated a firm situation. There were rumors of large sales of low grade cotton from the local stock, but the only business officially reported was sales of about 2,025 bales. Interior receipts continued light, but exports also are light.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

No Tariff Reduction for Books for Public Institutions.

In a decision by I. F. Fischer, the Board of United States General Appraisers overruled yesterday a claim made by Lemcke & Buechner of New York regarding the rate of duty applicable to importations of books alleged to be entered for the use of public institutions. They were assessed for duty at 25 per cent. and were claimed to be exempt from tax. The Customs Court finds that there was no compliance with the regulations of the Treasury Department bearing on such entries, and that, therefore, the merchandise must stand the regular assessment.

Other importers' claims denied were filed by George Riggs & Co., Jules Morel, R. F. Downing & Co., Samuel Thompson's Nephew & Co., the C. Wildermann Company, and George Quackenbush, New York; the American Mercantile Company, San Francisco; F. W. Myers & Co., Burlington, Vt.; C. E. Austin & Co., Bangor, Me., and A. E. Fritz, Chicago.

Protests by Walton & Harrison, Detroit, and Michel Bockner, Port Huron, Mich., were sustained.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Petitions in Bankruptcy.

SAMUEL H. HAAS.—Samuel H. Haas of 205th Street and White Plains Road, William's Bridge, filed a petition in bankruptcy, liabilities, $5,501; no assets.

NATHAN GOLDENBERG.—Judge Holt appointed George E. Leonard receiver for Nathan Goldenberg, dealer in 5c. and 10c. goods at First Avenue and Thirteenth Street. His bond is $1,000.

CHARLES NEWMAN, Jr.—Charles Newman, Jr., of 241 West 111th Street, filed a petition in bankruptcy, liabilities about $10,000; assets, $700, in suburban property at Birmingham, Ala.

MASCHIL D. CONVERSE.—Maschil D. Converse, mechanical expert, 141 Broadway, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $2,921 and no assets. The largest creditor is Edgar M. Hermance of Yonkers, $2,619, money lent.

OTTO HOCK.—Otto Hock, wheelwright, at 532½ West Fifty-second Street, filed a petition in bankruptcy, liabilities, $1,957; no assets.

JOSEPH POLDOW.—Joseph Poldow, contractor, of 1,228 Hoe Avenue, Bronx, filed a petition in bankruptcy, liabilities, $1,901; no assets.

THE CHICAGO CLOTHES DRYER WORKS.—The Chicago Clothes Dryer Works, manufacturer of patent clothes dryers, at 136 West Twenty-fourth Street. A petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday by the following creditors: Bruce & Cook, $4,678; George A. Feld Company, $271, and the New York Belting and Packing Company, $38. The company was incorporated on June 12, 1905, with $100,000 capital, and bought the Eastern business of a company of the same name in Chicago. The New York company, it is stated, has no connection with or interest in the Chicago company.

SEDER & WARSHOWER.—Isidor E. Seder and Max S. Warshower, manufacturers of shirtwaists at 175 Greene Street. A petition in bankruptcy was signed by creditors having claims as follows: L. Spiegelberg & Sons, $75; Spiegelberg & Co., $249, and Samuel Rosenthal & Brothers, $400. The firm formerly was in business in Worcester, Mass., and started in this city last July. It used the style of the S. W. Waist Company, manufacturer of sell-well waists and shirtwaists. Judge Holt of the United States District Court appointed Charles Wheeler Barnes receiver, fixing his bond at $4,000. The liabilities are $16,000 and assets $7,500.

ALIAS HURWITZ.—Seaman Miller, referee in bankruptcy, has reported against the discharge from bankruptcy of Alias Hurwitz, manufacturer of wrappers, formerly at 90 Prince Street, who filed a petition on June 3, 1903, liabilities, $4,681; assets, $2,619. The ground is that he did not keep true books of account. In February, 1902, Hurwitz claimed to have assets of $34,598, and liabilities of $7,475, and when he filed his petition his assets were only $2,619. When asked to account for this big shrinkage of assets, he said that the shrinkage was due largely to depreciation in value of his stock and enormous rates of discount. One banking company to which he assigned his accounts, he said, paid him only 60 per cent. of the face of the claims.

Out of Town.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—A petition in insolvency against the Farwell Worsted Mills was filed in the United States Circuit Court at Providence yesterday by creditors, and a receiver was appointed. The liabilities are estimated at $400,000, with nominal assets in excess of that amount.

BOSTON.—Owing $214,670.64, according to a voluntary petition in bankruptcy filed yesterday, William P. Kimball of 16 Harvard Street, Newton, has assets of only $6,525. The securities for claims of $147,785.76 are largely scheduled as of "no market value" or as "uncertain." Unsecured claims of $30,118.03 are scheduled. Among his assets Mr. Kimball schedules over 1,000,000 shares of the capital stock of the American Heat, Light and Power Company, par value of $1.

BOSTON.—The Fred H. Lucas Carriage Company of Boston has made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors to A. W. Newell, President of the Fourth National Bank of Boston, and Charles A. Lancaster. The liabilities are believed to be in the neighborhood of $50,000.

THE NEW YORK TIMES
Finds Lost Articles
Telephone—1000 Bryant

I write on a postal card, that all who run may read, that on Sunday evening I lost a beautiful gold watch. I advertised my loss in THE NEW YORK TIMES Tuesday morning, and had the watch returned to me the same day. THE TIMES is a great paper.

KAY M. SPENCER.
No. 207 West Eighty-fifth Street,
March 7, 1906.

H. B. Mettler, who lives at 127 West Sixty-third Street, and is connected with Crocker & Andrews, steam-heating contractors at 34 West Twenty-fourth Street, inserted this advertisement in the "Lost and Found" column in THE NEW YORK TIMES March 10th:

LOST—French poodle; name Custard; regular clip; $25 reward. Mettler, 127 West 63d St.

At 2 o'clock the same afternoon an enthusiastic letter from Mr. Mettler was in THE TIMES office telling that Custard was back.

"I had given up all hopes of recovering the dog, as I had advertised in all the other leading papers with no results," his letter says. "I trust that others may be as successful as I."

I am happy to say that through the medium of the advertisement in THE NEW YORK TIMES I obtained possession of the bag of jewels yesterday, they having been found by an honest person. E. H. R.

New York, Feb. 26, 1906.

The jewels referred to in this letter were found by Miss Ella Cashin of South Ninth Street, Newark, who promptly returned them to their owner and received a reward.

I wish to acknowledge the value of your newspaper and to thank you for your assistance in the recovery of my property, which is referred to in attached advertisement:

LOST—Saturday noon, between Broadway and 91st St. Subway to Times Square Station and Metropolitan Opera House, small gold open-faced watch; initials C. W.; reward. Apartment 11A The Narragansett, Broadway and 93d St.

My watch was returned to me to-day as the result of my advertisement in THE NEW YORK TIMES. C. W.

NEW YORK SUPREME COURT, NEW YORK County.—ABRAHAM NEVINS and HARRY W. PERELMAN, plaintiffs, against ISIDORE D. MORRISON and others, defendants.

In pursuance of a judgment of foreclosure and sale duly made and entered in the above-entitled action and bearing date the 23d day of February, 1906, I, the undersigned referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the New York Real Estate Salesroom, Nos. 14 and 16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, on the 20th day of March, 1906, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, by Joseph P. Day, Esq., auctioneer, the premises directed by said judgment to be sold, and therein described as follows:

All those seven lots of land in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at a point on the northerly side of One Hundred and Fortieth Street, distant one hundred and ninety-five (195) feet westerly from the northwesterly corner of Fifth Avenue and One Hundred and Fortieth Street; running thence northerly and parallel with Fifth Avenue ninety-nine (99) feet eleven (11) inches, to the centre line of the block; thence westerly along said centre line of the block, and parallel with One Hundred and Fortieth Street one hundred and seventy-five (175) feet; thence southerly and parallel with Fifth Avenue ninety-nine (99) feet eleven (11) inches, to the northerly line of One Hundred and Fortieth Street, and thence easterly along the northerly line of One Hundred and Fortieth Street one hundred and seventy-five (175) feet to the point or place of beginning.—Dated New York, February 26th, 1906.

OECHS, ANTHONY.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. Frank T. Fitzgerald, a Surrogate of the County of New York.—Notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against ANTHONY OECHS, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same, with vouchers thereof, to the subscriber, at his place of transacting business, at the office of John B. Pannes, No. 154 Nassau Street, in the City of New York, on or before the 12th day of July next.—Dated New York, the 4th day of January, 1906. CARL RATHEMACHER, Executor. JOHN B. PANNES, Attorney for Executor, 154 Nassau Street, Manhattan Borough, New York City.

RUINED HIS PAL'S GAME, BUT HE TOLD THE TRUTH

Young Robber Changed Heart on the Witness Stand.

PLEAS AND THREATS DID IT

"Be a Man for Once," Prosecutor Urged—And Before Murray Could Speak His Accomplice Told.

A sudden change of heart was experienced by John Murray while on the witness stand in the General Sessions yesterday, and instead of repeating the story he had already once told to clear his friend and accomplice, James Malloy, then on trial before Judge Cowing on a charge of robbery in the first degree, he announced suddenly that he would tell the truth. This so disconcerted Malloy that he leaped to his feet, regardless of the nudgings of his lawyer, and asked permission then and there to change his previous plea of not guilty to one of "guilty."

"The game's up," he remarked disgustedly. "What's the use of buckin' any longer?"

This unexpected turn in the proceedings was brought about by the clever way in which Assistant District Attorney Garvan, while cross-examining Murray, worked simultaneously on the fear of the witness and on whatever of manhood there might be in him.

Murray and Malloy, both in their twenties, and hailing from the Hell's Kitchen district on the west side, were indicted jointly for entering the jewelry store of Israel Routh at 415 Eighth Avenue and carrying off a tray of precious stones at the point of a revolver. The robbery was exceptionally daring. It was at 6 P. M. when the avenue was crowded. According to the story told by Routh on the stand yesterday, Murray held a pistol at his head while Malloy selected and pocketed the booty. When the men were arrested later the stolen gems were found in Murray's room.

On their arraignment before Judge O'Sullivan Murray pleaded guilty at once and was remanded for sentence. Malloy, who thought he had a fighting chance, was put on trial. He went on the stand in his own behalf yesterday and said that he was at home eating dinner at the time the robbery was committed. Two of his sisters corroborated his story under oath. Then, to clinch matters, he had his lawyer put Murray on the stand, too, and Murray faithfully denied that Malloy was with him when the crime was committed. After belaboring the witness with questions for a while, Mr. Garvan exclaimed:

"See here, Murray, you have a long term of imprisonment staring you in the face. Take my advice and be a man for once. Tell the truth to the jury—it will be better for you in every way. For I promise you that a long sentence will be yours if you perjure yourself now."

Murray sulked for a while with knitted brows. It was clear that his brain was turning over a problem difficult to him. Then he turned to the white-haired, kindly Judge beside him and said in a tone at once sullen and appealing:

"I don't want to tell."

"Oh, yes," rejoined Judge Cowing; "if you have anything to tell, tell it now. You will be better off for it."

"All right," sighed the witness almost inaudibly, and turned his face once more toward the prosecuting attorney. Before he could speak Malloy was on his feet, telling the court that he gave in to the inevitable. He will be sentenced to-day by Judge Cowing.

BUNAU-VARILLA SAILS.

Says Canal Advisers Have Remedied Their Error—No Word for Parsons.

Philippe Bunau-Varilla, the French engineer and Panama Canal expert, with his family sailed for France on La Loraine yesterday morning.

"Like every other enterprise, the canal will be a success or failure, as the line of least resistance is adopted or neglected," said M. Bunau-Varilla. "I have already shown where that line of least resistance is, how it will surely lead to the earliest possible opening of traffic and later to the most perfect success. This line of least resistance has been ignored by the consulting engineers, but they have now seen their mistake, and have drawn the line and will follow it."

Asked his opinion of William Barclay Parsons's testimony before the Senate Committee as to the impracticability of a lock canal, he replied that he could not discuss individuals.

FUR DEALERS COMPLAIN.

Say Health Department Orders Would Put Them Out of Business.

Health Commissioner Darlington has served notice on the dealers in raw furs in the downtown business district that they must ventilate their work rooms from the top or stop dealing in what is technically known as "green" furs, or pelts bearing flesh.

In the Jefferson Market Court next Wednesday morning there will be a hearing in the cases of J. Struck & Co. of 189 Mercer Street, the Belt Butler Company of 140 Greene Street, Kann & Co. of 50 East Tenth Street, Lowell, Lamb & Co. of 52 East Tenth Street, the Marquis Fur Company of 151 Mercer Street, W. H. Fleet of 52 East Thirteenth Street, Leopold Gassner of 20 East Tenth Street, Samuel Sachs & Co. of 53 East Tenth Street, the Struck-Chaitin Company of 34 East Tenth Street, and the American Raw Fur Company of 63 East Eleventh Street, all of whom were summoned to court to answer charges of creating a nuisance by spreading an objectionable odor.

When the furs reach the dealers they are scraped and the flesh from the pelts thrown into tubs and later carted off by buyers of grease and oil. The raw fur dealers say that they are being persecuted by officers of the Health Department, and that unless the department stops action they will go out of business. They say they have $10,000,000 invested in their business; that their trade amounts to $2,000,000 a year, and that it is impossible to get the pelts into New York in a clean condition, because the shippers in the woods haven't the facilities with which to do the work. As they have put the case up to Dr. Darlington, they must be allowed to proceed as they have been doing since the days of the Knickerbockers or must remove from the city.

Dr. Darlington said yesterday that the department wants the fur dealeds to abide by the law and provide efficient ventilating facilities to carry odors from their cleaning plants out through the roofs. He declared that when complaint was recently made of the stench coming from the plants of the dealers, an Inspector found conditions warranting proceedings. Dr. Darlington advised the dealers to provide the necessary ventilation and then apply for a permit to do business, as the law requires.

"They say we're going to put them out of business, do they?" said Dr. Darlington. "I serve notice upon them that the department will not stop at anything where the law is being violated. The fur dealers have an alternative offered them. It is easy to accept. They must comply with the law."

ELLISON TO WATCH METERS.

Reduces Power of Borough Water Registers—Summons McGuire To-day.

As a result of the water meter scandals Commissioner Ellison of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity has taken over the supervision and control of meter installations in all boroughs, curtailing the powers of the Water Register's Bureau in each borough. His order to the Borough Water Registers asks them to plan as many water districts as they have Inspectors, that he may assign an Inspector to each district and hold him personally responsible.

In addition, Commissioner Ellison has summoned Water Register William R. McGuire of Brooklyn to appear before him to-day and explain why so many important buildings in the vicinity of the Water Register's office in that borough are without meters. Commissioner Ellison believes that McGuire has been negligent. His removal is expected after the interview to-day. The Commissioner yesterday issued the following statement:

"The plan will enable me to put a force of Inspectors into any district in which I may feel that proper work is not being done; then, if I find my suspicions verified, I will have before me the man responsible for the conditions that I find. I shall reserve to myself alone the power of assignment and transfer, as I now have the power of removal. Under the present system it has been impossible to fix the responsibility on any Inspector for failure to find properties which ought to be metered or perform other duties incidental to his office."

CEMETERY BOARD ATTACKED.

Trustees Accused of Neglect—$200,000 Interest Paid on $87,000 Debt.

To nominate Trustees of the Lutheran Cemetery Corporation in opposition to the present board, lot owners in that cemetery at Middle Ground, L. I., have been called to attend a meeting of the Lutheran Cemetery Lot Owners' Association on Friday evening in the Teutonia Assembly Rooms, at Third Avenue and Sixteenth Street. The election of Trustees takes place at the annual meeting of the corporation in its office at the cemetery.

The present Trustees are Fred W. Geisenheim of Sea Cliff, L. I.; Jacob A. Geisenheim of 68 William Street, Manhattan; F. W. Hunter of 68 William Street, Manhattan; M. H. Getty, who has an office at the Grand Central Station, and Jacob F. Miller of 120 Broadway. These five Trustees, it is contended, are sons or close friends of the Geisenheim family, which, it is asserted, has had the control of the cemetery for more than fifty years. The cemetery corporation owes the Geisenheim estate $87,500, the debt having been incurred in 1871. The interest was at 7 per cent., and in the thirty-four years since 1871, it is asserted, the cemetery has paid $200,000 in interest and still owes the original $87,500.

The notice of the lot owners' meeting asserts that the corporation, under the present Trustees, has neglected the roads, paths, and highways of the cemetery, and says that the board will be asked "how and for what purpose the immense sums of money that they have realized from the sale of lots have been expended."

BROWNE ACCUSED AGAIN.

More Charges of Trickery Against the Lawyer on Trial for Forgery.

H. Huffman Browne was accused of another piece of trickery by Assistant District Attorney Train, in General Sessions yesterday, in the wind-up of the accused lawyer's trial for forgery.

Browne, whose present difficulties grew out of his alleged confiscation of the large Peterson estate in Inwood by means of a series of petitions, affidavits, and deeds, was made to admit on the stand that he acted as attorney for Mrs. Sarah E. Smith, an aged woman living at Ridgewood, N. J. Mr. Train then produced deeds and other documents showing that Browne sold $20,000 worth of the property belonging to Mrs. Smith without her knowledge. When she found it out she retained another lawyer, who forced Browne to restore about $15,000. But the other $5,000 has not yet been accounted for, according to Mr. Train. Browne was not prosecuted, Mr. Train said, because Mrs. Smith pitied his family.

Another illegal transaction which Mr. Train accused Browne of yesterday was the production by the lawyer of a third heir to the estate of the late Ebbe and Mary E. Peterson in the person of one Wilson. This happened before Browne, according to the evidence given in court, began his extensive operations with the estate by bringing out two Boston men as heirs. By placing a bond signed by "Samuel House" and "William R. Hubert" in the hands of the City Chamberlain, Browne, according to what Mr. Train told the jury yesterday, got that official to surrender to him $6,000 of the money belonging to the estate. The contention of Mr. Train is that neither Wilson nor the two securities ever existed, but that all three names were fictitious and stood for Browne himself.

The case will go to the jury to-day.

MISREAD SIGNAL SENT ELEVEN MEN TO DEATH

Saving of the 11 Others from the Steamer British King.

RESCUED CHEER RESCUERS

Mannheim's Skipper Brings In Survivors His Men Took from Swamping Freighter—Heard Cries as She Sank in the Night.

A tug steamed alongside the German tank steamer Mannheim, anchored off Stapleton, S. I., early yesterday afternoon, and took off eleven men, all of them survivors of the British freighter British King, which sank in midocean last Sunday. Eighteen others of the British King's complement, together with Capt. O'Hagen's body, were landed at Boston on Wednesday by the Bostonian. Eleven were drowned.

Just before the sailors left the Mannheim they gathered around Capt. Schau and told him that as long as they lived they would remember him as the man most responsible for their rescue from what looked like certain death. As the tug steamed away they lined up on the deck, and, lifting their hats, gave three cheers for the veteran seaman who had directed their rescue.

After they had gone Capt. Schau told how he did it.

"On Saturday," he said, "we sighted the British King. She was flying the international code signal meaning 'Help; please stay with me, I am sinking.' I immediately replied: 'I will not leave you,' and to this the British King replied: 'Damage may be repaired in six hours.'

"This last signal did not tally at all with the first one, and I asked if it was necessary for me to wait very long, and to this the liner answered, 'Yes.'

"As long as I live I shall thank God that I did stay, and my only regret is that I was not able to save all the poor fellows on the doomed ship. If it had not been for a wrong interpretation of one of my signals I still believe it would have been possible to save everybody.

"In some way Capt. O'Hagen of the British King thought I meant 'Stay on board' when I signaled 'Stop your engines.' As a result of this he kept his engines going, and it was impossible for us to put a lifeboat alongside when the ship was under way.

"Under this interpretation, Capt. O'Hagen, thinking that I was mean enough to think of leaving him, sent back this answer: 'Will you stay with me until to-morrow morning?' I would have stayed a month, if necessary.

"When night came, bad weather came with it, and after midnight there were several heavy squalls and a hailstorm or two. By 4 o'clock Sunday morning a regular hurricane was blowing. You will never know what a load was lifted from my heart when the sun came up and I saw that the freighter was still afloat. The British King was rolling and pitching in the giant seas that were running, and, realizing how desperate was her condition, I signaled that I was coming and steamed around to windward of her, in order to afford her shelter.

"Half an hour later the Bostonian was sighted, and I signaled her to come and help me, which she immediately did. When the Bostonian got in hailing distance the British King signaled that she was waterlogged. The Bostonian signaled that she would stand by.

"Then we both stood by, and it was while waiting for the final signal which I knew was to announce the end of the British King that we got our crews ready to effect the rescue.

"These preparations were under way when from the masthead of the British King this signal went up:

"'Am sinking; send lifeboats.'

"We answered that we were coming, and the next moment up went the last signal that was to ever fly from the masthead of the British King. It was to ask us if we had a doctor, and I afterward learned it was for poor Capt. O'Hagen, who had broken his leg.

"I immediately called for volunteers to man the lifeboat, and I am proud to say that every man on my ship stepped forward. I selected William Jager, my third officer, and Seamen Rapraeger, Karber, Griber, and Christansen, and a moment later they were off. They had to row a quarter of a mile, and had just pulled off when a big wave swept over the boat, broke two of the oars, and almost threw everybody into the sea. Those five men never stopped a moment, but kept right on, and after an hour of hard work got to the lee side of the British King.

"It was absolutely impossible, however, to keep the lifeboat alongside the sinking ship, and Jager and his men had almost despaired of the job when a sailor with a rope tied around his waist jumped into the sea. He hoped to get the rope aboard the lifeboat and thus establish communication between the sinking ship and Jager's boat. The rope broke before he got to the boat, though, and if it had not been for a big wave that pitched the sailor to the boat he probably would have been lost. The next minute another sailor tried to get a rope on board, but failed. A third was successful, and by means of the rope eleven sailors in all got into the lifeboat.

"It was nearly 6 o'clock when the lifeboat got back, and I never expect to see men so nearly exhausted as were Jager and his men. It was then dark and absolutely impossible to make another trip to the British King. That night I could see the lights of the sinking ship, and I prayed that she might stay afloat until daylight.

"About 11:30 the lights suddenly went out and the vessel sank. I could hear the cries for help, the firing of revolvers, and the bellowing of the cattle as the ship disappeared. They were the most agonizing sounds I ever heard. None of the men who went down was ever seen again."

The eighteen members of the crew who were rescued by the Bostonian arrived in New York yesterday morning, and sailed for Antwerp on the British Empire at 10 A. M.

JEWELS STOLEN IN HOTEL.

Mrs. S. B. Whitlock Loses Gems Worth $800 in the Martinique.

Mrs. S. B. Whitlock, wife of a glass manufacturer with offices at 253 Broadway, complained at the Tenderloin station yesterday that her apartments in the Hotel Martinique, Thirty-third Street and Broadway, had been entered and robbed of jewelry worth $800.

Mrs. Whitlock's maid produced a ring which she said she had picked up from the floor. The detectives wished to question her further, but Mrs. Whitlock said she would allow no suspicion to attach to the girl, who had been long in her service. No arrest has been made.

SPRIGGS IS REINDICTED.

Some Talk of a Confession That Will Concern the Police.

The Tenderloin negro Robert H. Spriggs was reindicted yesterday by the Grand Jury for abduction, assault, and keeping a disorderly resort as a second offense. Indictments for abduction and keeping a disorderly resort, also as a second offense, were returned against his partner, Sallie Bennett, at the same time. Both were arraigned before Judge O'Sullivan, in General Sessions, yesterday, and pleaded not guilty. They will be put on trial before Judge Cowing next Tuesday. So far they have made no attempt to obtain bail, but if they do try, District Attorney Jerome will demand gilt-edged security.

There was some talk heard yesterday about a confession from Spriggs. That would mean that the negro is prepared to reveal by what means he managed to escape police interference for years, and how, when the police finally were forced to make a bluff at raiding him, he was able to escape time and again by virtue of the weak memory of the detectives who testified against him. It is understood that Mr. Jerome would rather get at the offenders on the force than see Spriggs sent away for the rest of his life.

Complete immunity cannot be bought by Spriggs under any circumstances. The crimes laid at his door are too serious to permit such a bargain. But he might obtain a reduction of punishment.

Mabel Holmes, a good-looking white girl of 22, who is an important witness against Spriggs and the Bennett woman, was taken into General Sessions yesterday and committed to the House of Detention at the request of Mr. Jerome. She is said to have been kept prisoner in one of the Bennett woman's houses for several months after having been lured there. One day, while the Bennett woman was away, the girl and another inmate escaped by attracting the attention of some persons outside and getting them to break open the door.

The traffic in white women by negroes has received a hard blow, it was learned yesterday, by the criminal proceedings instituted by Mr. Jerome against Spriggs and the Bennett woman. Scores of houses notorious for years have been closed in the last few days. Two furniture vans took away the furniture of one of the worst of this kind in the Tenderloin yesterday.

MORE TENDERLOIN CHANGES.

26 Policemen Transferred—Practically a New Squad There Now.

Commissioner Bingham continued his cleaning of the Tenderloin Station yesterday. He transferred twenty-seven more patrolmen to other precincts. Since the Tenderloin several weeks ago got Capt. Hodgins, who is just now Acting Inspector, in place of Inspector Schmittberger, there has come to the precinct practically an entire new set of plain clothes men, an entire new set of Sergeants, two new matrons, and more than 100 new patrolmen.

There was a rumor a week or so ago, when Capt. Hodgins first came up from Mercer Street, that Commissioner Bingham would make over the Tenderloin force entirely. He has almost done it already. There is not much left of the veteran White Light force now.

Capt. Hodgins said last night that the places of the twenty-seven men transferred would be taken by young policemen from Harlem stations, the idea being to bring in men who were fresh to the White Light district. Four new plain clothes men also figure in the sweeping change in the precinct.

It has been customary heretofore for a new Captain to bring in eight or ten plain clothes men, one or two trusty Sergeants, and a Roundsman or so. But rarely if ever before has the coming of a Captain meant new matrons, new doormen, and new patrolmen.

Sixteen patrolmen of the harbor squad were temporarily assigned yesterday to the Tenement House Department, and thirteen court squad men were remanded to patrol duty. Every court in the city lost one man. No provision has been made to fill their places.

ARMORY PRICE GOING UP.

The Longer the City Waits the Higher It Will Cost.

At a special meeting of the Armory Board yesterday the contract for the addition to the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, in Brooklyn, was awarded to Bedoni & Gherardi. Their bid was $108,900, which, with the architect's fees, will bring the total cost to $114,340. As the appropriation was for only $100,000, the formal award cannot be made until after the Board of Estimate appropriates the rest.

Col. Austen told the board yesterday that the longer the city waits the more expensive the work will become, as the price of labor and of materials is increasing all the time. He said that the cost of structural ironwork had more than doubled since the extension was authorized a year ago.

THE TOMBS OVERCROWDED.

Judges to Sentence Seventy-six Prisoners To-day to Relieve Warden Flynn.

"Black Friday" is the name usually given to the sixth day of the week in the Criminal Courts Building. It is sentence day as a rule, and from a dozen to fifty culprits have punishment meted out to them.

But in the annals of the building there never was such a sentence day as will be held to-day. Seventy-six persons, who have been convicted or pleaded guilty, will be brought before six Judges sitting in the four parts of General Sessions and in the Criminal Branch, Supreme Court. The majority will have been transferred to some penal or corrective institution before nightfall.

This wholesale cleaning up was decided on by the judges to relieve the crowded condition of the Tombs. A wail from Warden Flynn reached them yesterday. The place was full, he told them, and new prisoners were arriving hourly. There had been several cases of lodging two prisoners in the same cell over night.

The capacity of the prison is 540 men and women prisoners. It held 504 yesterday morning. The daily average of new arrivals is fifty, some of whom are sent to stay for some time.

Of the prisoners yesterday 257 men and 18 women were awaiting action by the Judges of General Sessions. Thirty-one persons were awaiting trial on the charge of murder.

Berthe Claiche, who has pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the first degree, for killing Emile Gendron, will not be sentenced until March 23, and perhaps not then.

NO POLITICS, SAYS WILLCOX.

Not in His Office Anyhow, Declares the Postmaster.

Postmaster William R. Willcox addressed an audience last night at the People's Institute, 318 East Fifteenth Street, on "The Postal Service, Here and Abroad." After describing in detail much of the inner workings of the office, Mr. Willcox was asked if he thought the Postal Service would ever be free from political control.

That the service was under political domination, the Postmaster denied with much vigor.

"If you will show me any politics in the office I have the honor to supervise," replied Mr. Willcox, "I will show you a white crow."

STERILIZED BETTING TO RULE RACE TRACKS

Dr. Slicer and The Jockey Club Stewards Agree.

BOOKMAKERS' SLATES TO GO

Why Conference of Religion Won't Support Cassidy Bill, Which Comstock Now Says He Drew.

Bettors who visit the tracks under the jurisdiction of The Jockey Club this season will find sterilized betting there as the result of the agreement entered into between the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer of All Souls' Unitarian Church, representing the Legislative Committee of the State Conference of Religion, and the Board of Stewards of the organization which governs racing in the East.

The most important change agreed upon provides for the elimination of the bookmaker's slate. No odds will be posted in the betting ring, and the man who desires to make a wager will be obliged to rely upon the verbal quotations of the bookmakers.

The absence of odds that one may read as he runs is expected to have a twofold effect. Bookmakers will not be compelled to quote prices to would-be customers who are apparently undesirable, and the poolrooms will be hampered in the work of obtaining prices. The Jockey Club also undertakes to discourage the placing of sensational bets.

Bookmakers will also be required to refuse bets offered by minors. The rule which does away with the posting of odds will prevent any possibility of complications on this score, as the quoting of odds will be optional with them. In consideration of these concessions, the State Conference of Religion, to use the language of Dr. Slicer, "declines to advocate the passage of the Cassidy-Lansing bill," now pending before the Assembly.

Joseph S. Auerbach, counsel for The Jockey Club, goes further. He declared at the hearing on the bill before the Joint Committee on Codes, that Dr. Slicer and the religious interests for which he stands are opposed to the measure on the ground that vicious interests are behind it.

The existence of an alliance between Church and Jockey Club was proclaimed by Wilbur F. Crafts, Superintendent of the International Reform Bureau of Washington, when he passed through New York Thursday on his way home after attending the hearing in Albany.

"The race track people have signed a contract with Dr. Slicer," he said, "which provides for the amendment of racing methods of Jockey Club tracks. The amendments are inconsequential. The difference between conditions as they were last year and as they will be this is the difference between Tweedledum and Tweedledee."

Dr. Slicer did not attempt on Thursday to deny the existence of an agreement with The Jockey Club. He refused to go into details, however, and it was not until yesterday that he would give a hint of what had been accomplished in the way of sterilizing betting. Last night he was more communicative.

Dr. Slicer's Position.

"You may say for me," he declared, "that the understanding which has been reached with The Jockey Club will do much to minimize the evils of betting. Bookmakers will work at a greater disadvantage than they have ever done in the past, and betting by the immature and irresponsible will be impossible."

Followers of racing were greatly exercised yesterday over the situation. There were all manner of rumors afloat. One was to the effect that bookmakers would not be allowed to keep any memoranda of their operations. Another was that entries would be withheld until the racing commenced each day.

Dr. Slicer was asked pointblank if these two reports were true, and referred his questioner to Mr. Auerbach, The Jockey Club's lawyer. Mr. Auerbach declined to talk until he had conferred with August Belmont, Chairman of the Board of Stewards. It was not until late last evening that a high racing authority who was willing to tell just what had been agreed to by The Jockey Club could be found.

"It is absurd," he said, "to imagine that The Jockey Club would undertake to say to the bookmakers that they could keep no record of their bets. This would be, in effect, to render bookmaking impossible. The Jockey Club is in no position to say to any man that he cannot make personal memoranda. It is equally absurd to imagine that the passing of money at the track will be prohibited.

"The Jockey Club will do all in its power to render the making of wages inconspicuous. It agreed with Dr. Slicer to do away with the display of odds. It cannot prevent a bookmaker from laying a price against a horse, but it can prevent the posting of the price. The policy of discouraging plungers will be more rigidly pursued this year than ever before, and betting by minors will not be allowed. So far as I can see, the only conspicuous result of the agreement with Dr. Slicer is the abolition of the bookmaker's slate."

Dr. Slicer said last night that the agreement with The Jockey Club was reached last week. "It was passed upon by the Board of Stewards and myself," he explained, "at a time when August Belmont was out of the city. Upon Mr. Belmont's return the agreement was submitted to him and indorsed by him.

"I am satisfied that I performed a public service by securing the concessions which were made me from The Jockey

ROOSEVELT BREAKS RULE.

President Dines with Senator Lodge—Fears Desertion on Rate Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The fact that the President was entertained to-night at dinner by Senator and Mrs. Lodge has attracted attention. Under the hard and fast rules of official etiquette the President never accepts invitations to dine at a private table on an occasion which may be regarded as a social function.

The President has dined at the house of Commander Cowles, his brother-in-law, and yesterday was the guest of Representative and Mrs. Longworth, but these are, of course, family affairs and do not touch the rule at any point.

President McKinley held himself so strictly to the rule that he would never go to a dinner at the house of Senator Hanna, his bosom friend. Frequently he would slip over Sunday mornings to the Senator's house on Lafayette Square to partake of the delicious pancakes and corned beef hash that Hanna's colored "Auntie" used to make so well, but this was not a social function in any sense.

Why the President should accept an invitation to dine at the house of Senator Lodge is something that does not appear in the two lines given out officially at the White House announcing the affair. To those who are intent on the complications and entanglements that beset the President's policies in Congress it is a reasonable explanation that the President has become somewhat concerned at the evident disposition of Mr. Lodge of late to oppose the President in his effort to secure the passage of a rate bill.

The heat with which Lodge resented the observations of Senator Rayner on Wednesday about railroad Senators would seem to indicate that Lodge is not entirely at ease on account of the conflict between his real position on the rate question and his personal and party obligations to the occupant of the White House.

The President has been not a little bothered by the double-headed speech of the Massachusetts Senator on the rate problem, in which he argued ingeniously and forcibly against all attempts at control of the railroads, and then announced hopelessly that he should vote for the bill.

It is believed that the relations between Roosevelt and Lodge have become so strained that visible evidence of friendliness such as a dinner at the Senator's became a necessity.

ROBERT B. ROOSEVELT ILL.

He Sends a Plan for a 200-Room Hudson Statue to His Commission.

Robert B. Roosevelt, uncle of the President, is ill at his home, 57 Fifth Avenue. Mr. Roosevelt's condition became known yesterday afternoon, when members of the Hudson-Fulton Commission, of which Gen. Stewart L. Woodford is President, met informally at Mr. Roosevelt's invitation to discuss plans for the celebration on Sept. 12, 1909, of the anniversaries of the discovery of the Hudson River, in 1609, and of Robert Fulton's exploits with the steamboat Claremont, in 1809.

It was said that Mr. Roosevelt was seized yesterday afternoon with some rheumatic complaint in the legs, the exact nature of which physicians could not diagnose. Mr. Roosevelt is kept to his rooms. His doctors say that the outcome of his illness is uncertain, as Mr. Roosevelt is 76 years old and hasn't much strength.

At yesterday's meeting Gen. James Grant Wilson, for Mr. Roosevelt, offered a project as an incident to the proposed celebration, for the erection at the Battery of a 650-foot column and statue of Henry Hudson. Mr. Roosevelt's idea is to provide 200 rooms in the pillar of the statue, to be occupied by city employes as offices. Gen. Wilson offered drawings of the statue, but owing to the informal character of the meeting no action was taken.

E. E. Olcott said that the commission ought to urge the Bridge Commissioner to hurry work on the proposed Hudson-Fulton memorial bridge, to cost $2,750,000, which is to span the Harlem River from Inwood to Spuyten Duyvil. He said that $1,000,000 was available for the work, plans had been completed, and that the Mayor had signed the corporate stock, thus making the road clear to the beginning of actual labor.

Louis C. Raegener directed attention to the fact that the commission was not committed to the project, and that some of its members thought a better plan would be to have a permanent fair in New York. A general discussion followed, but no action was taken. Gen. Woodford said that the charter of the commission would be authorized by the Legislature before adjournment.

LAWYER BROWNE GUILTY.

Convicted of Forgery in Handling an Inwood Estate.

It took the jury seven minutes to return a verdict of guilty yesterday against H. Huffman Browne, the lawyer on trial on a charge of forgery before Judge Foster in General Sessions. The forgery was in connection with the fraudulent transfer of a part of the large estate in Inwood and Mount Hope left by Ebbe Peterson, a Norwegian, who was lost with his wife and only child on the Danish liner Geiser in 1888. The real heirs never have received the slightest portion of the estate.

Browne is accused of having got possession of it by a series of documentary manipulations in which he used fictitious names. The trial was nearly over when he insisted on addressing the jury.

"I am a guiltless man," he declared. "I never wronged a person in my life. If anybody is at fault in this matter it is the law, not I."

Assistant District Attorney Train had an unused witness at his disposal and put him on the stand at once. He was John J. Kunze of 831 Union Street, Brooklyn.

"My father and I have worked twenty-seven years making brooms," he said on the stand. "We have worked from 5 o'clock one morning till 1 o'clock the next, often seven days a week. We saved up about $2,500 to protect my father's old age. This man Browne got hold of us. We gave all our savings for some of this property that was not his at all. Now we haven't a cent."

Judge Foster remanded Browne until next Friday for sentence. There is another indictment for forgery pending.

PRESIDENT FOR HUGHES, ODELL MAY DRAFT FISH

Insurance Reformers Picked for Gubernatorial Candidates.

E. H. HARRIMAN'S PART IN IT

Would Like to Eliminate Fish from Financial Fields—Slatemakers Busy at Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Charles E. Hughes as the Republican candidate for Governor of New York is understood to be the plan of President Roosevelt, Secretary Root, and Gov. Higgins, the three heads of the Republican organization. Chairman Odell, it is reported, will meet the attack by endeavoring to nominate Stuyvesant Fish.

The President, who is the actual leader of the organization, is aware of the dangerous situation which confronts the party in his State this year, and desires to meet any attack based on the revelations concerning the insurance lobby by nominating some one who in the public mind stands identified with opposition to that lobby.

Conferences without number have been going on here, but the nomination of Hughes was not agreed on until a conference held about two weeks ago, when the name of Representative Vreeland was first broached for State Chairman.

Odell has picked out Fish because no one stands so high as he, except Hughes himself, as an insurance reformer. To beat Hughes he would have to have a man who had Hughes's titles to popular approval on the chief issue of the day. At the same time, those of the President's friends who have learned of Odell's contemplated move take a more cynical view of the choice. They point out that to boom Fish for Governor would be to withdraw him from his present activities in the insurance situation and render him powerless to carry on his work. It is recalled that Odell attempted this very thing last year with Hughes, and was foiled by the investigator's refusing the nomination for Mayor.

Edward H. Harriman's is the name which always comes up here whenever any move is credited to Odell. That Harriman would like to get Fish out of both the insurance and railroad situations is not seriously doubted, and his influence with Odell is believed to be not less strong than it was when he called Odell off from his warfare on Senator Depew and compelled the Chairman to return to the Senate a man whom he had been vigorously fighting, after Senator Platt's entire powerlessness to help his colleague had been proved.

In picking out a candidate, Mr. Odell has been governed not only by a desire to name a man possessing the same qualifications as Mr. Hughes, but by a desire to make a nomination not too pleasing to the President.

Mr. Fish was one of the first and most outspoken critics of the President's railroad rate policy. Before that policy had been very thoroughly developed, Mr. Fish got into an impromptu joint debate over it with Secretary Taft at a dinner here. Mr. Taft appeared as the spokesman of the Administration on the rate question and Mr. Fish as its critic. The whole affair was unpremeditated. Both men got very warm, and this was the first public definition of the President's policy.

Mr. Fish has ever since remained identified with that speech in the minds of public men here, however it may have faded from memory in New York, and Mr. Odell probably is very well aware that the nomination of Fish for Governor after that event would be interpreted by both Democrats and Republicans in the West as an abandonment of the President's policy by his own State, whatever the platform adopted might say. The nomination of Mr. Fish would be taking up the President's glove with a vengeance.

The Administration men here do not minimize the probable popularity of such a name as Mr. Fish's, in view of what he is doing now, and still more in view of what he is likely to do before the time for the convention approaches. They realize that Mr. Hughes's achievements are likely to fade somewhat from public view as time goes on, while Mr. Fish's will grow brighter.

They know, too, that the name of Fish is one to conjure with in New York State. The prospect of again having a member of the Fish family in the Governor's chair is likely to be alluring, for Hamilton Fish's fame has not become dimmer; and the part borne by his descendants and relatives in the public affairs of the State and Nation, from the service of Hamilton Fish, second, in the Speaker's chair at Albany to the death of Hamilton Fish, third, in Cuba, has not tended to make New York forget.

Mr. Fish's name is therefore viewed with respectful alarm by those who are quietly booming Hughes. There is, however, considerable confidence that he would not accept an Odell nomination. The position of an open opponent of the Roosevelt Administration is not one that is being sought by many men just now, and there is no doubt whatever that as the campaign approaches Mr. Roosevelt's hand in what is going on at Albany will be more and more disclosed.

This is the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitants that New York slate-making has been done openly at Washington. The President's conferences with New York Congressmen, and with such men as Timothy L. Woodruff, George W. Dunn, and William Barnes about the running of the organization have done hardly less to make the issue definite and plain than did his action in openly conferring with Gov. Higgins and Secretary Root on the question of beating Odell. Here in Washington, as much as in Albany, is the headquarters of the New York State machine, and this state of things is already so clearly defined that it will be exceedingly difficult for any man to oppose Gov. Higgins without appearing to be an open foe of the President, with all that that entails.

Yet no one feels certain that Fish would decline a nomination, or even decline to be a candidate. His first impulse might be to do so, but it is expected that any man who enters the Gubernatorial field this year will have clearly before his eyes the possibility that he will be the Republican Presidential candidate in 1908.

The Presidential field is already full of candidates, but not one of them has aroused anything like a popular response, and there is hardly any politician in Washington whose opinion is worth anything who does not scoff at the idea of Fairbanks, Foraker, or Shaw being nominated in 1908. The only name which has aroused any kind of response has been that of Taft, who is not a candidate.

A sweeping victory in New York, in view of the adverse conditions now confronting the Republicans there, and the prophecies of Democratic victory, would supply a candidate, and no doubt is entertained here that this bait will be dangled before Mr. Fish's eyes.

After all, Usher's the Scotch that made the highball famous.—Adv.

SENATOR CLARK'S PICTURE.

He Buys Diaz's "Dogs in the Forest" from Edward Brandus.

"Dogs in the Forest," a notable painting of the Barbizon School by N. V. Diaz, the French painter of forest glades, has been purchased at a private sale by Senator William A. Clark, who will add the picture to his fine collection of the Barbizon masters.

Senator Clark bought the picture from Edward Brandus, a Fifth Avenue art dealer. Mr. Brandus intended to include the "Dogs in the Forest" in his sale, just ended at the Waldorf-Astoria, but Senator Clark happened to spy the noted Barbizon picture, and speedily acquired it for his collection of paintings by the famous group of artists of the Forest of Fontainebleau.

The canvas was one of the "Hundred Masterpieces" shown in Paris a few years ago, and was highly admired and prized by connoisseurs and admirers of the Barbizon group of painters.

The price paid for the picture is said to be larger than any sum obtained at a single evening's sale of the Brandus collection.

THREE FIREMEN KILLED.

Nine Seriously Hurt While Camden's Old Armory Burns.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 16.—Three firemen were killed and nine others seriously injured to-night at a fire which destroyed the old Sixth Regiment Armory at Bridge and West Streets. The dead are George W. Shields, William Hillman, and William Jobes.

The fire started in the boiler room of the armory building, and quickly spread to all parts of the structure. About a dozen firemen were ordered into the burning building with a line of hose, and were making good progress in fighting the flames when they were warned by Fireman Harry Dease that the roof was giving way. Before the men could heed the warning the great roof fell, burying Dease and the others under it. Shields, Hillman, and Jobes were crushed to death, but the others managed to follow the line of hose, and escaped after most of them had been seriously cut and burned.

A general alarm was sounded and by hard effort the flames were kept from spreading from the armory, which was destroyed. Twenty houses surrounding the armory were scorched.

Fireman Charles Worthington was probably fatally injured while going to the fire.

THREATEN BOZZUFFI AGAIN.

Anonymous Letter Demanding $5,000 Sets the Police Hunting.

Detective Sergt. Petrosino is trying to find the author of a letter received last Sunday by John Bozzuffi of 339 East Sixty-second Street, father of Antonio Bozzuffi, who was kidnapped by Italians and held forty-eight hours for a ransom. The letter, bearing skull and crossbones, says:

"Do not think that your son escaped. We simply did not want to spill innocent blood. We want now the miserable sum of $5,000; otherwise great harm will fall upon your head."

The letter was written in Italian in "Black Hand" style, but there was no signature. Bozzuffi said he wasn't afraid of being harmed, but had turned the letter over to the police as an ordinary precaution. He is careful about his visitors, however, and will not admit a stranger to his house.

GAS MAN SAW ROCKEFELLER.

Perhaps a Subpoena Server Could, but It Wouldn't Do Any Good Now.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 16.—Although John D. Rockefeller is here he is safe from subpoena service as the process issued by the Supreme Court of Missouri is not valid in this State. Unless Attorney General Hadley should seek to have a commission appointed in New Jersey similar to that appointed in New York, Mr. Rockefeller is free to come and go anywhere in New Jersey.

Mr. Rockefeller is aware of this, but several of his employes say that he does not show himself because he is afraid of kidnappers. He has recently installed powerful searchlights at his home. The place is guarded by armed men at night, and it is said that they have instructions to shoot any intruder found lurking around the place after nightfall.

Mr. Rockefeller has been seen at his home twice this week. A Gas Meter Inspector met Mr. Rockefeller face to face yesterday as he was passing through a living room to reach the basement.

MRS. WALLACE'S ESTATE.

Its Value Estimated at $1,000,000—Three Church Bequests in Her Will.

The will of Mary C. Wallace, who died last week, leaving an estate valued at $1,000,000 or more, was filed yesterday. She leaves $10,000 as an endowment in memory of her sister, Margaret F. J. Wallace, to Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church. To Grace Protestant Episcopal Church of Port Jervis $5,000 is bequeathed as the Margaret C. Wallace endowment fund, the income to be paid to the rector in addition to his salary. The Evangelical Lutheran Reformed Home of Germantown, Penn., gets $2,000.

The executor of the estate, James L. Flines of Spring Lake, N. Y., receives $100,000. A sister, the wife of Dr. John L. Adams of 38 East Fifty-first Street, is named as executrix. Mrs. Adams, her son, Francis L., and Helen W. Swan, wife of Charles T. Swan, another sister, get the bulk of the estate.

DOCTOR ACCUSED OF MURDER.

Herman Feist of Nashville Held for Death of Mrs. Mangrum.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 16.—Dr. Herman Feist, a well-known physician of this place, was arrested here to-day, charged with the murder of Mrs. Rosa Mangrum, whose body was found in the Ohio at Cairo, Ill., about six weeks ago.

Mrs. Mangrum and her husband had had domestic difficulties, and last December Mrs. Mangrum, who was the possessor of considerable money in her name, said she would visit relatives in St. Louis. She started ostensibly for that place, but no one has been found up to this time who saw her leave Nashville. Her trunk, which was checked to St. Louis, was found in the baggage room of a railroad in Chicago, and detectives from that city were at once enlisted to aid the men from St. Louis and the local police. Mr. Mangrum had been searching for his wife ever since her relatives replied from St. Louis that she had not arrived there.

Dr. Feist is said to have borrowed money from Mangrum, and it is asserted by those interested in his arrest that he was seen with Mrs. Mangrum early in the evening on which she disappeared. The warrant charges Dr. Feist with robbery and murder.

JAPAN VOTES TO BUY ALL HER RAILWAYS

Harriman's Hand Seen in Her Nationalization of Lines.

SCHIFF, MAYBE, TO FINANCE IT

Since Union Pacific's Head Visited Japan, Tokio Rumor Has Laid Her $250,000,000 Project to Him.

TOKIO, March 16.—The Railway Nationalization bill passed the House of Representatives to-day without amendment by a vote of 243 to 109.

It is expected that the bill for the purchase of the Söul—Fu-San Railway will also pass.

The cost of the purchase of the home railways is estimated at $250,000,000. The Minister of Finance is confident that the purchase can be effected within five years without disturbing the market.

Reports have been current in Tokio, according to recent dispatches, that the scheme for the nationalization of the Japanese railways was suggested by E. H. Harriman, or, at all events, that he had been consulted about the plan for thier nationalization, and had promised aid in financing the project. This immediately suggests that the visit of Jacob H. Schiff to Japan is closely connected with the scheme for the nationalization of the Japanese railways.

The relations existing between Mr. Harriman and Mr. Schiff naturally render it probable that the financial aid said to have been promised to the Japanese Government by Mr. Harriman should be extended through Mr. Schiff. Moreover, the fact that Mr. Schiff's firm have been the financial agents of the Japanese Government in this country since the outbreak of the recent war between Russia and Japan, makes it almost certain that in any financing to be undertaken abroad by Japan, in connection with the purchase of the Japanese railways, Mr. Schiff would be concerned.

Alfred S. Heidelbach of Paris, head of the New York house of Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co., was to have accompanied Mr. Schiff to Japan. It is supposed that he was also to have taken some part in the proposed financing. But when Mr. Heidelbach arrived at San Francisco, and was about to sail for Japan with Mr. Schiff, he was recalled to Paris by cable because of the serious illness of a relative. Henry R. Ickelheimer of the same firm was called to Paris at the same time.

Mr. Heidelbach reached New York about the time Mr. Ickelheimer arrived in Paris. He was informed here that his return to Paris was not necessary, as his relative had recovered. Mr. Heidelbach remained in New York, as it was then too late to rejoin the Schiff party.

While Mr. Harriman was in Japan he had frequent and extended conferences with high Japanese officials. At these conferences it is now supposed the question of railway nationalization was one of the chief topics discussed. One outcome of Mr. Harriman's visit to Japan was an offer by the Japanese Government to purchase the trans-Pacific liners of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, of which Mr. Harriman is President.

Some Japanese politicians have bitterly opposed the plan to buy the railways. Minister of Foreign Affairs Kato, though he approved the general scheme, objected to the methods proposed in the bill as partaking of force and resigned in consequence. Marquis Saionji, the Premier, took the vacant portfolio.

According to the general plan the State is to purchase all private railways at a fixed rate—namely, twenty times the average profits of the three years preceding the war, the Treasury paying by means of 5 per cent. bonds, which the companies will divide among the shareholders. The greatest care will be exercised to carry out the measure slowly and prudently in order to avoid affecting the markets.

A special account will be created, and all net revenues from the railways will be applied in payment of interest and amortization charges, whereby the total amount of the bonds will be redeemed within forty-five years. After the bonds have been redeemed the annual revenue accruing to the State will be $27,500,000.

It is believed that the plan will promote industry by economizing railway expenses and improving traffic facilities, though the purchase is to be made chiefly for strategical reasons.

Mr. Harriman had gone to bed last night when an attempt was made to see him about the project.

Mr. Uchida, the Japanese Consul General, was asked by a TIMES reporter late last night if he had heard that Messrs. Harriman and Schiff were concerned in his country's railway nationalization project.

"Really," said Mr. Uchida diplomatically, rubbing his eyes, "I am too sleepy to talk about that. Come to-morrow."

BLISS PERRY FOR HARVARD.

Appointed Professor of English Literature—New School of Sciences.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 16.—It is announced that Bliss Perry, editor of The Atlantic Monthly, has been appointed Professor of English Literature at Harvard. He will occupy a chair held by George Ticknor, Longfellow, and Lowell, and vacant since the retirement of the last named, in 1866. The following statement was given out by President Eliot's secretary to-day:

"This professorship of English Literature replaces and is in addition to the professorship of Belles Lettres, hitherto attached to the Smith Professorship of the French and Spanish Languages. The previous incumbents of the combined professorship here have been George Ticknor, from 1811 to 1835; Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, from 1836 to 1854, and James Russell Lowell, from 1855 to 1866."

As the first step in the utilization of the McKay millions left to Harvard for the advancement of the study of applied sciences, the governing bodies of Harvard have established a Graduate School of Applied Sciences and a new general degree of Bachelor of Sciences. For admission to the new school, a Bachelor's degree will be required. The course of study will be ordinarily two years.

Degrees in applied science from Harvard will in future be of the same standard as degrees from the Harvard law, medical, and divinity schools.

PARKER VOTE VERY SMALL.

The ex-Judge Ran Last in the Manhattan Club's Election of Governors.

It came out last night that at the election held Thursday night at the Manhattan Club to fill the vacancies on the Board of Governors ex-Judge Alton B. Parker, in a list of five candidates, polled the smallest number of votes. Had it not been for the fact that there were five vacancies to fill, Judge Parker would not have been elected. With him on the ticket were Louis J. Conlan, Sylvester J. O'Sullivan, D. B. Gilbert, and Charles W. Dayton.

The incident has caused much comment at the club, of which Judge Parker has been a member since he came to live in this city, a year and a half ago.

ROUMANIAN KING VERY ILL.

May Die at Any Moment and Cannot Live Many Months.

LONDON, Saturday, March 17.—Dispatches received here report the serious illness of King Charles of Roumania, who is suffering from a brain affection following upon an arterial disease.

The Daily Telegraph says that private telegrams have reached London to the effect that the death of the King is possible at any moment and that, in any case, his life cannot be prolonged for more than a few months, but that nevertheless the King intends to visit Lugano, Switzerland.

GERMANS NUMBER 60,605,183.

Returns of Census Taken in December—Women Outnumber Men.

BERLIN, March 16.—The official returns of the census taken last Dec. 1 show a population of 60,605,183 in Germany, against 56,367,178 in 1900.

The women outnumber the men by 868,991, but the Government statisticians estimate that if the males make the same rate of increase as shown by the last four censuses they will outnumber the females in 1945.

ENGAGE IAN MACLAREN.

Western Theological Seminary and Uniontown Church to Employ Him.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 16.—Ian Maclaren, (the Rev. John Watson,) author of "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush," will be a resident of Pittsburg next year. He has been engaged as Lecturer Extraordinary for the Western Theological Seminary and will deliver a course of lectures there.

He will also act as stated supply for the First Presbyterian Church of Uniontown. The church has been vacant since the resignation of the Rev. Asa Millholland a year ago. It is one of the wealthiest churches in this part of the State.

COAL INQUIRY NEXT WEEK.

Commerce Commission Will Start in West Virginia Field First.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Under the Tillman resolution the Inter-State Commerce Commission is preparing to investigate the coal situation in West Virginia. The investigation will be started early next week. Special agents have been assigned to the work and have received their instructions, and the commission is busy planning its itinerary and programme.

RAILROADS STORING COAL.

Reported They Have Confiscated Some Supplies—Steel Mills Stocking Up.

PITTSBURG, March 16.—While there is no certainty that a strike of bituminous coal miners will be ordered, the railroad companies and large iron and steel interests are taking no chances. It was reported to-day that the railroads have begun to confiscate coal en route along different lines to be held in case of an emergency.

While the railroads have a legal right to confiscate coal, on paying for it, this practice has been resorted to only to provide for immediate requirements.

It developed to-day that the United States Steel Corporation is a heavy buyer of coal, and is storing fuel in large quantities at all of its plants where room can be found. The Carnegie Steel Company has a sixty-days supply.

OHIO SENATE REPUBLICAN.

Was Democratic Till Yesterday, When Mr. Lamb Switched.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 16.—The balance of power in the Senate is held by Senator Lamb of Toledo, who, elected as an Independent, has been voting with the Democrats. He to-day deserted them, and the Senate therefore becomes Republican.

Senator Lamb, as the result of the passage of the Salary bill, made a bitter attack on Senator Williams, the Democratic floor leader. He said:

"I charge you with double dealing. You have not been fair. I am done with you. This is the finish, and if you were a candidate to-day for a seat in the Senate from my district I would not vote for you."

AWAIT BERNHARDT IN VAIN.

5,000 Chattanoogans Stand Out in the Cold for Over Two Hours.

Special to The New York Times.

CHATTANOOGA, March 16.—Five thousand people stood out of doors during the most severe storm of the Winter for over two hours this afternoon waiting for Sarah Bernhardt to lay the cornerstone of the new Shubert Theatre. If the crowd had stayed until Mme. Bernhardt's appearance it would be waiting still, for the actress refused absolutely to leave her car. She had previously accepted the invitation to lay the cornerstone.

The ceremony was scheduled to take place at 4 o'clock, but shortly after that hour the expectant crowd was notified that Mme. Bernhardt was taking her usual afternoon rest, and could not be disturbed. It was stated that she would appear at 5:30, and at that hour an even larger crowd than had gathered the first time was present. The actress then sent a message to the Mayor, who dismissed the crowd without telling the reason for Mme. Bernhardt's absence.

It is learned that the actress said she had received a message telling of the death of an intimate friend, and therefore did not feel disposed to take part in the ceremony.

MAY DROP ACTION FOR M'CALL MONEY

New York Life Is Suing His Estate to Recover $400,000.

TRUSTEES RAISE OBJECTIONS

Rumor That Individual Officials Will Restore Political Campaign Funds.

Following the remarkable speech of Andrew Hamilton before the Legislature in Albany on Thursday it was made known on good authority last night that the New York Life Insurance Company may not press the suit against the estate of John A. McCall for some $400,000 which he is supposed to have spent wrongfully. The Trustees had already determined upon a suit, but it may be sidetracked for this technical reason:

The original resolution called for a suit "against John A. McCall," Mr. McCall being alive then, and not against the "estate of John A. McCall." So, if the suit were to be brought a new resolution would have to be introduced.

It is not suggested that this decision is a result of Mr. Hamilton's attitude to his dead friend, Mr. McCall. The explanation announced was that since Mr. McCall's death opposition to a suit against his estate has sprung up among certain Trustees, because they look upon it as persecution. The estate amounts, it is said, to only about $180,000, which would be entirely eaten up if the company were successful, with more than $200,000 still due. If the new resolution comes to a vote, therefore, there will be considerable opposition to passing it.

Another rumor abroad last night—and a great deal of credence was given to it—was that the contributions to Republican campaign funds, told of by George W. Perkins before the Armstrong Committee, would be restored to the New York Life by individual Trustees. If these individuals decide to make the restoration that will mean the dropping of another suit. The Fowler Committee decided that the campaign contributions were wholly improper, and on its recommendation the Trustees authorized the suits.

Those who are to be sued, unless they pay up, are the Trustees who advised President McCall to give the money, or who, by their presence at the meetings when the payments were authorized, gave their sanction to them.

TALK OF DOCUMENTARY PROOF.

McCall's Friends Insist Committee Endorsed Hamilton's Expenditures.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 16.—It was openly asserted here to-day by the friends of John A. McCall that documentary proof was in their hands for production at the proper time that the expenditures of the company's legislative bureau, which Andrew Hamilton conducted, were passed upon in detail by the Auditing Committee of that company, as Hamilton himself asserted in his speech before the Legislature yesterday.

On the Auditing Committee Hiram H. Steele of the Fowler Investigating Committee of New York Life Trustees has served for many years, and another member up to about two years ago, was Augustus G. Paine, who is also serving on the New York Life's self-investigating board.

Hamilton himself is saying nothing at present. The second chapter of his revelations, promised when he addressed the Legislature on Thursday, is evidently not ready yet for public airing, and he would not prophesy when it would be. His appearance has created a profound impression among those who have been following the insurance situation, and the promised developments are awaited with extreme interest.

More About McCall's Position.

More of the history of John A. McCall's relations with his board during the last four or five months of his service as President of the New York Life is coming to light as the result of the Hamilton speech. It begins, virtually, with the agreement which Mr. McCall is understood to have reached with members of the board away back when he first went on the stand before the Armstrong Committee, that he was to take all the responsibility for the legislative and campaign-payments and was to have the support of his Trustees in justifying the procedure. It is now a matter of common knowledge that the support did not materialize as the Insurance Committee's investigation proceeded, and things came to the point where Mr. McCall decided to resign.

At this stage came the second agreement to which Mr. McCall's friends now point as evidence of the treatment he received from the men whom he trusted. It had to do with the repayment of the $235,000 for which Hamilton had not accounted out of the funds he got in 1903 and 1904, and is said to have been that when this refund had been made it would let Mr. McCall out of the entire proposition.

But shortly afterward a change came. It was learned by the "insiders" that agents of the company, directed by some one whose name does not as yet appear, had collected 60,000 proxies running to Mr. McCall, with a view to putting him back in office at the April election through the control that the proxies would give him of the class of Trustees who were to go in at that time.

Report That Hastened McCall's Death.

Motives of those who had professed to stand around Mr. McCall are, of course, left to be judged from the facts by those who now are interested in defending his memory, but the next development in the internal affairs of the company was the report of the Fowler Investigating Committee putting the onus of the entire scheme of political and legislative expenditures up to him and to Andrew Hamilton. This report, as is now well known, hastened his death.

From persons who have been in touch with the McCall adherents it is learned that one thing that kept Hamilton in Paris during the Fall was the necessity, urged by Trustees of the New York Life, of having nothing happen to discredit the story that Mr. McCall told on the witness stand before the Armstrong Commtitee.

Hamilton was not, it is understood, a party to the understandings between McCall and his Trustees; indeed, the account of things that is now coming out has it that after Hamilton's departure several of the men upon whom now the severest blame is visited ingratiated themselves in Mr. McCall's esteem and posed as his trusted advisers during the later weeks of the Armstrong Committee's investigation. While no direct statement is obtainable, it is gathered from this fact that Hamilton's return, as has been hinted at already, was directly due to the plans that have been making to clear Mr. McCall's memory.

Considerable comment was made here to-day upon William B. Hornblower's defense against the assertions of Hamilton before the Legislature yesterday that he was the "Pecksniff" of the New York Life. In this defense Mr. Hornblower pointed out that he had never appeared on any legislative committee. It has been recalled that so far as legislative records here are obtainable, or the memory of Hamilton's associates goes, Hamilton never appeared before any legislative committee either.

STATEMENTS BY TRUSTEES.

Had Never Heard of Hamilton Before Inquiry Proceedings Began.

There was a rush by the Trustees of the New York Life yesterday to deny acquaintance with Andrew Hamilton. They not only did not sanction his efforts to uphold "the higher law" by influencing legislation, but many of them declared that they knew not even of his existence before his name came up in the testimony before the Armstrong Committee last Fall.

Those who had anything to say did not discuss the canine qualities imputed to them by the New York Life's legislative generalissimo, but they hastened to deny any knowledge of what those mysterious vouchers represented.

Clarence H. Mackay, who is Acting Chairman of the Fowler Investigating Committee in the absence of Mr. Fowler in Europe, said that as far as he was concerned the statements made by Hamilton in Albany on Thursday were absolutely untrue. Mr. Mackay said to a reporter:

"Regarding your inquiry, in which you say that 'Judge' Andrew Hamilton has publicly made a statement that all of his so-called 'yellow dog' expenditures were known to the Trustees of the New York Life, I wish to say that I became a Trustee of the New York Life on April 13, 1904. At no meeting of the Trustees at which I was present—and I have been quite regular in attendance—was anything ever mentioned regarding this subject.

"I wish to say, further, that I never knew that such a man as Andrew Hamilton existed until his name was brought out in the testimony before the Armstrong Committee. Any statement that has been made by 'Judge' Andrew Hamilton contrary to the above is, as far as I am concerned, positively untrue."

In the Light of Secret Service.

That John A. McCall considered Hamilton's work "in the light of secret service," and therefore not a matter that had to be reported to the Trustees, was asserted by John Claflin in the following statement he gave out yesterday:

"In view of the broad publicity given to Andrew Hamilton's statement in Albany yesterday, to the effect that the Trustees of the New York Life knew all about the disbursements made by him, I make this statement:

"I have no acquaintance with Mr. Hamilton, and prior to Mr. McCall's testimony I did not know that Hamilton was disbursing any amounts of money, large or small, for the company in connection with legislation. After Mr. McCall had testified before the Legislative Committee, I expressed to him my astonishment at the facts which he had then disclosed, and I asked him why he had not consulted some of his Trustees before making the payments to Hamilton. He replied that he considered the matter in the light of a secret service, and that he believed his authority as President justified him in making any payments which he thought beneficial to the company, without consultation with any of the Trustees.

"I think Mr. McCall honestly believed his payments to Hamilton were necessary to protect the company from serious injury."

Col. Augustus G. Paine, a former member of the Auditing Committee of the New York Life, said yesterday that the committee could not be held responsible for payments to Hamilton. The Controller of the company, he said, submitted vouchers to the committee and the amounts called for were always regarded as part of the company's legitimate expenses.

"How could the Auditing Committee know?" Col. Paine asked. "It was not possible for the committee to go behind the records of all payments submitted to it by the Controller.

"It is the committee's duty to see that the books are properly kept, that all the payments are entered, and that the balance arrived at is a true one. To supervise in detail the statements furnished by the Controller's office would require the services of a big force of expert accountants.

"The payments to Hamilton were disguised by being charged up to legitimate accounts, such as the account for legal expenses and the real estate account. The Auditing Committee could not have discovered the true purpose of these expenses without putting expert accountants at work.

"I never heard of Hamilton myself until his name came to light in the Armstrong investigation."

Suits Against Hamilton to Go On.

According to Col. Paine, the fiery speech of "Judge" Hamilton in Albany will not have any effect on the suits that the New York Life is to bring against him.

"The Fowler Committee recommended the suits," said Col. Paine, "and the Trustees unanimously accepted the recommendation. These suits are now in the hands of the law department. It is for that department to say what will become of them. The Fowler Committee has concluded its investigation of the Hamilton payments; it has done all it could in regard to them."

Col. Paine was one of the committee of policy holders that helped to oust Beers from the Presidency of the New York Life before John A. McCall took charge. After Beers's resignation, Col. Paine was elected a Trustee. Beers, on his retirement, received a pension. William B. Hornblower was a Trustee at that time, and Hamilton accused him of being the author of the pension idea. The fact is, according to one Trustee who spoke yesterday, that Beers was so strong in his possession of proxies that the Trustees had to consent to the pension to get rid of him.

One of the present members of the Auditing Committee made practically the same statement as Col. Paine about the responsibility of the committee for the Hamilton payments. He said it did not lie with the committee at all.

"As a matter of fact, I never knew what Hamilton did for the New York Life," said this Trustee. "I did not know that he was connected with the company, and I knew that he was a man in whom John A. McCall reposed a great deal of confidence. But of the nature of his duties I knew absolutely nothing."

William B. Hornblower, who denied Hamilton's accusations on the same day they were made, had nothing to add yesterday to his previous statement.

Alexander E. Orr, President of the New York Life, shut himself up and would not see reporters. Nearly all the other officials were still in Albany yesterday.

The Fowler Committee announced yesterday that it had questioned several members of the Finance Committee about real estate investments. It was discovered that these investments yielded, on the average, a 4 per cent. return. The committee asked no questions about the Hamilton payments.

The PIANOLA PIANO—Playable by hand or playable by Pianola.

Is Your Piano Actually a Paying Investment?

EVERY refined home to-day contains a piano of some kind. Can you say that yours has been a profitable investment—that it has returned the dividends in pleasure that its price warrants you in expecting?

A piano regarded simply as an elegant article of furniture is not worth a tenth or a twentieth of the price that is asked for it. Yet, in how many homes does it stand idle, or comparatively idle.

The Pianola Piano is the one piano that in every home will justify its cost. Every member of the family can play it. Every member of the family will enjoy the music it brings into the home. It is the whole family's piano.

For hand-playing, the Pianola Piano is not surpassed by any piano in the market to-day. The presence of the Metrostyle Pianola inside its case does not interfere in the least with its tone or its excellence as a hand-played piano.

But, in addition to those members of the family who can play by hand, all the others can enjoy the piano—not merely by listening to it but by actually playing it themselves. We welcome calls or inquiries from piano-owners, who are dissatisfied with the returns they are receiving from their present instruments.

The Pianola Piano is purchasable on moderate monthly payments. Pianos of other makes received in part payment.

MERRITT TALKS AT HEARING.

Assemblyman Discusses Ryan's Relations to the Equitable.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 16.—Assemblyman Edward S. Merritt, who was ex-Gov. Odell's candidate for Speaker of the Assembly last January, appeared at the hearing on the bills proposed by the Armstrong Committee for insurance reform to-day to argue against the scheme which the committee has drafted for the stock retirement of insurance companies now organized on a stock basis.

As an important part of a brief which he submitted to the committee, Mr. Merritt discussed at length the relations of Thomas F. Ryan to the Equitable Life Assurance Society, viewed, as he said, from the standpoint of the policy holder. Mr. Merritt announced that he appeared as a policy holder in the Equitable and Washington Life Insurance Companies, the latter corporation being the one in which Mr. Ryan and his associates made good an impairment of capital fifteen months ago and conducted a resultant reorganization.

Senator Armstrong raised a question whether the committee should hear the Assemblyman from St. Lawrence County or should hold that the proper time for him to present his arguments was when the bills, as finally reported, came up for discussion by the Legislature. Mr. Merritt was finally permitted to speak briefly, and he filed with the committee his brief containing his argument.

In view of the testimony of Edward H. Harriman concerning his relations with ex-Gov. Odell, and his statement that he had not yet undertaken the measures he had had in mind with which to block the purposes which he declared Mr. Ryan had in view in buying the majority stock of the Equitable last June, Mr. Merritt's appearance attracted a good deal of comment. To inquiries Mr. Merritt made the same assertion that he made at the hearing—that he appeared only as a policy holder in the Equitable and Washington Life, and in no other capacity.

Mr. Merritt addressed himself to Sections 29 and 30 of the general bill proposed by the Armstrong Committee, which provides that the Directors of a stock insurance company may, with the consent of the stockholders, grant to policy holders the right to vote, and that they, with the consent of the stockholders and of a majority of the policy holders, may retire the stock when an agreement shall have been reached as to a fair price.

Paid $2,500,000 to Wield Power.

The Assemblyman said, in brief:

"It is a well-known fact that the majority of the shares of the capital stock of the Equitable Life is owned by one person, Thomas F. Ryan, and that through the ownership of the control of this company he also controls the Washington Life. The amount said to have been paid for 5,200 shares of the capital stock of the Equitable, at a par value of $52,000, is the sum of $2,500,000.

"It may be taken for granted that this amount was paid for control and not primarily for what equity the purchase of the shares had in the surplus funds. It was the power and prestige gained by owning a controlling interest in the stock of this corporation and the influence in financial affairs which could be wielded by obtaining such control which fixed the price. This controlling interest is reported to have been purchased of James Hazen Hyde by Mr. Ryan at private sale, and it is reasonable to suppose that with such a contract went a certain amount of business risk.

"It must be remembered that this investigation is due to a quarrel between the Hyde and Alexander interests to the stock ownership in the Equitable Life Assurance Society; that if they had never quarreled this investigation and this proposed legislation would doubtless have been deferred for a long time—perhaps for years. The evidence taken before your committee shows that great profits to those in the management of the company and other associates were due to their ability to agree in the control and management of the affairs of the corporation.

"It was to secure this position of control that Mr. Ryan gave Mr. Hyde the amount of money which he did for a bare majority of the stock of the corporation. Then the value lay in the control of the surplus funds of the corporation and not in any equity which they might claim to have in those surplus funds themselves."

Surplus Owned by Policy Holders.

Mr. Merritt said that one thing at least was certain, namely, that the surplus belonged either to the policy holders or to the stockholders, and he held that, so far as the question had been discussed, the weight of opinion seemed to be that the surplus belonged to the policy holders.

"It seems to me," he continued, "that it is the duty of the Legislature to be more jealous of the rights of the policy holders who have paid the premiums from which the surplus funds of these companies have originated, than it is to safeguard in particular the interests of financial managers who own the control in what was a comparatively small sum originally invested in the business by the first corporations, no matter what they may have paid for that control."

Mr. Merritt rehearsed the history of the Equitable as bearing upon his contention that the policy holders owned the surplus and then declared:

"The plan proposed by your committee provides for the payment out of the assets of the corporations to the stockholders upon the retirement of their stock 'an amount fairly determined to be the present value thereof with reference to its par value, the dividends allowed by law thereon, and the eventual right, if any, of the stockholders in any accumulations of the corporation,' provided, however, that any plan of retirement to be operative must have been adopted by vote of the majority of the Directors and approved by a vote of the stockholders, representing a majority of the capital stock—in this case Thomas F. Ryan—and in addition shall have the approval of the Superintendent of Insurance and majority vote of a meeting of policy holders called under certain conditions for that purpose.

"This section, if enacted into law in its present form, in the case of the Equitable Life, without the courts having passed upon this provision of mutuality in the society's charter, fixes a value on the controlling interest in the capital stock which it does not now possess. It is true that in providing for the retirement of the capital stock it qualifies in determining the amount to be paid by the words 'if any' in speaking of the eventual right of the stockholders to any of the accumulations, but if under the provisions of the present charter the interest of the stockholders is vague and indeterminate, should the Legislature hasten to give them relief at the expense of the policy holders?"

Would Strengthen Ryan's Hand.

"If this proposed act becomes a law it will simply strengthen the hands of the person controlling the majority of the shares of the society's stock, for the second condition to mutualization requires that the plan of retirement shall first have been approved by a vote of the stockholders representing a majority of its shares, and, as I have already stated, it is universally known where this power lies.

"I have, therefore, in my proposed amendment, struck out the second condition, which requires the consent of the majority of the stockholders of the plan of retirement, for the reason that, as I believe, the surplus belonging to the policy holders, and not to the stockholders, the policy holders alone should have the power of determining what it is worth to them to have the company mutualized and the complications resulting from stockholders' control done away with."

Mr. Merritt's amendments proposed also that no existing domestic stock life insurance corporation having a provision in its charter that its business was to be conducted on the mutual plan should reincorporate under the provisions of the section, until the respective rights of its policy holders and stockholders had been determined by the courts.

Mr. Merritt applied his idea to the question of restricting insurance company investment raised by the Armstrong Committee. He said:

"In disposing of the bonds and stocks now held by these corporations those now in control can place them at any price to syndicates they can form outside of the directory itself, because there is nothing to prevent stockholders who are not Trustees from participating in such syndicates.

"It is certain that Mr. Ryan, controlling the majority of the stock of the Equitable, will not consent to any plan of mutualization which does not return to him the principal and interest of the sum which he paid to Mr. Hyde in the private transaction which he had with him when he bought the control of the company.

"If the surplus belongs to the policy holders and not to the stockholders, the proper thing for Mr. Ryan to do is to find some other person or group of persons to whom he can sell the controlling interest in the Equitable at private sale. Were it not for the result of this investigation he would have no trouble in realizing much more than the two millions and a half which it is reported he paid Mr. Hyde.

"If this is not satisfactory to him he can remain in control of the stock, dispose of the offices, and control the management of the company, subject, however, to the restrictions which the Legislature on the advice of your committee will undoubtedly impose upon this kind of business.

"If you believe that the surplus wholly or mainly belongs to the policy holders, why should not they have a determining voice in the disposition of so much of the assets of the company as are given up to get rid of the stockholders?

"I can easily imagine that under the conditions of this bill Mr. Ryan would not object to its passage. Under the second condition referred to he is protected in not being a Director, but a stockholder. There is nothing to prevent him from forming a syndicate and taking over all of the investments and stocks of both the Equitable and Washington Life at almost any price that he sees fit. Through his ability to manipulate the stock market he can so manipulate the price of stocks as to recoup himself for the two and one-half millions which he paid for control."

Kingsley Criticises the Committee.

Darwin P. Kingsley, Second Vice President of the New York Life Insurance Company, spoke at some length against the proposed Section 98 of the insurance law limiting the expenses of new business. He said:

"We object to this law because it will put the middle man back in the New York Life Insurance Company after we have spent fifteen years to eliminate him."

Mr. Kingsley declared the committee had overstepped its duties in trying to take the management of the life insurance companies out of the hands of the present officials and giving it to other officials. He deemed the provisions of the bills regarding limitations of business as impracticable. He held that the section as proposed would tear down the magnificent structure that has been built around the company, and it would have to start all over again.

"It seems to me that the committee is about to make a tremendous mistake," said Mr. Kingsley. "You are in danger, it seems to me, of losing sight of life insurance itself. But when you legislate to put life insurance under the ban and out of business, I tell you, Mr. Chairman, you are wrong. The people don't want to have life insurance companies go out of business."

Henry C. Lippincott, manager of agencies of the Penn Mutual of Philadelphia, declared that his company had at all times tried to deal fairly with policy holders.

"During all this turmoil and excitement over the disclosures of insurance crimes," said Mr. Lippincott, "less than 20 out of a total of 160,000 policy holders asked us for information regarding the management of our company. The law you propose is revolutionary, and I am afraid we would be compelled to withdraw from your State in the event of its passage. We advocate a change in the bill which will permit companies to maintain their present organization, and also regarding the limitation of expenses."

Opposes Standard Form of Policy.

Mr. Lippincott also spoke against a standard form of policy as proposed, saying it would result in hardships to companies outside the State. They would be compelled to adopt a different and distinct form of policy for the business done in this State.

Several speakers protested against the recommendations of the committee that no further assessment companies be allowed to incorporate in this State. They argued that the prohibition would have a moral effect upon the existing assessment companies that would make it impossible for them to do business.

Representatives of the American Association of Certified Public Accountants argued in favor of a proposed new form of report to the State Insurance Department, and W. Stewart Browne, who said he was a broker and banker, with $200,000 in insurance policies, who had been sitting with the New York Life contingent during the session, started to make an attack on Miles Menander Dawson, the consulting Actuary of the committee, which Senator Armstrong promptly squelched.

Senator Armstrong read a telegram from Gov. Johnson of Minnesota, approving, on behalf of the committee appointed by the conference of Governors and Attorneys General held in Chicago early last month, the proposed legislation.

When the adjournment came Senator Armstrong announced that it would probably be a couple of weeks before the committee would have the amended bills in shape to present to the Legislature. From this it was gathered that various amendments would grow out of the suggestions made by those who had appeared at the hearings.

BRACKETT BILL REPORTED.

Gives Policy Holders Right to Sue for an Accounting.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 16.—The Senate Committee on Insurance to-day reported out with a favorable recommendation Senator Brackett's bill to repeal Section 56 of the insurance law which was so vigorously attacked in the Senate last week by Senator Grady.

Mr. Brackett's amendment gives the right to any policy holder of any life insurance company to bring an action in the courts for an accounting under the same general provisions governing the bringing of such an action against other corporations or persons. Under Section 56, as it stands to-day, it is necessary for the policy holder to get the consent of the Attorney General of the State before he can bring such action.

THE CAMPAIGN GIFTS.

Now Is the Time to Stop Campaign Contributions, Perry Belmont Says.

Perry Belmont sent this letter yesterday to State Senator Armstrong, Chairman of the Joint Insurance Investigating Committee of the Legislature:

No. 580 Fifth Avenue, New York, March 16, 1906.

My Dear Sir: In view of the statement made before the Insurance Committees of both houses of the Legislature yesterday, permit me to quote from an interview with me, published in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Sept. 26, 1905:

> The officers of insurance corporations are being questioned and put upon their defense by the Armstrong Committee. Some have resigned, others are called upon to resign, but who ever heard of an officer of a corporation or an Executive Committee taking any important step for the company without advice of counsel? Who advised these clients now daily subjected to investigation? To what legal advice must these acts of irregularity and illegality be attributed? There are corporation lawyers of the highest qualifications and character who observe strictly and faithfully their professional relations with the companies employing them, but there are some who have a dual relation, combining business with professional occupations. They are sometimes promoters of private and political enterprises at the expense of the corporation they are supposed to serve.
>
> The relation of lawyer and client is of course privileged, but wherever the dual relation referred to exists on the part of an adviser who is also a participant in the irregularities complained of in the management of corporate interests there can be no question of the right of an investigating committee to demand information which undoubtedly would be necessary to a complete understanding of present conditions.

Let me also call your attention to the statement in a letter addressed by me to the Civic Federation on the 7th inst.:

> Last September, during the insurance investigation, when Mr. Taggart had made the announcement that "neither the Democratic National Committee nor any authorized representative ever asked or received from Mr. McCall, the New York Life, or any other insurance company, a single dollar's contribution to the campaign fund," Mr. McCall himself declared in a public interview that he was in favor of a law prohibiting corporations from contributing, and compelling publicity of contributions. He had previously said to me: "Mr. Belmont, if you knew what I was obliged to do you would feel sorry for me." I have often thought of those words since, and the circumstances of his death invite general attention to the evils of the system of which he is regarded as a victim. Those, however, who are mainly responsible and the beneficiaries of that system should not escape their responsibility.

I now take this occasion to urge upon you and your associates in the Senate and Assembly, in behalf of the State Publicity Bill Organization, that the Legislature of this great State do not adjourn without passing the bill under consideration, prohibiting corporations from making contributions for political purposes and requiring political committees to publish campaign contributions and expenditures. Yours very truly,

PERRY BELMONT.

The Hon. William Armstrong.

NEW YORK LIFE ACTIVE.

Many Signs That the Election This Year Will Be a Hot Contest.

The assiduity with which the present administration of the New York Life is gathering proxies for the election of new Trustees in April has been made known in many ways to the International Policy Holders' Committee. To the committee came, a day or two ago, a letter from a policy holder, and with it a blank that had been sent to him to fill out and return.

"What must I do about it?" the writer of the letter asked.

He was advised by the International Committee not "to fill in and return."

Six new Trustees are to be elected in April to fill the places of William B. Hornblower, Alexander E. Orr, John Claflin, Darwin P. Kingsley, Woodbury Langdon, and George A. Morrison. All these are candidates for re-election. There will be a warm contest this year, and the election will be a striking contrast to the formal procedure which usually has marked the choosing of Trustees. Even though they may be legislated out of office next November, the present Trustees are making a fight to be re-elected. They count on the Legislature's turning down the section of the proposed law which provides for the election of an entire new board.

FIGHT IN NEGRO CLUB.

The Proprietor and a Policeman Were Badly Wounded.

The Tenderloin had a shooting affray last night that would not have been out of place in Deadwood Gulch in its palmiest days. The scene was the "Johnny" Jones negro club in West Thirty-second Street, and the chief actors were Jones, the proprietor; Roundsman Walsh, Policeman Scott, and Eli Lucas, a negro. Scott and Jones are now in the New York Hospital, badly wounded, Walsh was less severely injured.

Lucas was caught less than an hour after the shooting at Fifty-sixth Street and Broadway, in a fight nearly as desperate as the original one. Before he could be subdued he had exchanged shot for shot with two detectives. There were a number of people on Broadway in that vicinity at the time, but no one was struck, and the timely appearance of a patrolman from the West Forty-seventh Street Station, into whose arms Lucas ran, put an end to the fight.

Lucas was barred out of the club some time ago, and ever since then has been threatening to get even with Jones. Jones is the man who ran the Bon Ton Club, which figured in the newspapers at the time of the Schmittberger raid a few months ago.

Early in the evening Lucas was drinking with another negro named "Buck" Rogers in a place in West Thirty-sixth Street. Along toward 10 o'clock he had imbibed enough encouragement to make him feel inclined to carry out his threat against Jones. Leaving Rogers, he went down to the resort in Thirty-second Street.

Lucas walked into the barroom, where he found Jones leaning against the bar. Jones immediately ordered him out of the place, and was met with a torrent of abuse. When Jones moved toward him to argue the matter Lucas hurled an ice pitcher at him, and followed it up with a couple of glasses and a match stand. William Brown, the bartender, and a waiter then started to put the man out, but soon gave it up.

Lucas had his blood up, and, yelling curses at Jones, he jumped up on the bar and pulled out two six-shooters, with which he covered the crowd.

"Stand still, you mucker!" he yelled at Jones, but the latter made a dive for the palm garden door. He was not quite quick enough, however, for Lucas fired, and the bullet struck him in the back.

Meanwhile some one had run up to Roundsman John Walsh of the Tenderloin Station on the corner of Thirtieth Street and Sixth Avenue. He started for the scene on the double quick and picked up Policeman James Scott on the way. As they entered the front door they were met with cries of:

"He's behind the piano!"

Drawing their revolvers, they made for the piano in the palm garden, Walsh entering through the bar and Scott through the hallway. Four shots rang out, two from Lucas and two from the officer. Then as the negro jumped out and made a bolt for the back window, both officers fired again.

The room was so full of smoke it was hard to see anything, but when it cleared away Walsh was found lying on the floor with a wounded thigh, and Scott was half-conscious from a wound in the right shoulder. Lucas had escaped by climbing out of the back window and through Sweeney's saloon in Thirty-first Street.

Detectives McGee, Raines, McCarthy, and Maher came around too late to do anything but make a lot of prisoners. Jones and Scott were picked up and sent to the New York Hospital, where their condition was said to be serious. Walsh was taken back to the station in a cab, and later said that his wound was slight, the bullet having merely grazed his thigh.

POLICEMAN DRENNAN DEAD.

"Father" of the Three-Platoon System Stricken in Uptown Station.

Patrolman William Drennan of the West 152d Street Station and one of the best-known policemen in New York, was standing in the station last night talking with Capt. Cottrell and Sergt. Corbett when he had a hemorrhage. He fell to the floor in a second. Capt. Cottrell summoned a physician, who worked over the policeman, but Drennan died in half an hour.

Drennan was noted for his intimate knowledge of New York, particularly of Chinatown. He had a wide acquaintance with "the underworld." He had been a patrolman for fourteen years, and had been stationed at various precincts about the city. Several years ago, on behalf of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, he appeared before the Committee on Charter Revision at Albany in behalf of the three-platoon system, and was thereafter called "the Father" of that system. He lived at 65 East 105th Street.

STERILIZED BETTING TO RULE RACE TRACKS

Club, which is composed of gentlemen who may be relied upon to live up to their promises. They told me that they would do all in their power to regulate betting and to lessen its harmfulness.

"When I refused to advocate the Cassidy-Lansing bill I said that I was satisfied the poolrooms were behind it. I wish to supplement this statement by saying that I do not charge for an instant that Dr. Crafts is anything but sincere or that he has any understanding with any poolroom keeper. I have had lines out, however, for several months, and I know positively that the poolroom interests are supporting the measure. I have reports from a detective which leave no room for doubt.

Impossible to Stop Betting.

"It is absolutely impossible to stop betting. This being true, the best thing to do is to secure the co-operation of responsible men in keeping it under control. Horse racing is a clean sport—a healthful sport—and we have no more right to stop is than we have to stop yachting.

"I do not favor the Cassidy-Lansing bill, for three reasons. In the first place, it would put Mr. Belmont on precisely the same plane before the law as the poolroom keeper, who is a felon in the eyes of the law. In the second place, if the race track people were driven out of business the poolroom people would step into their places and the sport would be reduced to the level it occupied in the days of Gloucester and Guttenberg. Thirdly, the passage of the bill would encourage the poolroom, which is the breeding place of irresponsible and immature bettors. I do not think that there is nearly the same atmosphere at the race tracks, conducted as they are now, as exists in a poolroom. People who go to poolrooms do so for the sole purpose of gambling. People visit the race tracks for the love of outdoor sport.

"I am accused by Mr. Crafts, Mr. Comstock, and others of entering into an agreement the object of which is to nullify the law. As a matter of fact, I am doing nothing of the kind. In going to the Stewards of The Jockey Club and asking their help in diminishing the evils of betting, I was in exactly the same position as if I had gone to Police Commissioner Bingham and asked him to use every means in his power to close up the poolrooms."

Associated with Dr. Slicer on the Legislative Committee of the State Conference of Religion are the Rev. J. M. Whiton, the Rev. Dr. Josiah Strong, and Rabbi Schulman.

"We had a meeting last week," said Dr. Whiton yesterday, "at which we expressed our views fully. Dr. Slicer understood how we felt in the premises and was authorized to make any agreement he saw fit. He fully realized that we wished to accomplish the minimizing of the betting evil by the most practical means to be discovered. Anything he may have done has our indorsement."

Anthony Comstock, Secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Vice, said yesterday afternoon that he had not a sufficient command of language to express his opinion of the stand assumed by Dr. Slicer or of the agreement entered into by him.

Comstock Drew Cassidy Bill.

"I have received information to-day," he declared, "which to my mind explains the attitude of Dr. Slicer, but I am confident that Bishop Doane and others associated with him have been grossly deceived. Bishop Doane is a high-minded, upright gentleman, and he would not for a moment occupy the position in which he has been placed if he was in possession of the facts. I wrote him a long letter to-day explaining the situation, and feel confident that he will withdraw from his opposition to the Cassidy-Lansing bill, which was drawn by me."

"Mr. Crafts says he drew the bill," Mr. Comstock was informed.

"That is incorrect," retorted Mr. Comstock. "Mr. Crafts sent me a bill, and I looked it over, but the bill now pending before the Legislature was written by me and sent to him. To say that I received any suggestion from the poolroom men is absolutely false. My stand and the stand of the society I represent is simply that the Constitution of the State should be enforced.

"When I learned of the stand taken by Dr. Slicer, I rang him up on the telephone and asked him how, as a minister of the Gospel, he could throw his influence on the side of the violators of the Constitution of the State who were nothing more nor less than common gamblers.

"He replied that he was acting as an individual and not as a minister of the Gospel. I was told to-day that he had employed detectives to shadow me and see if I had any communication with poolroom men."

Rabbi Samuel Schulman said last night that both he and Dr. Strong knew of Dr. Slicer's attitude in the matter of the Cassidy-Lansing bill, and that both were in accord with him.

Rabbi Schulman declared that he was not against horse racing as a sport, although he had never been at a race track. "There is a difference in the spirit of gambling," he said. "Some people do not see the difference as I do, but it is a far different thing, to my mind, when a man gambles merely in the hope of getting money than when he lays a bet just to be more interested in his sport or lays it merely for entertainment, knowing that he can afford it."

The rabbi did not know of any signed agreement between Dr. Slicer and the Stewards of the Jockey Club.

"If Dr. Slicer succeeds in diminishing poolroom gambling," he said, "he will have accomplished a great public service."

Dr. Parkhurst refused to express any opinion on the Slicer-Jockey Club agreement. He said that he was not sufficiently posted to talk.

"If Dr. Slicer has done anything to better the amazing and degrading situation that exists to-day, in open violation of the Constitution by race-track gamblers," he declared, "I commend him. Until I am more fully informed, however, I would rather not put myself on record."

A bookmaker who is well known on the metropolitan circuit said that the decision to prohibit the posting of odds, while it would possibly result in some confusion on big days, would really make little difference in the conduct of the racing game.

"It will be easy enough for us to place the odds against the horses starting in each race on our programmes and show them to customers," he explained.

"The Jockey Club has been down on plungers ever since the newspapers got to making so much fuss over 'Pittsburg Phil,' 'Joe' Yeager, and the Drake-Gates combination. All the big bettors were told two years ago that they would have to become more circumspect."

Among the poolroom keepers the existence of an agreement between Dr. Slicer and The Jockey Club excited amazement.

"It's a funny stunt," said one of them, "when the preachers get to framing up rules for race track betting. I never thought to see it."

ALADDIN TEWKSBURY IN PHILADELPHIA JAIL

Arrested on a Telegraphed Order from This City.

ONCE HAD HIS OWN MOON

Golden Fountain Spouted Perfume in Seventy-second Street Palace—He Vanished Owing About $350,000.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 16.—Lewis G. Tewksbury, a financier with a spectacular career in several of the world's capitals, was arrested in this city to-day on a bench warrant issued in 1903, following an indictment for grand larceny found against him in New York. His arraignment before Magistrate Kochersperger, in the Central Police Court, and his commitment without bail were rapid transitions from the luxurious surroundings of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel, where he had been in semi-seclusion for the last four weeks.

The arrest was brought about through a telegram to Police Headquarters from Chief of Detectives McLaughlin of New York. The message contained no particulars beyond the fact that there was an indictment warrant for the man in which he was charged with grand larceny in the first degree.

Tewksbury went willingly to the Central Station and was locked in a cell. Arrangements were made for a hearing at once, but the prisoner refused to leave the cell until he had obtained counsel. John R. K. Scott was therefore summoned.

The proceedings were brief. Mr. Scott maintained that the arrest was illegal inasmuch as the affidavit upon which it was based failed to allege the particulars of the charge against the prisoner. He asked for a continuance of the case until he could bring the matter before Gov. Pennypacker at Harrisburg.

Magistrate Kochersperger refused to grant the request, and committed the prisoner to Moyamensing to await requisition papers. Mr. Scott will attempt to obtain his client's release upon a writ of habeas corpus.

Tewksbury, who was fashionably attired, seemed undisturbed by his arrest, and expressed the opinion that the matter would be amicably settled in a few days. He had little to say except that he believed a woman had caused his arrest.

Lewis G. Tewksbury, after a meteoric career as a daring speculator steering close to the law, a lavish spender of money, and an owner of high-bred racing stock, disappeared from this city in June, 1900, leaving behind him some $350,000 or $400,000 of bad debts.

When Tewksbury disappeared many of his creditors raised the cry of fraud. It was asserted that he had secreted property on which they had claims. A few days before his flight it was known that he was the owner of about $600,000 worth of real estate, including a mansion at 29 West Seventy-second Street, where he entertained on a lavish scale.

The splendor of the Tewksbury house was the talk of the favored ones to whom its doors swung open. In the centre of the quadrangular structure there was a courtyard of Moorish architecture, said to be a replica of a Moorish court at the Alhambra in Spain, where the Mussulman Princes established their Courts in Oriental splendor in the Middle Ages.

But Tewksbury eclipsed the Moorish Princes. The feature of his Moorish Court was a large golden fountain where perfumed waters sprang in multi-colored cascades to the wonder and admiration of his guests on the frequent occasions when he gave a grand fête.

Another feature of the Moorish Court was Tewksbury's artificial moon, made by an ingenious arrangement of electric light screened by a number of disks of various shades to soften the light and give it the silvery, mellowed effect of real moonlight.

Tewksbury, who is 46 years old, began life as a drug clerk in Manchester, N. H. After he fled he was first heard of in Mexico, and more recently in London, where his stock-buying concern, "The Investigating Corporation of England," proved much of a puzzle to the bankruptcy courts. He took offices in London in January, 1905, in a high-class city block, buying and selling shares on commission.

35 DEAD, 20 HURT IN CRASH OF TRAINS

Passenger Trains Crash Head-On and Cars Take Fire.

THREE ENGINES IN SMASH-UP

Disaster Occurs at Night During Heavy Snowstorm in Colorado Mountains —Many Homeseekers Perish.

PUEBLO, Col., March 16.—Thirty-five persons were killed early to-day in a head-on collision of two passenger trains, one drawn by two locomotives, near Adobe, Col., on the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad. More than a score of the victims were incinerated, several beyond identification by a fire that destroyed the wrecked coaches. More than a score were injured, but all probably will recover.

The accident was due to the failure of an operator, S. T. Lively, to deliver orders. The man, who is 25 years old, says he had worked Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday nights without rest and was sound asleep at the time the order should have been given.

It appears that the Utah and California Express, west bound, known as No. 3, left Pueblo an hour and a half late, with orders to meet the Colorado and New Mexico Express, east bound, known as No. 15, at Florence. This order was changed, and the westbound train was directed to pass the eastbound train at Beaver, about twelve miles east of Florence. The order should have been delivered to the train crew at Swallow, where Lively was stationed. In the meantime the eastbound train had received its orders, and expected to meet the westbound train at Beaver.

Lively duly received his orders from No. 3, but was sleeping soundly when the train went by. Another dispatcher called him up and asked if No. 3 had gone past. Lively answered that it had not. Then No. 15 came along, and he gave the orders to the engineer of No. 15, who said: "These are No. 3's orders." Lively immediately notified the dispatcher of his failure to deliver No. 3's orders. He says:

"I was dead for rest; I went to sleep and did not give No. 3 its orders. I am responsible for the wreck. I will not run away."

The engineer of No. 15 was scheduled to go out on No. 3, but by a misunderstanding went out on No. 15.

The disaster occurred during a heavy snowstorm. Only the locomotive, baggage car, and day coaches were wrecked, the sleeping cars escaping almost unscathed, as in the case of the Eden disaster on the same road in 1904, when part of a train ran into a flooded canon through a washed-out bridge.

Many of the dead were homeseekers bound for the Northwest. The three crushed locomotives set fire to the splintered coaches, and it was hours before all the bodies were recovered, the flames being so hot that rescuers could not approach the débris until the fuel burned out.

It was a wild, stormy night in the mountain cañons, which are about thirty miles east of the Royal Gorge, when the two heavy trains met. Blinding snow darkened the rocky gorges, and speed was not high. Suddenly headlights flashed out, and it was realized by the engineers that something was wrong. According to Fireman J. H. Smith of the westbound train, which had a helper engine, Engineer Walter Coslett applied the emergency brake, but the slippery rails allowed the momentum of the heavy train to carry it on to the fatal crash.

The impact was scarcely noticeable, but the trains crushed and ground into each other. The helper engine acted as a cushion, minimizing the force and weight of the heavy mountain engines. This helper was crushed together like so much paper, and the larger locomotives ran through the mesh of iron and plowed each other to pieces.

Fireman Smith was the only one of the engine crews to escape. The baggage car of the westbound train broke in two, and three coaches were squeezed together. The baggage car, the mail car, and a coach of the eastbound train buckled, but none of the cars telescoped.

Hardly had the noise of the wreck ceased when a sheet of fire ran through the shattered cars of both trains. In the forward coach of the westbound train every seat was occupied by passengers. A number of foreigners were among them, and in their terror they gave up life without making any attempt to reach safety outside the burning car. They sank to the floor of the car and were roasted alive. The more self-possessed passengers rushed for the windows and doors, and with the aid of the passengers in the rear of the train and those members of the train crew who were unhurt, managed to reach the open air. Many were injured by the rough handling they received or by flying glass.

When the occupants of the two sleeping cars saw that nothing could be done to check the flames, they aided the trainmen in pushing back the undamaged cars. Communication was opened with the Pueblo office of the railroad from Portland, a mile from the wreck, and a relief train was at once dispatched. The injured were placed in the sleeping cars and brought to Pueblo with the passengers of the eastbound train, who were unhurt. Another relief train came from Florence to take away the uninjured portion of the eastbound train.

It is impossible to determine the exact number of dead on account of the incineration of many bodies. The number of victims burned is said to be at least twenty.

A list of dead made up from close investigation by responsible persons follows: William Hollis, engineer; Walter Cosslett, engineer; H. D. Sudduth, fireman; Edward E. Baird, Deputy Sheriff, Denver; Archibald Whitney, prisoner in charge of Baird; Mrs. William Burnside, daughter, and daughter's child, all of Kansas; A. N. Barklo, Salida, Col.; Miss Grace Barklo, Salida, Col.; Enas McParland, express messenger; Taylor Hewitt, Lebo, Kan.; Mrs. William Hewitt, Lebo, Kan.; Pearl Hewitt, Lebo, Kan.; Mrs. Katherine Hewitt and baby boy, Lebo, Kan.; E. Crowley, Lebo, Kan.; Mrs. E. Crowley, Lebo, Kan.; Fred Jones, Lebo, Kan.; Fred Lemreoiley, Denver; Mrs. Winona Hewitt, Lebo, Kan.

Among the injured: Patrick Murphy, Florence, Col.; P. Peters, baggageman; James Proconone, immigrant; Miss Mabel Fields, E. A. Hewitt, Lebo, Kan.; C. C. House, Champa, New Mexico; I. Kissel, New York, head injured; A. Gerber, New York, ear torn; C. N. Wright, New York, head slightly injured; J. L. Lotton, Bellflower, Mo.

One of the pathetic tragedies of the disaster was the wiping out of all but two of the family of Taylor Hewitt of Lebo, Kan. Father, mother, daughter, grandchild, and the wives of the sons are missing. The two sons, E. A. Hewitt and W. L. Hewitt, are among the injured in the hospital here, each of them having leg fractures in addition to other injuries. E. A. Hewitt said that he had a dream several months ago in which his family was all killed. He said he then saw just as plainly as he saw the real wreck, everything that took place after the collision.

FATAL SLIDE FROM ICY ROOF.

Tinner Killed While at Work on St. Bartholomew's Church.

Walter Cathie, a sixty-year-old tinner, went to the roof of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal Church at Forty-fourth Street and Madison Avenue yesterday morning to do some repairing. Before he ascended he took a look at the sloping roof and shook his head, for it was slippery.

"There's a bit of ice and snow up there," remarked a man at the church, who saw him surveying it. "It'll be pretty risky working up there this morning."

"You're right," answered Cathie. "I'm 60 years old, too, but I never shirked a roof yet, and I ain't going to begin to-day. This is going to be a case where ice don't cut no ice."

He laughed at his joke and went up.

Half an hour later persons on the opposite side of the street saw Cathie slip. He dropped a soldering iron from his hand and, sliding over a sheet of ice, shot down the roof.

"Catch the gutter," some one yelled. Cathie tried to do so, but his grip was weak and his body dropped from the roof to the pavement, fifty feet below. A dozen men were ready to assist him, but he lay still. Dr. Oberbeck of the Flower Hospital said that he had died instantly from a broken neck. His body was sent to the East Fifty-first Street Station for the Coroner's examination. An hour later another tinner took his place on the roof.

And Trouble Is Predicted in the Congress Club of Brooklyn.

The House Committee of the Congress Club of 586 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, is investigating the disappearance of an oil portrait of John C. Frémont, the Pathfinder, from the parlor of the clubhouse last Monday night. The portrait formerly belonged to a woman whose husband was one of the old Frémont Republicans.

A member of the club offered the painting to the Congress Club for $250, but the organization thought the price excessive and the widow agreed to take $100. A subscription list was started, but after $50 was raised interest in the purchase died out. The painting meanwhile had been hung up in the club's handsome parlors.

A week ago John Kissel, a member of the club, offered the owner $100 for the picture, and the offer was accepted. The club learned of it, and the President, George E. Burr, exacted a promise, it is said, that the picture would not be removed from the clubhouse until the House Committee had taken action on the matter.

When it was found that the picture was gone the House Committee learned that Kissel had removed it. He admitted that the picture was in his possession, but he denied having ever promised not to remove it from the clubhouse.

Brooklyn Republicans say that the incident is likely to lead to a split in the club and the formation of a rival organization.

TENDERLOIN SWEEPING BEGUN

Many Disreputable Resorts Emptied and Eight Arrests Made.

The Tenderloin's new police squad started housecleaning yesterday. According to one of the women whose houses were entered the new method of driving out keepers of disorderly resorts has a dash of the rudeness of the Cossack.

The complainant is known as "Mrs. Green." When the police left her place in West Twenty-ninth Street she accused the police of breaking in her door, smashing bric-à-brac, and tearing pictures from the walls. A woman in the house said that one of her arms was painfully wrenched and bruised.

The police deny that they did any unnecessary smashing. "Mrs. Green" was ordered to quit business. Houses in nine Tenderloin streets were visited and the occupants told to clear out. The raids resulted in eight arrests; the other persons visited were just warned.

Acting Inspector Hodgins yesterday addressed the forty-five new men sent to the Tenderloin and West Thirty-seventh Street Stations. He advised them in arresting women on the streets to remember that it is better to let a hundred guilty escape rather than arrest an innocent and respectable woman by mistake.

$9,000 BAIL FOR SPRIGGS.

Negro Goes Back to the Tombs—To be Tried on Tuesday.

Lawyer Alter demanded in General Sessions yesterday that bail be fixed for Robert H. Spriggs, the negro charged with traffic in "white slaves." At the suggestion of Mr. Jerome, who was in court, Judge Cowing set the bail at $9,000. Late last night the negro was still in the Tombs.

Trial for Spriggs and his alleged partner, Sallie Bennett, was set for Tuesday. His counsel's plea for delay brought from Mr. Jerome:

"You be ready at that date, for this court is going to try the case then."

"Yes," added Judge Cowing. "You have to be ready then."

Witnesses to be used against Spriggs and the Bennett woman were still being examined yesterday by Assistant District Attorneys Garvan and Murphy.

DR. SOPER'S SUBWAY VIEWS.

Metallic Dust and Lack of Sanitary Care the Chief Perils.

Dr. George A. Soper, who made a study of the conditions in the Subway recently, read a paper on the subject before the New York Academy of Medicine Thursday night. In his paper he thus summarized the results of his inquiry:

"I think the Subway, as a whole, is sufficiently ventilated and is free from conditions injurious to health, except as to the presence of metallic dust, lack of sanitary care, and conditions inseparable from overcrowding.

"The lack of sanitary care can and probably will be corrected. I do not know whether it will be necessary to do anything about the dust. If future investigations show that the dust is really dangerous, American ingenuity can certainly find a way to prevent it."

FOR CHINATOWN PARK.

Department Head Favors the Plan, and a Hearing Will Be Held.

Borough President Ahearn said yesterday that President Herman of the Department of Parks had approved the plan to make a public park of the area now included in Chinatown. Mr. Herman has written a letter to the local board, asking it to adopt a resolution for presentation to the Board of Estimate.

The local board will give a public hearing on the project next Tuesday.

Lost Wife, Spent All, and Died Alone.

Joseph Dzegos, a grocer in the neighborhood of Sheriff and Rivington Streets, had a bank account of $50,000 ten years ago. His wife died, he neglected business, and soon was penniless and friendless. He tramped the streets of the lower east side on Thursday night. Yesterday morning the janitor at 70 Sheriff Street found his body in the hallway. He died from alcoholism and exposure, and will be buried in Potter's Field.

MARCH 1906

JAPANESE AND JEWS UNDER RUSSIAN BAN

Interdict Against Former in Manchuria Causes Surprise.

JEWS TO QUIT VLADIVOSTOK

Two High St. Petersburg Officials Wrote the Pamphlet Inciting Anti-Semitic Excesses.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 16.—The Novoe Vremya, exercised over the interdict against Japanese in Northern Manchuria, asks what motive impelled Gen. Grodekoff, seeing that the region was thrown open to the trade of all nations by the treaty of peace.

The Novoe Vremya vaguely surmises that the interdict may be connected with the influx of Japanese at Vladivostok. Telegrams from that city report that the Japanese are daily opening new shops and are rapidly monopolizing trade.

The authors of the pamphlet inciting the people to murder the Jews prove to be two high officials of the Ministry of the Interior, one of whom has been arrested.

News from Ekaterinoslav and Minsk shows that the pamphlets have already led to a recrudescence of anti-Semitism. The Jews are fleeing terror stricken.

VLADIVOSTOK, March 16.—The Jews here have been ordered to leave the city in three days.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 16.—The author of the anti-Jewish circulars was M. Levroff, an employe of the Ministry of the Interior, holding a rank in the official hierarchy equivalent to that of Councilor of State. He is the leader of the "League of the Russian People," and has been dismissed from the service and arrested.

M. Vaholstrem, the official spokesman of the Ministry of the Interior, denies the charge made by the Hon. Lionel Walter Rothschild, M. P., that repatriated Russians have been shot at the frontier without trial. M. Vaholstrem says that so far as he knows there has not been a single case of the arrest or prosecution of returned refugees.

Inquiries made at the British Embassy here show that no case of the kind referred to by Mr. Rothschild has been reported there.

PLAY ABOUT RUSSIA BARRED.

Prussian Police Prohibit "'On the Eve of the Russian Revolution."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 16.—A play by Dr. Kompf, entitled "On the Eve of the Russian Revolution," was to be produced for the first time at Charlottenburg to-night, but was prohibited by the police.

GENERAL'S DAUGHTER BEATEN.

Mlle. Izmailovich Says the Police Kicked Her Into Insensibility.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 16.—The daughter of Gen. Izmailovich, who was condemned to death on March 2, her sentence later being commuted to imprisonment for life, has created a sensation similar to that caused by Mlle. Spiridonovo, who smuggled a letter out of her prison describing the manner in which she had been treated.

Mlle. Izmailovich has also succeeded in sending out a letter from her prison. It was published to-day and described her horrible treatment after the attempt to kill the Governor of Minsk, as a result of which her accomplice, Ivan Kulikoff, was executed on March 14.

Mlle. Izmailovich says the police kicked her into insensibility, and subsequently, at the police station, tore off her clothes, beat and cursed her, spat in her face, and struck her with such force on the side of the head that an eardrum was broken.

Two policemen of Kazan have been sentenced to a year's imprisonment at hard labor for maltreating a woman.

The woman who assassinated Gen. Sakharoff, ex-Minister of War, last Dec. 5, was to-day sentenced at Saratoff to be hanged. The verdict was accompanied by a recommendation that the sentence be commuted to imprisonment for life.

$50,000 MORE FOR JAPANESE.

Readers of The Christian Herald Have Now Raised $80,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Americans have already contributed nearly $100,000 for the relief of the victims of the famine in Northern Japan. The first large contribution received after the President issued his appeal was $10,000, raised by The Christian Herald. Then came another $10,000 from the same source, and a week afterward a third $10,000.

To-day The Christian Herald sent to the State Department through the Red Cross $50,000 more, which was immediately cabled to the American Embassy in Tokio.

This makes $80,000 contributed by the readers of The Christian Herald alone. A large amount has already been subscribed from other sources, and most of the State organizations formed to collect funds for the famine-stricken Japanese have yet to be heard from.

WANTS US TO EDUCATE CHINA.

Prof. James Sees a Great Opportunity in the Coming Revolution.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—A movement has been instituted by Prof. Edmund J. James, President of the University of Illinois, for the appointment of an educational commission for the study of the social, intellectual, and industrial situation in China with a view to the regeneration of the Chinese Empire. Prof. James is a personal friend of President Roosevelt, and recently presented to him a memorandum on the subject which the President and Secretary Root now have under consideration. Prof. James says:

"It is possible for us at this time to plant ourselves distinctly on the side of those nations which propose to use intellectual and moral force, rather than brute force, in affecting the development of events in that mighty empire.

BIG FRENCH MINE STRIKE.

A Result of the Courrieres Disaster—30,000 Men Out.

LENS, March 16.—The miners' strike, as a protest against the management of the mines previous to the disaster at Courrières, is extending. About 30,000 men are out.

The removal of the bodies from the Courrières mine continues. There are two interments daily of unrecognizable bodies, which are buried together in trenches.

The workers are now approaching the most distant gallery, where several hundred dead remain.

New Hamburg-American Liner Sails.

DOVER, England, March 16.—The new Hamburg-American liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie, from Hamburg yesterday, sailed from here to-day on her maiden voyage to the West Indies and Mexico. The steamer is of 8,500 tons and has a speed of 15 knots.

MORE DELAY AT ALGECIRAS.

No Meeting To-day—Suggested Compromise on Police Question.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

ALGECIRAS, March 16.—The meeting of the conference set for to-morrow has been postponed, and no day has been named for the next sitting. This is interpreted in the sense that, though things have come to a dead-lock here, pourparlers are taking place directly and indirectly between Berlin and Paris, and that hopes of an amicable arrangement of the police question have not been abandoned.

It is worthy of notice that the postponement of to-morrow's meeting has not given rise to the complaints about unnecessary and intolerable delays so frequent at an earlier stage of the conference. Evidently the representatives of the disinterested powers, though still disposed to fret under the monotony and discomfort of the life at Algeciras, are conscious that the proceedings have reached a critical point and that personal interests sink into insignificance when compared with the great interests at stake.

Though the powers in question may have no direct interests in Morocco, it is recognized that the question of an agreement or rupture will necessarily affect the European situation as a whole, and the expressions "conséquences ultérieures evidentes" and "état de malaise en Europe" are often used in the academic discussions which go on from morning to night in the Reina Christina Hotel.

GERMAN AIRSHIP COMPANY.

To Construct War Craft — Result of Conversation at Kaiser's Table.

BERLIN, March 16.—An airship company, to construct and experiment with war craft, has been formed here. The Directors include well-known business men, who take up the matter from patriotic impulses and with the patronage of Emperor William. They are able to command the services of the best engineers.

The organization is a result of a conversation at the Emperor's table some nights ago. Four well-known financiers were his Majesty's guests, with several Generals and noblemen. The talk turned upon the results obtained by M. Juillot, the French engineer employed by the Lebaudy brothers of Paris in building the aerial machine recently tried by the French Ministry of War and adjudged suitable for military purposes. The patriotic action of the Lebaudys in presenting the invention to their Government was praised by the Emperor, and in the resulting talk the military men took the invention seriously, expressing the opinion that France's opponents in a war would have to take the device into account.

The airship company grew out of that conversation, and an aerial club will also be formed.

1,000 SLAIN IN NIGERIA.

British Driving Natives Toward Land Apportioned to Them.

LONDON, March 16.—A letter received by Sir Claude Champion de Crespigny from his son, Capt. de Crespigny, indicates that the British expedition against the Nandi tribe, in Northern Nigeria, is encountering unexpected resistance. The Captain says a thousand natives were killed in the recent "driving operations."

The Nandis occupy the territory in the vicinity of Victoria Nyanza, the terminus of the Mombasa Railroad, and have been menacing the railroad and raiding farms. The British attacked and defeated the Nandis, and subsequently decided to apportion to them a reserve some distance from the railroad. The Nandis objected, and the process of driving them toward the reserve led to sanguinary guerrilla fighting.

DEFENDS KILLING OF MOROS.

Capt. Franklin Tells Camp Fire Club of Their Ferocity.

The last dinner for the season of the Campfire Club was held last night in the studio of A. A. Anderson, 80 West Fortieth Street. A feature of the occasion was an impromptu address by Capt. Thomas Franklin, United States Army, in defense of Gen. Wood and his soldiers in their warfare with the Moros.

Mr. Anderson's studio is very large, with an organ occupying the south wall. Back of the raised table for the speakers and the host were eight skins of grizzly bears. Every skin was a trophy of a personal triumph. Three of them were gathered by Mr. Anderson at one time in what is still remembered in the West as a daring exploit.

Capt. Franklin's speech followed talks on hunting by Gen. Fred Grant and Gen. Horace Porter.

"You have all noticed," said he, "the criticism in the newspapers of Gen. Wood and President Roosevelt's congratulations after the recent victory over Moros. I am not here to apologize for the President. He needs no one to do that for him. Nor am I here to apologize for Gen. Wood. The killing of the 600 would have happened just the same if he had not been there by accident."

Capt. Franklin then told of the ferocity and fanaticism of the Moros as he had seen them in Jolo.

"They believe," said he, "that to die with the blood of white men on their hands means eternal happiness, with plenty of wives to roll cigarettes for them and brush away the mosquitos. The Moros are difficult, and there is only one way to deal with them."

Gen. Grant said in part:

"My biggest game was with the cavalry under Col. McKenzie of the old Fourth Cavalry. The Comanches were restless and giving trouble. I was with a company when they attacked us. We formed our horses in a circle, and at the first fire many of the Indians reeled in their saddles.

"One of them, a splendid brave, rode ahead, leading the charge. When he was about seventy-five yards away he fell. I got his scalp and most of his belongings. I have them all now on Governor's Island except the scalp. Mrs. Grant did not like that trophy about the house."

Gen. Porter, who followed Gen. Grant, said that the only tiger he had ever tackled was the one in Tammany Hall, and that that expedition had not been a particular success.

MARCUS BRAUN IS OUT.

Immigrant Inspector, Who Has Had Several Difficulties, Resigns.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The Secretary of Commerce and Labor to-day accepted the resignation of Marcus Braun as Immigrant Inspector at Quebec. The letter of resignation was not made public.

Marcus Braun, who lives in this city and is a Hungarian, was for several years an Immigrant Inspector at Ellis Island. Last year he was sent by the Government to Hungary to investigate an alleged conspiracy between a high official of the Austrian Government and the big steamship companies to foist undesirable immigrants on the United States.

While abroad he got into trouble with the Austrian authorities, whom he accused of tampering with his mail. The complaint led to representations by the State Department at Washington and explanations by the Austrian Government. On his return Braun had a controversy with Commissioner of Immigration Watchorn at Ellis Island.

STEAMSHIP GOES ASHORE IN HEAVY SNOW SQUALL

Cearense Aground on Jersey Coast—Passengers Taken Off.

CAPTAIN LOST HIS BEARINGS

Undertaker McCarthy Sticks by the Ship and the Crew—Expect to Float Steamer Soon.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 16.—The steamship Cearense of the Booth Line, carrying thirty-eight passengers and a million dollars' worth of rubber and sugar from Para and other South American ports, went aground in a blinding snow-squall just before daybreak this morning off Island Beach.

The Island Beach and Toms River life-saving crews heard her distress guns through the darkness, and as soon as it grew light they shot a line aboard the stranded steamer, but as she seemed to be in no immediate danger no passengers were taken off until some hours later.

When the sea had gone down lifeboats were sent out the Cearense, and all but one of her passengers were taken ashore. The single exception is J. J. McCarthy, an undertaker of Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. McCarthy thought it would be more fun to stick by the vessel.

The rescued passengers departed for New York and Philadelphia by early trains. Before they went they drew up a set of resolutions commending the coolness of Capt. Mason and the crew of the Cearense. A list of the passengers is not obtainable at this time, but they included Edward Carter of Portland, Me.; R. Shortless of Philadelphia, Miss L. Bailey Sarre of Philadelphia, Mrs. Allan W. Scott of Brooklyn, and George Warren of Denver.

After the breeches buoy had been rigged a sailor came ashore in it. Up to that time the life-saving crews did not know what vessel was in trouble. The sailor said that in the thick weather the Captain had lost his bearings, and even after the vessel had struck those on board did not know what part of the coast they had hit.

Soon afterward a steward from the Cearense came ashore in the breeches buoy, bringing dispatches to the owners and from the passengers to their relatives and friends. As he entered the surf a huge comber swept over him. Apparently he met it with his mouth open for he was almost asphyxiated when taken out of the breeches buoy.

All of the thirteen first-cabin passengers were in their berths when the vessel grounded. Nearly all of them felt her strike and they hurried on deck in all sorts of garbs. There Capt. Mason met them and calmed their fears, telling them that the steamer was in no immediate danger.

When day dawned a big crowd gathered on the beach to see the stranded vessel. In the middle of the forenoon the wreck tugs North America, from Lewes, and the R. J. Merritt, from New York, arrived and, steaming as close to the Cearense as they dared, took lines aboard. Kedge anchors were run out, and the work of holding the steamer off the beach was begun. By this time the vessel had swung around broadside to the sea, and it was feared she would begin to pound.

Not long after noon the sea had gone down so much that it was thought safe to land passengers. Lifeboats were then launched by the life-saving crews, who pulled alongside the Cearense. The passengers were lowered away in cradles made of blankets or ropes, their hand baggage following them. All were safely transferred and brought through the surf to shore, scarcely a bucketful of water being taken aboard the lifeboats.

The vessel to-night lies broadside on to the beach opposite Seaside Park, near Tom's River Life Saving Station. She is resting easily, and shows no signs of leaking. The Captain is considering the advisability of jettisoning the cargo of sugar to make easier the task of floating the vessel. The wreckers think she will come off as soon as the sea grows calm.

The Cearense is a single screw steel steamship of 1,748 tons net, and is 318 feet long. She was built in Barrow, England, in 1891, and runs regularly to South American ports.

Suits & Top Coats for Men
THE AUTHORITATIVE SPRING MODELS
$15.00 to $40.00

This clothing business of ours is pledged to big things and is governed by a mighty purpose.

With the manufacturer-at-large we have nothing in common. His is a haphazard product.

The exclusive to order tailor's level would be ours were it not for his method which does not influence the character of a garment. In all other things we are equal.

We would serve the men who demand of a suit or coat the innovations as soon as they are authoritative, the distinctiveness which is the inherent attribute of a garment of the highest character, plus the expressive tailoring that none but a master of the craft can exercise.

If all that appeal to your reason, this will appeal to your interest; our new series of spring models is as varied as the master designers have sanctioned—from the conservative garments to the most daring and radical that a young man can demand, both in form and fabric.

AMERICANS IN FATAL FIGHT.

British Sailor Killed—Member of Wild West Show Arrested.

GENOA, March 16.—A sailor belonging to the British battleship Bulwark was killed to-day by stabbing after a quarrel in a barroom with several foreigners, including members of Buffalo Bill's Wild West company.

One of the Americans, named Davis, was arrested, but his culpability has not yet been established.

Mr. Root Invited to Visit Chile.

WASHINGTON, March 16. — Señor Walker-Martinez, the Chilean Minister, has, by direction of his Government, invited Secretary Root to visit Valparaiso on his coming trip to the Rio conference. The Minister said his Government had not presented the invitation earlier because it was not known that Mr. Root would extend his trip beyond Buenos Ayres. Mr. Root is considering the invitation.

NO NEW PENNSYLVANIA LINE.

Company Denies That Through Chicago Route Is Contemplated.

PHILADELPHIA, March 16.—An official of the Pennsylvania Railroad denies the published report of a proposed new route for Pennsylvania through trains to Chicago. The route referred to is not yet constructed, and, when completed, would be roundabout and entirely impracticable for fast service.

The operating department of the Pennsylvania Railroad says that no plans will be considered for through trains which would not involve running through Pittsburg.

Another Great Loeser Shirt Sale.

1,500 New Shirts : : About Half Price.

THE LOESER SHIRT SALES of the past weeks have attracted attention of men everywhere. Thousands of shirts have been sold. Thousands of men have outfitted themselves for Summer and saved a third to half of the usual prices.

Now comes another great Shirt sale. Fifteen hundred absolutely new Negligee Shirts are concerned. There are 600 High Grade $1.50 White Madras Shirts at 79c.

900 Plain Blue 60c. Chambray Shirts at 35c. 3 for $1.

The fabrics were bought by the shirt maker under the usual prices—and he shared his advantage with us. That is the reason for the sale.

THE WHITE MADRAS SHIRTS AT 79c.—$1.50 VALUE—are the product of one of the best makers in the country. Made of fine white corded, self figured and striped madras. Made squarely up to the standard of the best $1.50 Shirts, each with a pair of separate cuffs to match. Sizes 14 to 17.

THE BLUE CHAMBRAY SHIRTS AT 35c.—60c. VALUE—are just such Shirts as men will be hurrying to buy at regular prices very shortly. A fine shade of blue and a chambray that will wear and launder well. Each Shirt with a pair of separate cuffs to match. Sizes 14 to 17.

Spring Clothing : : 100% Clothing For Men : : In a STORE for MEN

HUNDRED PER CENT. CLOTHING FOR MEN—inside the Elm Place door in an exclusive and separate STORE FOR MEN you will find it.

What is 100 per cent. Clothing?

It is Clothing that gives a hundred per cent. of STYLE and FIT and WEAR. It is clothing such as cannot be found in Brooklyn outside of the Loeser Store.

These new Spring styles, of which there is a full and splendid stock, well illustrate what we mean. They were made expressly for us. We chose the fine fabrics months ago as they came from the mills. We chose also the linings and trimmings and interlinings. The patterns were specially drafted. The GOOD HAND TAILORING was thoroughly done.

The result is Suits that have a swing and style that you will not find except in the product of the most expensive custom tailors. Suits that not only fit perfectly now, but will HOLD THEIR SHAPE until they are worn out.

This is 100 per cent. Clothing. This is the Clothing in the Loeser STORE FOR MEN.

Yet the prices are fair—not a bit higher than prices for very ordinary ready-to-wear Clothes in other places. Test these facts for yourself. These are the prices:

Business Sack Suits	$12.50 to $35
Prince Albert Coats and Vests	$20 to $32
Cutaway Coats and Vests	$15 to $25
Top Coats and Overcoats	$12.50 to $30

Young Men's Clothes : : A Specialty.

A distinctive group of new Spring clothes for young men is a feature of the STORE FOR MEN. They are particularly smart in style, and the patterns and colorings are such as young men will prefer. For ages 15 to 20 years, sizes 31 to 36. We believe that nowhere else in Brooklyn is such careful attention paid to clothes of this class.

Suits of plain and fancy fabrics, from	$10 up
Top Coats, from	$12.50 up

Main Floor, Elm Place.

Mousquetaire Gloves : :

The only stock in Brooklyn that is complete and good.

THE SCARCITY OF MOUSQUETAIRE GLOVES is in no way better illustrated than by the fact that Stores which ordinarily sell good qualities are glad enough now to get and exploit cheap and unsatisfactory grades.

But in this Store all season there has not only been a full stock, but the Gloves are of the finest quality—made of the best real French kid; made, too, as only the best makers in France know how to make them.

It is a very practical demonstration of Loeser service giving:

8 button glace French kid Gloves, in white and black, finest quality	$2 a pair
12 button glace French kid Gloves, in black, white and new tans and grays; finest quality	$2.50 a pair
16 button glace French kid Gloves, in black, white and Spring shades of tans and grays; finest quality	$3.25 a pair
20 button glace French kid Gloves, in black and white; finest quality,	$3.75 a pair

$2 Eight Button Mousquetaire Gloves at $1.50.

Made of real French kid, in tans, mode, browns, greens, pearl, navy and slates.

Women's Neckwear : : Full Showing And Many Quite Unusual Values.

THE NECKWEAR STOCK IS AT ITS FULLEST and prettiest now. It seems as though never before were there so many different and lovely bits of neck finery. It seems as though never before were we able to sell such pretty things for such modest prices.

To-day we give a hint of some of the special values—the things that are specially wanted, too:

49c. to 75c. Chemisettes, 25c. & 49c. Made of fine Persian lawn with lace and embroidery insertion, in a large variety of patterns.

75c. to 98c. Half Sleeves, 49c. & 75c. New Half Sleeves of lace and lawn, some are finished with ruffling on edge.

$3.98 Bolero Jackets at $2.98. Bolero Jackets made with pretty sleeves of fine net with lace insertions and edgings.

$1.49 to $2 Silk Scarfs, 98c. & $1.49. Liberty silk Scarfs, plain and flower designs.

New, Smart and WELL MADE Outer Wear for Girls.

MOTHERS AND BROOKLYN GIRLS have learned to look here for outer wear a bit different from the ordinary Clothes, Frocks and Coats and Suits, with a freshness and charm and individuality that cannot usually be found, and with the thoroughly good workmanship that insures good fit and good wear.

It is very generally demonstrated, too, that the Loeser prices are as low as or lower than the prices of ordinary Clothes in any other place. To-day we have a word about the "Wilralph" Frocks for Little Girls.

For which we accepted the Brooklyn representation because they are dainty and fresh as any garments could be that come out of clean, well lighted, sanitary work rooms and that show the effect of a desire to raise the making of girls' Clothes to a higher plane.

"Wilralph" Dresses at $3.98. Made of fine check ginghams, with separate waist of dotted Swiss. The waist is also finished with lace insertion down front, around neck and on the sleeves; the body of the dress is tucked back and front to shoulder depth; elbow sleeves; full box plaited skirt with deep hem; sizes 6 to 14 yrs.

"Piccadilly" Reefers at $4.98. Made of fancy gray mixtures, full back, double breasted front, emblem on sleeves, brass buttons, seams are all bound; sizes 6 to 14 years.

"Wilralph" Dresses at $1.93. One piece Dresses of fancy plaid ginghams. Waist is box plaited back and front and finished with bands of white pique, full sleeves with deep cuffs and pique bands. Side plaited skirt with deep hem; sizes 6 to 14 yrs.

Misses' Tailored Suits at $18.98 Made of fancy gray suitings, Eton coat, self strapped with fancy buttons around neck and vest formed of fancy silk braid, lined throughout with satin, circular gored skirt, plaited back and front and finished with folds of material around the bottom, neatly stitched; sizes 14, 16 and 18 yrs.

White Lawn Dresses at $2.25. Waist is full blouse front with yoke of insertions, finished with hemstitching; full sleeves with narrow cuffs of fine tucks and lace edging. Full gathered skirt with deep hem; sizes 4, 6 and 8 years.

"Piccadilly" Reefers at $6.98. Made of choice gray homespun and navy blue cheviots, lined throughout with mercerized sateen. These Reefers are made exclusively for the Loeser Store; sizes 6 to 14 years.

PARKER CALLS ON SOUTH TO FURNISH CANDIDATE

Democrats Must Get New Leader There, He Tells Southerners.

NO MAN IN NORTH CAN WIN

New York and Nebraska Threaten Party Destruction, and South Alone Can Prevent It.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., March 16.—Alton B. Parker of New York delivered an address before the Manufacturers' Club of this city to-night, in which he called upon Southern Democrats to give up following and take the leadership, even if it led to the White House.

The time had arrived, he declared, when the really effective Democrats of the country should be recognized, and they should no longer hesitate to accept those honors justly due them. With Nebraska and New York threatening to give themselves and the party over to further destruction, Southern Democrats should arise and declare themselves, he declared.

Judge Parker reviewed the many years of party strife in which Southern Democrats subordinated themselves and their interests to the party in the North, and said:

"While this conscientious devotion to an idea has commended itself to the Democrats of the whole country and has thus made and kept the party National during recent years, the people of the South have been its mainstay. Shirking no responsibility, seeking no National rewards, promoting no special interests or movements, they have neither been truculent in victory nor discouraged in defeat. But the time has come when new duties and responsibilities must be undertaken by the Democrats of the South. From the earliest days you have sent your best men into public life. They have been at once modest, able, devoted, patriotic, and honest. No jail or penitentiary has opened its hospitable doors to admit your Senators, Representatives, or Governors, nor have the officers of the law, from detectives to Attorney General, been compelled to hale them into the criminal courts.

"In the face of this record you have not only permitted us of the North to present to you candidates for President and Vice President, but you have insisted upon our doing so and have then voted for them, and that, too, when sometimes no other States did so.

"To-day the party organizations are lineless, their one-time leaders are dead or have abdicated, or, worse, have become Republicans, while in more than one State the threat hangs over them that they may become the victims of the spoiler, the destructive, or the corruptionist.

"When such conditions confront you, why should you hesitate any longer? Until the Democrats of Nebraska and New York and other Northern States have brought forth fruits meet for repentance—or at least so long as they are threatening to give themselves and the party over to further destruction—should you not assert yourselves? You have borne the heat and burden of the day. Your statesmen have demonstrated their ability not only to take care of the interests of their States and their section, but they have been the only dam against aggression at home and the threat of discredit abroad. Among them are men with the knowledge, experience, honesty, and courage to represent their fellow-partisans without the surrender of principle and their fellow-countrymen with safety and honor.

"But if this course would give Southern Democrats the recognition they deserve, it will also put them upon their mettle. It will make it necessary for them to insist upon devotion to ideas and principles; to avoid, as their character and traditions assure, extreme policies; to keep themselves thoroughly in touch with all the elements to be found in a National and progressive party, and to be ready and willing to anticipate and promote all the needs of a great country. The contending ambitions of self-seekers, the claims of interests purely local, the demands that grow out of the popular clamor, the shifty and shifting methods of the demagogue and the agitators—all those must be avoided, whether leadership comes from North or South, East or West."

CONDUCTOR HELD, TOO.

One City Railway Transfer Case Is Going to a Court of Record.

Joseph Moritz, an electrician, who lives at the Lexington Hotel, at Forty-seventh Street and Seventh Avenue, boarded a crosstown car going west at Fifty-ninth Street and Third Avenue Thursday night, and, knowing the new rule of the New York City Railway Company, says he asked for a transfer when he paid his fare. Conductor Patrick J. Hackett, he says, ignored him. When the car reached Madison Avenue Moritz asked again for a transfer.

"Against rules," said Hackett. "You should have asked for it when you paid your fare."

"I did," said Hackett.

"Forget it," said the conductor; "you didn't ask for a transfer, and you don't get any now."

Moritz grabbed at the pad of transfers Hackett had in his hand, and when the conductor resented his action they began to fight. Policeman Brady arrested Moritz, who wanted to make a counter-charge of assault against Hackett. This Sergt. Walsh declined to entertain.

Magistrate Walsh, in the Yorkville Court yesterday, however, took a different view of the case and ordered Moritz to make the counter-charge, and both men were held for trial in Special Sessions, that the matter may be settled in a court of record.

"This new transfer rule is causing a lot of trouble," said Magistrate Walsh.

"I know the rule is unpopular," answered Attorney Flaherty, who appeared for the company, "but it is for the benefit of the public, and the people will find it so in time."

"If the transfers are properly distributed," said James Parker, Chief Inspector for the company, "it will save a lot of delay. All this abuse of the new rule is unjustifiable. People get transfers when they don't need them, and give them to others, who have no right to their use."

MANY PICTURES SELL LOW

Five Resold from Thursday Night at a Total Increase of $25—Two Verestchagins Sold.

A crowd filled the room in the American Art Galleries, where the second half of the pictures belonging to the estates of Eliza M. Curtis and J. W. Brown were sold last evening, and the prices were fairly good. The returns with five pictures resold from Thursday night, were $29,955, making a total for the sale of $37,430. In addition to the paintings from the two estates a number belonging to Mrs. Lee W. Haggin of New York were sold last night.

It was a picture from the Curtis estate that brought the highest price of the evening, as well as of the sale—a large Vibert, which started at $1,000 and went for $2,600 to Otto Bernet, for a buyer whose name was not given. One of the ever-popular Schreyers, a small picture, "Seeking Shelter," brought the second-highest price, going to Knoedler & Co. for $1,800, and a little Mauve, "The Harrow," went to the same buyers for $1,500. A "Child's Head," by Knaus, sold for $1,300, going to George A. Dowden, and "Sheep Feeding," by Jacque, went to George H. Ainsley for $1,000. "Hoisting the Night Signal," by Emile Renouf, started at $100, but was bid up to $1,050, going to Richard M. Montgomery. C. M. Warner of Syracuse and Frederick C. Brown of Brooklyn, the two biggest buyers of Thursday's sale, made a number of purchases.

Eastman Johnson's picture, "A Drink with the Squire," considered the artist's best picture, went to Gen. Rush C. Hawkins for $850. A large and not particularly interesting Inness went to C. M. Warner for $800. A smaller copy is in the Metropolitan Art Museum.

Men's 15c to 25c High Grade Collars

There are exactly five hundred and fifty dozen Collars in this lot, which is not a very great quantity to offer for a Saturday Sale; but the values are so exceptional that we'll gladly pass them along as far as they'll go.

These Collars represent "special order" goods, made by one of the biggest concerns in Troy—for exclusive furnishers. Every collar is strictly four-ply, hand laundered and in perfect condition.

They come in the very newest and most wanted shapes, just as you see them in the illustrations (only a few styles are shown here). Part of them are a well-established 15-cent grade; the remainder are solid linens, with hand-worked button holes—always sold at 25 cents.

Nine shapes—in Folds and Wings—of various heights; a full complement of sizes of each kind. Collars that none but the most particular dresser would wear. Positively none sent C. O. D. and no mail orders filled—for they'll hardly last the day out. Six for 50 cents.

Bacon Got Judgment Against N. Y. Building-Loan Co.

$100 A DAY FOR INFLUENCE

He Was to Prevent Supt. Kilburn from Winding Up the Concern and Alleges a Contract.

Arguments were heard yesterday on the appeal of the case of Charles P. Bacon against the New York Building Loan Company, before the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, the cause growing out of a judgment for $28,481 obtained by Bacon for services rendered. The services were provided for in a verbal contract entered into on Nov. 5, 1902, by which Bacon was to be paid $100 a day by the company for exerting his influence at Albany against the efforts of Superintendent of Banks Frederick D. Kilburn, who wanted the company dissolved, and also in legal proceedings founded on the report of Supt. Kilburn.

Attorney General Mayer appeared for the people yesterday, Charles W. Dayton for the receiver of the company, and E. S. Griffing and John B. Stanchfield for Bacon.

Mr. Mayer read from a statement by Bacon that he had said when asked to look out for the interests of the company that he never went to Albany for less than $1,000. He agreed to give up his home and business in California, however, if he were paid $100 a day. Mr. Mayer said it was hard to see what Bacon had done that was of any value.

"It seems incredible," he declared, "that the officers of a building and loan association should have the audacity, when their company was under attack, (unless they foresaw inevitable dissolution,) to make a contract to pay a salary of $100 a day for such fragmentary, will-o'-the-wisp services as Bacon's. Mr. Bacon made trips to Albany. On his direct examination it was a trip a week for 207 days or 44 weeks that he testified to. On cross-examination this shrunk to twenty, 'more or less.' Each and every one was for the purpose of seeing Attorney General Cunneen. Mr. Cunneen was willing to swear that he didn't see him altogether more than ten times, and he thought the number less.

"We take it that if any member of the New York Building Loan Company had learned that such a contract as this had been made the Supreme Court would gladly have enjoined the officers against permitting it to be carried out. It is incredible that any such contract could have been made, and the testimony of the claimant should have been believed by the referee.

"There is no proof whatever that any services were rendered here. It is not shown that this claimant has really practiced law since 1891. To be sure, he has given advice and he has had certain diplomatic missions to Albany."

Mr. Mayer incidentally referred to Andrew Hamilton and Frank H. Platt as having been employed by the company formerly.

Mr. Stanchfield said that Bacon was a lawyer with the experience of a quarter of a century, whose specialty had been corporation law, and declared that if those who had employed Bacon didn't think his services were worth $100 a day they should produce a witness who would be willing to say so.

Decision was reserved.

"Foot Mould"---The Best-Looking, Best-Wearing Shoe Sold at Medium Prices.

First of all, "Foot Mould" shoes are STYLISH. Both men's and women's models duplicate the very choicest productions of the highest-priced custom makers in every line and curve.

Second, "Foot Mould" shoes are reliable. There are more months of wear to be had out of them than from any shoe we know that is sold at prices from $3 to $4.

Third, "Foot Mould" shoes are unquestionably the best-fitting shoes in the ready-to-wear shoe market to-day. It was their smooth, snug but easy fit that first suggested their name and gave them their first reputation.

Two New Spring Styles.

We have a new "Foot Mould" Woman's style in a "combination pump"—that is a shoe that can be worn either as an Oxford or as a full-dress slipper. The cut shows it as a dress pump. When worn as an Oxford the bow is removed and the usual elastic lacings are revealed. The shoe is a strikingly stylish model, the upper being made all in one piece; entirely seamless. Patent leather, dull kidskin or gun-metal kidskin.......... $3 and $3.50

A new Spring style for men shown. Made of dull calfskin or patent leather in Blucher style or buttoned.......... $3, $3.50 and $4

A handsome souvenir match safe to wearers of "Foot Mould" Shoes.

COAL MINERS INDORSE MITCHELL'S PEACE PLAN

Belligerent Propositions Voted Down at Indianapolis.

WILL MEET THE OPERATORS

Mitchell Alone Saves Dolan from Expulsion from Convention—Delegate Talks of Hanging.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 16.—The special National Convention of the United Mine Workers of America this afternoon indorsed the action of the Executive Board in sustaining the finding of President John Mitchell in ousting Patrick Dolan and Uriah Bellingham from the Presidency and the Vice Presidency of District 5, Western Pennsylvania. As far as the National organization is concerned this is the end of Dolan's case.

Only the pleas of President Mitchell and of Secretary W. D. Wilson prevented the expulsion of Dolan from the organization. Dolan was seated as a delegate in the convention, as was Bellingham. The two actions followed immediately on the partial report of the Credentials Committee, which included the names of Bellingham and of Dolan as delegates.

President H. C. Perry of Illinois district jumped to his feet as the Secretary of the Credentials Committee ceased reading and said:

"I move to accept the report except in so far as Mr. Dolan and Mr. Bellingham's names are concerned, and that they be stricken out."

Secretary Wilson asked if, under this motion, if carried, Dolan's case would come up for separate consideration by the convention, and was told that it would. A motion to accept the report as read prevailed.

Delegate James J. Haskell then moved that Dolan be declared not seated by the convention. Secretary Wilson opposed the motion.

President Mitchell said: "No one man in this convention has greater cause for resentment against Patrick Dolan than I; no one man in this convention has been more grossly wronged by him than I have. But I hope I am big enough to forget personal wrongs when the laws of the United Mine Workers of America are called into question. You will make a mistake if you refuse to seat Mr. Dolan. Whether he does justice to me or not, I will do justice to him. I want to appeal to you to vote down this motion.

"Fears have been expressed that Patrick Dolan will interfere with the work of the Scale Committees. I wish to state that if there is any such interference I shall at once convene this convention and this motion will be at once taken up for action."

Delegate Walker of Illinois inquired whether it would be violation of the laws of the organization to hang Dolan.

President Mitchell suggested that this statement might be differently construed when read in cold type. Walker replied: "I don't care how it is construed."

"The organization cares," replied President Mitchell.

The motion to unseat Dolan was lost and the language of Walker was stricken from the record.

The report of the Scale Committee was adopted as follows:

Whereas, The President of the United States has requested President Mitchell to make another effort to avert a strike of the coal miners of the country, and

Whereas, President Mitchell has called a convention as per request of the President of the United States, therefore be it

Resolved, That we heartily indorse the policy and action of President Mitchell in this matter and now hold ourselves in readiness to meet our employers for the purpose of endeavoring to effect a satisfactory settlement of the wage question.

F. L. Robbins, President of the Pittsburg Coal Company and leader of the bituminous operators, arrived to-day. Mitchell and Robbins held a conference to-day at the National headquarters of the miners.

STEAM COAL HIGHER IN APRIL.

Dealers Say Rates for Small Sizes Probably Will Rise.

It was stated yesterday by members of the Coal Dealers' Association that no April orders are being taken by the sales agents of the coal-carrying companies for small steam sizes, or for what is known as broken anthracite. The latter is used in locomotive engines, while the small steam sizes are used for elevators and other plants of hotels, apartment houses, and office buildings.

The members of the association had informal conferences yesterday, but no meeting will be called until it is known what will happen after April 1. The following statement was made yesterday by a member of the association:

The prices generally thus far have not been advanced to the dealers. The probabilities are that the April prices will open higher this year than usual. The present prices were established at the conclusion of the strike of 1902. They are not based altogether on the small steam sizes, which are $3 a ton for buckwheat, $2.50 for smaller buckwheat, and $2 for rice, free on board at the shipping ports. The dealers have been at times able to buy a great deal of their supply in these sizes from the individual operators at much less than the circular prices of the companies. The increased demand for steam sizes of anthracite has hindered to a great extent the ability of the dealers to obtain their supplies from individual operators at a lower price than the company prices. We are simply awaiting developments.

J. J. HILL FOR SPOONER PLAN.

He Says Some Rates Are Too High, but Rate Bill Will Do Harm.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—James J. Hill, President of the Great Northern Railroad, came to Washington from South Carolina to-day to confer with Secretary Taft in regard to the building of railroads in the Philippines. Mr. Hill expressed interest in the pending debate in the Senate on rate legislation, and talked without hesitation in regard to this.

"I suppose this legislation," he said, "is to come, and the railroads, so far as I know, are placing no obstacles in its way. I think that whatever may be done, it will serve to make the situation even worse than it is now regarded as being. There are so many complications now in the management of railroads that anything that will add to them must make the cost of operation greater.

"I think that examination would reveal that so delicately are railroad properties managed that the profits in many cases might very easily be affected by any meddling legislation. For instance, the dividend to the stockholders of our road, and that is all that they get in the way of profits, is represented by a copper cent on a ton of freight hauled five miles. Compare that with what may be called the profit earned by a man who with his team of two horses and wagon hauls that amount of freight—and a ton is a fair load for a two-horse team over the distance of five miles—and you can see what railroads mean to the public. The man with his team could make one trip a day with a ton for a load, returning empty. That is a comparison.

"The South is unfortunate in having too many roads. If she had one-half or a third less and would build up traffic the roads would pay better

"I have no guess as to how the pending contention over rate legislation will turn out. I am familiar with the amendment that Senator Spooner has prepared, and I think it is a very well devised plan to meet the case. He proposes to have the railroads deposit money equal to the difference between the disputed rate and the rate made by the Inter-State Commerce Commission, in some place to be designated by the court until the court may decide whether the rate shall stand, the money to go whichever way the case is decided. It is proposed that the roads shall make a monthly report to the Inter-State Commerce Commission of shippers, amounts of freight, and rates in which the rate is disputed. That is entirely feasible. Of all the plans this is, I believe, the best yet thought of to meet the situation."

STOPS FRAUD ON ACTRESSES.

Agents Who Cheat Them Must Return Fees If This Bill Passes.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 16.—Senator Tully introduced in the Senate to-day a bill amending the employment agency law in some important particulars.

The principal provision, which will be of interest to young women who have paid fees to so-called theatrical agents for engagements out of the city, and have traveled long distances, only to find out that they had been bunkoed, set forth that in every instance where such conditions shall be found to exist the agent must within three days return to the person from whom the fee was collected not only the fee itself, but all sums spent for transportation and other expenses, under penalty of losing his license and being deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

The same section applies to shipping agencies and nurses' registry bureaus.

Metcalfe Fight Results in Bills to Protect All Theatregoers.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 16.—A bill to meet the exigencies arising in the controversy James S. Metcalfe, the theatrical critic, has had with the Theatrical Trust was introduced in the Assembly by Murphy of New York and in the Senate by Gardner of Brooklyn to-day, its main provision being to compel the managers of places of amusement to permit any person to enter these places unless his conduct on the premises is such as to make him objectionable. The bill says:

"All persons within the jurisdiction of the State shall be entitled to the full accommodations, advantages, facilities, and privileges of licensed theatres and places of amusement, and a person who, as owner or lessee or manager or employe of a licensed theatre or place of amusement, excludes without just cause or excuse from said theatre or place of amusement any person, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

METERS MUST BE HONEST.

Assembly Advances Bill for Better Protection of Consumers.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 16.—The Moreland bill, having for its objects the better protection of consumers of gas and the possible elimination of Jastrow Alexander as State Inspector of Gas Meters, was advanced to-day in the Assembly. The desire to further curb the gas companies overcame all thought with reference to the New York district leader whose position is endangered by the measure.

The bill provides that gas companies may not install meters unless they shall have been tested and approved by the State Commission; further, that consumers may demand an inspection and test at any time by the company, and if it be unsatisfactory an appeal to the State Commission may be had. The companies are required to keep testing apparatus which has been approved by the State Commission.

CUTS PAWNSHOP INTEREST.

Bill Reducing Rates from 30 to 18 Per Cent. Passes Assembly.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 16.—The Eckmann bill, fixing rates of interest pawnbrokers may charge, passed the Assembly today. At present they may charge 30 per cent. interest for sums under $100. This is divided 3 per cent. per month for the first six months and 2 per cent. per month for the second six months. The Eckmann bill limits the amount that may be charged to 18 per cent., divided 2 per cent. per month for the first six months and 1 per cent. per month for the second six months.

MAHER BOUT CALLED OFF.

Man Who Offered $50 for a Purse Robbed of $200—Free Fights Outside.

Peter Maher, the Irish prizefighter, and Joseph Savage, were billed to give the star bout at the weekly meeting of the Summit Athletic Club, at the Palace Garden in East Thirteenth Street, last night, but they didn't perform. Both were on hand, but before their bout was reached it developed that there was some disagreement about money.

Maher climbed into the ring and announced that he was ready to go on, but that there was no money in sight, and he did not propose to fight for his health. Then it was whispered that some one had decamped with the money derived from the sale of the tickets. Some enthusiast suggested that a purse be made up.

"Good idea," shouted a well-dressed man, pulling a big roll of bills from his pocket; "I'll give $50."

Nothing more came of the purse proposal, however, and the man with the roll sat down. Pretty soon he jumped up again and yelled:

"I've been touched for my money. My $200 is gone."

It was, but nobody seemed willing to admit having taken it.

Then the crowd began to file down stairs and out into the fresh air. The latter had a bad effect on some of them, evidently, for in a jiffy half a dozen fights were on. Police Captain McDermott sent a hurry call for the reserves, but they had little to do. Two arrests were made.

SNOW CONTRACTOR HAS A HARD TIME OF IT

Can't Get Enough Shovelers, and the Streets Stay Slushy.

PARADE ROUTE CLEANED UP

But There's a Lot of Work to be Done Yet, and the City Officials Aren't Hopeful.

Over in Fifth Avenue, where the city has a snow removal office, there was a hot time yesterday. One by one the district snow Superintendents came in with reports that there was a dearth of snow-shovelers. The Chief of the Snow Bureau threw an icy glance at each report and demanded explanations from Contractor Bradley, who has the job of removing the snow from the city's streets. It was said he had not made good his promise of Thursday that he would have 3,000 carts at work in Manhattan early yesterday morning and 2,500 at work in Brooklyn.

Then came a report that the contractor would not be able to clear the streets for a week. The telephone wires began to hum, and they were kept hot between the Fifth Avenue snow office and the snow contractor's office over in Twenty-fourth Street, near Third Avenue. The snow Superintendent declared that all of the leading avenues in Manhattan would have to be cleaned up by 6 o'clock Saturday night. Contractor Bradley said he would do his best to clean them, but he wouldn't promise.

About noon, when things were getting hotter in the snow office and colder between the contractor and the Snow Superintendent the sun started work, and got rid of more snow than either the Snow Superintendent or snow contractor had been able to get rid of. It was then evident that if the snow contractor kept cool and cleaned up Broadway the sun would clear the snow from the side streets.

Both worked in harmony, with the result that the snow contractor succeeded in cleaning part of Broadway, part of 125th Street, part of Fifty-ninth Street, part of Forty-second Street, a piece of Twenty-third Street, half a mile of Fourteenth Street, a few yards of Grand Street, and some of the streets in the Wall Street district. Broadway, in Williamsburg, was partly cleaned by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Railroad Company. The folks over in Williamsburg hung out flags when they saw three of the contractors' snow wagons appear, but the snow wagons stopped only in Kent Avenue, leaving the other streets in slush ankle-deep.

One man, who said he had once seen a snow wagon in Bushwick Avenue, was nearly mobbed for daring to make such an assertion. At any rate, the snow contractor managed to clear some of the Brooklyn streets before midnight.

Among the Manhattan streets that were thoroughly cleaned were those through which the St. Patrick's Day parade will pass. These are Fifth Avenue, 120th Street, Madison Avenue, and 126th Street.

Some of the streets leading from the Bowery, such as Prince and Spring, were left in bad shape. The New York City Railway sent a snow plow through Spring Street that drove folks from the sidewalks and swept the snow into the stores and dwellings. Many who didn't hurry enough were covered with mud.

Late last night the snow contractor was still hoping. Meanwhile some of the principal streets uptown, including Forty-second Street, were as slushy as if shovelers had never seen them.

Two Splendid Examples from Our Vast Showing of New Spring Clothes for Men.

What would first impress a man in our showing of new spring suits and overcoats? First, perhaps, the very bigness and magnitude of it. At closer range he would marvel at the unlimited assortment of fabrics and the great series of models revealing every knack of fashion. Let him but go one step further—try on a garment, note its perfect fit and set, a test which will be proof conclusive that in every phase this showing is complete. From such a showing we present these two special values in black suits and spring overcoats.

Men's Single & Double Breasted Black Suits, Special at $15

These black suits are fashioned in twelve distinct new models. Some are conservative, others are radical, with broad lapels, shaped in back and deep side or centre vents.

Other Black Suits, $12.50, $18, $20, $25 and $30.

Men's Silk Lined-to-Edge Black Overcoats, Special at $18

Rich, luxurious garments in medium length models, made of soft rough-surface black fabrics. The silk lining is throughout the coat and extends to the edge of lapels.

Every other new type of Overcoat $12.50 to $30.

Smartness Correctness Worthiness

The three distinguishing marks of good clothes characterize these lines of ours. These garments are produced by America's six leading wholesale tailoring concerns and by the system of Brill-directed organizations who tailor expressly for us. Here are more models, more fabrics, more and handsomer patterns and better values than we have ever attempted to show before. These values, indeed, can only be had in Brill stores because made possible only by the scope of the Brill business, the strength of the Brill organization and the willingness of the Brill concern to be content with modest profits.

1906 Spring Showing

1906 Men's Spring Suits	$10 to $35
1906 Men's Spring Coats and Topcoats	$10 to $35
1906 Men's Spring Coats (Louis XV. fitted back models)	$15 to $50

TAFT TO WAIT A WHILE; MAY BE CHIEF JUSTICE

President and War Secretary Reach Full Understanding.

NO DESIRE FOR PRESIDENCY

Fuller Is Aging, and If He Retires This Summer Taft Will Take His Place.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The President and Secretary Taft have come to a complete understanding in regard to the appointment of the latter to the Supreme bench. The War Secretary returned last night from New York, where he had a talk with his brothers in regard to the matter, and this morning he went to the White House and remained in conference with the President for an hour. When he came out he said that he had nothing to say. A few minutes later this statement was given out by Secretary Loeb:

"As Mr. Justice Brown will not retire until June, when the Supreme Court will take a vacation until the second Monday in October, and no public inconvenience can arise from a vacancy continuing through the vacation, the President will take further time to decide the question of Mr. Justice Brown's successor. Several names, including that of Secretary Taft, have been under consideration, but no decision has been reached, or is likely to be reached or announced in the near future."

Secretary Taft, when asked if he would make any statement following the announcement from the President, replied: "No, that settles it, so far as I am concerned. I have no more to do with it."

All of which means that the President desires Taft on the bench, and Taft wishes to be there and will be if fate and the future hold an even hand as to the conditions. The vague statements from the President and Secretary Taft are, of course, open to varying interpretations, but from an undoubted source there is information that the purpose is that Taft shall ascend the Supreme Court bench in due time. He has assured the President that he still retains the leading ambition of his life to be a Judge.

The President, with a strong sense of the great services of the Secretary to the Administration, to the country, and personally to himself, is deeply anxious to confer the honor that he desires. With this agreement the matter would end by the appointment of the Secretary to the vacancy to be made by the retirement of Justice Brown.

But this is not all of the matter, as understood by the President and the Secretary. The President wants Taft to be Chief Justice and the Secretary naturally cherishes the ambition to reach that high station. At the same time Chief Justice Fuller, although three years past the point of time when he might have availed himself of the statutory privilege of retirement, continues on the bench and manifests every desire to keep actively at work.

Until the Chief Justice signifies his intention to retire no step could be taken to appoint Secretary Taft to the Supreme bench with any idea of making him Chief Justice when the opportunity actually should occur. It has been the precedent, having the force practically of unwritten law, not to select a Chief Justice from the Supreme Court bench, because this course, it has been believed, would eventually lead to strife among the Associate Justices to secure the honor. Secretary Taft would not accept an appointment with any such understanding, nor would the President entertain the plan for a moment. It has therefore been decided to wait without any adjustment of the matter until the passage of the Summer months, which with their possible developments may give further chance for the psychological moment to occur.

It is not known whether the fact has come to the attention of the President, but there is much said about the evident failing of the Chief Justice physically. He has several times fallen asleep while presiding on the bench. The gossip in regard to this matter has not gone much further than this, yet it is said that there have been hints from more than one Associate Justice that old age does not contribute to the ability to dispatch work in the amount and with the regularity that unavoidably must mark the labors of a Judge.

It is not improbable that the Chief Justice may during the Summer feel inclined to take the rest that retirement will afford him, and in that event the appointment of Taft would come at once.

There are considerations in the matter that have received little publicity. The prominence of Secretary Taft as a Presidential quantity has unavoidably brought the political aspect of his opportunity for preferment into consideration.

The War Secretary has been pleased by the mention of his availability for the succession to Roosevelt, and he might, if once forced by the concatenation of events to enter the office, enjoy it. But he does not want to be President, and does not especially desire to undergo the ordeal of being a candidate. In his career he has been a scholar and a Judge, and has never got so deep into politics as to run for office. He does not hanker after political excitement. He dislikes the worries and buffetings of the executive place he now so ably fills. All this is not law, and the law is what he enjoys, and especially in the chosen capacity of a jurist in active and continued hard work on the bench. He has no earnest desire to be President.

REHN GETS $200 PRIZE.

Wins First Award at Salmagundi's Black and White Exhibition.

The exhibition of pictures in black and white at the Salamagundi Club attracted nearly all its members to the clubhouse, in West Twelfth Street, last night. The public exhibition will be continued until March 24.

The prize of $200 for the best work exhibited went to F. K. M. Rehn, whose picture, "The Moonlit Sea," won the vote of the members of the club. The prize was presented by Samuel T. Shaw of the Grand Union Hotel.

Francis Russell Green got second mention with his "Autumnal Skies." Hy Mayer's drawings attracted much attention, as did those of R. Sheldon and Charles Warren Eaton.

MUSIC FOR LOCKED-IN HOUSE.

Fulkerson Whistles During Dead-Lock Over Lieutenant Generalcy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The House bill to abolish the grade of Lieutenant General in the army was the subject of a battle royal in the House this afternoon, ending in a dead-lock after members of the body had been locked in for more than an hour while the Sergeant at Arms searched lobbies, committee rooms, and near-by hotels for absentees. Mr. Prince of Illinois, who was in charge of the bill, finally gave up the fight for passage after obtaining a ruling from the Speaker that the bill would be in order for a vote immediately after the roll call on Monday morning.

In the parliamentary struggle which followed, four roll calls, each requiring forty minutes, were demanded. Twice the House refused to adjourn and opponents of the Grosvenor amendment were in the majority on every vote, but on each it developed that there was no quorum.

For the last three-quarters of an hour, with the doors of the House locked while the search for absentees went on, Representative Fulkerson of Missouri supplied an unexpected diversion. He is an expert whistler and entertained his fellow-prisoners with a "continuous performance," his répertoire including most of the National airs and a number of the good old songs. In addition to carrying the air the Missourian produced an obligato in two tones, resembling exactly the notes of the xylophone. Loud and prolonged applause greeted each selection, and the Speaker, marooned on his chair, did not scorn to lean forward in an attitude of marked attention as the impromptu vaudeville went on.

As 7 o'clock drew near, the imprisonment began to pall despite the vaudeville, and members who had voted against the Grosvenor amendment began to change their votes. The majority in favor of immediately abolishing the Lieutenant Generalship dwindled to four and then Mr. Prince brought the long dead-lock to an end by moving to adjourn with the understanding noted.

SUBWAY LIGHTS WENT OUT.

The Pay Car Had Just Left $4.30 Too Much at One Station.

The pay car made its regular weekly trip up and down the Subway yesterday afternoon, dropping its yellow envelopes full of bills and change for the ticket sellers and choppers along the line. It stopped at a certain station between Ninety-sixth Street and Columbus Circle about 1:30 o'clock, and the motorman let forth a screech from his whistle to let the chopper and his mate know that the ghost was on the rails.

"Somethin' doin'!" he shouted.

"We're on," replied the station men, and they piled into the car to receipt for their pay. When the car had disappeared toward the next station the chopper, who was counting his pay, jumped from his seat with an uncanny yell.

"They've given me $4.30 too much," he yelled to the man in the cage.

"Stop foolin'," said the ticket seller.

"There 'tis," offered the chopper, face aglow, slamming the money down on the counter. Then the Subway lights went out—all the way from Columbus Circle to Ninety-sixth Street and then on up the Lenox Avenue line.

The doubting ticket seller was so excited through the mistake of the paymaster and the sudden darkness at the station that he gave a woman only 65 cents in change when she offered a dollar bill for a ticket. "It's cert'ny confusing," he said as he balanced the woman's account.

A minute later the telephone wires on the Sunbway were busy with an effort by headquarters to find out why the lights had disappeared. A gang of workmen who investigated found out that it was No. 2 wire that was in trouble. They were certain it was No. 2, but further than that they were in doubt. To relieve the situation they hitched a wire to the third rail, which furnished four lights over each ticket window at every station where there was darkness. At 3 o'clock the workmen thought they had found the leak, and then found again that they hadn't found it at all. They said that "No. 2 was a Jonah" and had caused them all sorts of trouble last Summer. Later the wire was cut in two places in an effort to "find the ground," as they described it; but up to a late hour last night the "ground" wasn't visible. As a consequence the stations along the line were in semi-darkness all evening.

The workmen say they'll find the break if they have to cut the wire every foot of the way between Fifty-ninth Street and the Bronx.

IVINS FOR THE ELSBERG BILL.

If It Fails, All New Subways Will Go to Ryan and Belmont, He Says.

William M. Ivins issued a statement yesterday, after a meeting of his rapid transit organization at his office, 27 William Street, in which he called attention to the fact that the Elsberg Rapid Transit bill had been so amended that its former mandatory provision, requiring the separation of construction and operation contracts for future subways, had been made merely discretionary with the Rapid Transit Cmmission. Mr. Ivins urged that, with the great objection to the original bill withdrawn, its early passage should be generally urged.

"If the Elsberg bill fails to become a law and the present Rapid Transit act be not amended," said Mr. Ivins, "it will be compulsory for the Rapid Transit Board to give the contracts for construction, equipment, maintenance, and operation all to the same party and at the same time. They will have absolutely no discretion in the premises, and under those conditions there will be no competitive bidding, and the control of the new subways will fall absolutely into the hands of the Ryan-Belmont company.

FREAK GERMAN STAMPS SOLD.

Pair of a Special Blue Five-Pfennig Issue Brings $85.

A rare pair of German 5 pfennig stamps in the A. H. Scholle collection sold for $85 at the closing sale last evening at 24 West Twenty-sixth Street. The stamps were unused, the blue Reichs Post of 1900, which never was put in circulation. The color of the 5 pfennig of this issue is green. Several years ago a customer of a Berlin stamp dealer showed him one of the stamps that was blue. The stamp dealer took it to the Post Office authorities, and asked if they had issued the stamp in that color. They had not. The color was due to a chemical change. To prove this theory a special sheet of 100 5-pfennig stamps in blue was issued and presented to the Royal Postal Museum, which adds to its collection all oddities it can get. The sale of twenty of these stamps through a dealer to collectors raised a storm in the Berlin Stamp Society. The Government issued an order that no more museum stamps be sold under any condition. Of the twenty blue stamps sold, six are in this country.

A used pair of the 9-schilling Hamburg issue of 1859 brought $42; an unused 2-cent green Labuan, issue of 1879, $17; an unused 1-shilling Bahama, issue of 1862, $22, and a used 4-centimes, Swiss Federal, issue of 1849-50, $61.

CANNON DENOUNCED HOTLY BY SHACKLEFORD

Democrat, by a Ruse, Assails His Action on the Statehood Bill.

CALLS THE SPEAKER DESPOT

Dalzell, Out of Hearing, Learns of What Is Being Said and Shuts the Orator Off.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—By an ingenious device Representative Shackleford of Missouri to-day succeeded in getting into The Congressional Record a fierce denunciation of the Speaker's attempt to keep Oklahoma out of the Union. The Missourians, Kansans, and Southwesterners generally are fairly seething with indignation over Mr. Cannon's action in undertaking single-handed to prevent the Senate and House from admitting the Territory, but the rules of debate prevent them from putting themselves on record.

Shackleford, however, managed to get in his denunciation in this way: He waited until an unimportant bill leasing some land in Colorado to a rubber company was before the House. Nobody was paying any attention to the debate, and the noise of conversation rose in a steady hum over the voices of the orators. This was the Missourian's chance. He took the floor and started in on his excoriation. Everybody supposed he was speaking on the Rubber bill, except a few who were gathered near enough to hear him. On the Republican side not a man heard him and very few on the Democratic side could catch a word.

Shackleford proceeded on his unparliamentary way unchecked until the laughter and applause of the little knot of Democrats around him excited the attention of Dalzell, chief sandbagger for the House machine. Dalzell sent an investigator over to the Democratic side and the scout came flying back with a horror-stricken face to report that Shackleford was giving the Speaker the dressing down of his life. In a moment Dalzell bounced up with an objection and Shackleford was shut off.

This is what he said before he was discovered:

"Mr. Speaker, how has this bill come before the House for consideration? As The Record is being made up it will appear that the gentleman from Colorado, on his own motion, in his own right, moved the consideration of this bill. In that respect The Record will not reveal the truth. The gentleman was not recognized until he had first surrendered his Constitutional rights as a Representative of the people and had crept into your private room, Mr. Speaker, there to supplicate you to extend to him your grace.

"No member can submit any matter to a vote of the House until he shall have first sought and found favor in your sight. The Constitution contemplated that the Speaker should be the servant of the House. In defiance of the Constitution, you have made yourself its master. You have packed every committee so that no bill can be reported without your consent. Unless you are willing, no member can move to discharge a committee from the consideration of a bill and take it up in the House. You are an enthroned despot, subjecting the rights and destinies of this great people to the dictates of your own unbridled will.

"Who stands to-day between a progressive and enlightened people and the Statehood that they desire? You, Sir; only you! You crack your whip and a majority of this House cowers at your feet. You turn your thumb down and the House deals the death blow to prostrate, bleeding Oklahoma. I read in the morning papers that 'Uncle Joe' has given it out flat-footed that he will not permit the House to concur in the Senate amendments to the Statehood bill. What a horrible announcement to be made in a free country!"

HAS ANY ONE SEEN MAC?

He Ornaments Upper Broadway When at Home, but He's Missing.

Mac is lost. Since Saturday, when he started to see the world, he has not been seen by his master or by any of his master's friends, who are on the lookout for him.

Mac is an English bull terrier belonging to C. W. Gray. He and his master run a bicycle store together at 2,384 Broadway. Mac is built on the ordinary bull terrier plan, but his marking is highly original. He is brindle, with the exception of his feet, his left eye, and a long, meandering streak down the middle of his back. These are white. Mac's eccentric coloring, together with his sociable nature and his habit of following his master's bicycle on all its travels, have made Mac a celebrity along upper Broadway and the Riverside Drive.

Mac started down Sixty-seventh Street, when the wanderlust seized him. He seems to have become friendly with a German, who took him home on Sunday. But the German's wife would have none of Mac, so her husband took him out and lost him. Since then nothing has been heard of him.

58 New Spring Styles
In 114 Regal Stores

The new Spring Regals have just arrived in our stores, direct from the Regal factories.

Regal styles are new styles—new this Spring—less than six weeks away from the original designs of the fashion-creating custom bootmakers of New York, Paris and London.

New styles are shown and are on sale in the 114 Regal stores months earlier than anywhere else—and in any other store the same style, fit and quality costs you $6.00.

Regal styles are correct styles—absolutely—in every detail of shape, materials and workmanship. With Regals you can go anywhere on any occasion in the comfortable assurance that your footwear is strictly in style with the LATEST hand-made models worn by the most fashionable discriminating people in the world. Every Style in Quarter Sizes!

$3.50 The cost of raw hides and leather has been rapidly advancing for two years, until now you have good reason to be suspicious of any shoe offered you at the same price as last year, and a satisfactory explanation should be demanded. We maintained our uniform $3.50 price for all Regals as long as possible—even sacrificing entirely on certain Regal styles the one small, fair Regal profit—in the hope that the cost of materials would ultimately decrease to a normal point; but there is now no apparent likelihood of that outcome and consequently there has been just one of two things for us to do: either to stop making some lines of Regal shoes or else charge a price increased sufficiently to balance their increased cost. From the very beginning we have consistently built into every pair of Regal shoes the best materials suited to that particular style—and we shall never change that policy. We guarantee that in any $3.50 Regal model you will get absolutely the best materials suited to that style. $4.00

WHISTLED A FIRE ALARM.

Engineer Roused a Sleeping Family Just in Time to Escape.

The engineer of a Long Island Railroad train passing through Queens about 2 o'clock yesterday morning saw a house on fire near the tracks. He blew his whistle, sounded the bell, and aroused some of the residents. Henry Flaherty and his wife and three children and a servant were aroused by the whistle and found the lower part of their dwelling in flames and had only time to get out in their night clothes.

When Flaherty supposed all were safe, he found that the youngest child was missing. Dashing into the burning building he got to the front door with the child in his arms just as the door burst into flames. The house was owned by ex-Borough President Cassidy.

Exonerated After Five Months in Jail.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF TRUSTEES.

Mr. Hamilton's statement before the Legislative Committee leaves the Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company in a distressing situation. Every one who has followed the matter at all closely will recall the resolution adopted by the Board on the report of a special committee relating to the expenditures through and to Mr. Hamilton. One of the clauses of the preamble to these resolutions read: "Whereas we have also learned from such testimony (recently given before the Legislative Committee) that it has been the custom of this company to pay such sums of money without such expenditures being brought to the knowledge of and without action thereon by this Board or any Committee of the Board and without detailed vouchers or accounts showing the use of such money." Contrast this statement with that of Mr. Hamilton that his expenditures and the vouchers for them were submitted to the Company and passed upon by the Audit Committee of which the Trustees were members in rotation, drawing special remuneration for their committee work.

"Now, when the first month came, and my voucher went in, that was the time to have said to me, 'Sir, you have not submitted the proper voucher.'

"'And whose duty was it to do that?'

"'The Auditing Committee of the Trustees.'

"'Were they perfunctory?'

"'No; salaried—a special salary for a Chairman, another salary for a Deputy, a daily compensation for others that attended.'

"Suppose that it passed the first month. When the accounts came in the vouchers were there, in the hands of the controller. And it came to a second month, and it went to a fifth month, and it went to a tenth month, and it went to a year, and all the time I was carrying forward the business and the purposes and the protection and saving money for these insurance companies.

"But the tenth month passed and there was no objection. And the first year passed and there was no objection. And the second year and the third year and the fourth and the fifth and the sixth and the seventh, the eighth, the ninth, and the tenth, and then, when the cry comes out they say: 'Well, we did not know anything about it. This is the fellow, this is the man that has done it all.'"

How can the dilemma be avoided that is proposed by Mr. Hamilton:

They sat there weekly, cashing the emoluments that came to them for the performance of their duty, with the vouchers there under their noses, and if they took them and looked at them, then they approved what was done; I stood approved. If they did not take them and look at them, then they deceived me into the assumption that they performed their duty and that they were satisfied with the manner and rendition of my accounts.

There is no escape from the simple facts. The money was spent; the general purposes for which it was spent were known; the specific expenditures and their exact destination were not made known; the Trustees might have demanded information as to them and did not; they plainly neglected their duty, and in ethics if not in law they are responsible for what was done. It is absurd and it is impudent to plead the "baby act" in the premises, and the indignation of their agent, who is much more candid than nice in talking of them and of himself, is natural. In the face of the facts as they are now known, the public will not be satisfied unless the most stringent requirements for the accountability of the holders of trusts of this sort are framed and enforced.

Another point, and one equally important. The work of Hamilton, which he describes with proper prudence as "honestly" done, was of a kind the Trustees had no right to use the trust funds in their charge to accomplish. All due protection for the real interests of their policy holders could have been secured without it. Their policy suggests either cowardice or weakness. Brave and consciously honest men in their places could not be made the victims of "strikes" and "blackmailing." The great sums devoted to so-called "protection" were but constant incitements to attack. The attacks would have ceased had the fund been withdrawn. That would have been much pleasanter for the gentlemen whom Mr. Hamilton assails with such bitterness. For the excessively disagreeable situation in which they find themselves, they have only themselves to blame. They have been dabbling foolishly and recklessly in a business as unnecessary as it is (now) unsavory.

CASABLANCA.

The little town of Casablanca, on the coast of Morocco, is distinguished solely by the fact that the Government of Germany has selected it as the point for making an issue with France as to the policy to be adopted regarding the policing of Morocco towns. It is an insignificant place in population, in trade, and in strategic interest. It is perhaps on account of this extreme insignificance that the Kaiser has asked to have the town exempted from the police system conceded elsewhere throughout Morocco in order that the principle on which he insists may stand out the clearer.

That principle is one that France has declared with entire frankness it could not accept. It is known as the principle of "internationalization," that is to say, of the direct intervention of other Powers than France and Spain, not only in the constitution of the police force but in its management. Germany concedes that France and Spain shall have entire control of the police force organized by Morocco under French and Spanish officers in the four chief ports of the seaboard and along the Algerian frontier, but demands that in the one little town of Casablanca the police shall be officered by some small European Power selected by the Algeciras Conference, and that an Inspector General of all the police shall be appointed in the same manner.

It was fully expected last week, when Germany followed the extraordinary manifesto issued by Baron von Sternburg from Washington by accepting and even prompting the propositions of Austria yielding everything but the matter of Casablanca, that this also would be yielded after some discussion. From this friendly attitude Germany receded on hearing of the downfall of the Rouvier Ministry, and it is now reported that she will be as obstinate on this little point as she was at first on the larger matter. That, however, is doubtful, and depends on the firmness with which her present course is met. It is certain that the policy of France will not in the least be changed by the change in the Ministry. Not only has that fact been emphatically announced by M. Sarrien and by M. Bourgeois, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, but the tone of the French press is even more determined than before the change. It is incredible that Germany will risk the entire failure of the conference on a point so minute. Certainly she will not do so unless she desires the unfortunate and disturbing consequences that must ensue upon failure.

OKLAHOMA.

Mr. John Sharp Williams's declaration, in the House of Representatives on Friday, that the combined State of Oklahoma was populous enough to elect eight Representatives as soon as it should be admitted was very startling. According to the Federal census of 1900, Oklahoma and Indian Territory had something less of population than 400,000 each. Now, according to the boomers, whose figures are accepted by Mr. Williams, they have 1,000,000 jointly. Doubtless the growth of both communities has been great, but to believe that they have more than doubled in the six years would be a tax upon the credulity of Judaeus Apella.

But the incredibility of the figures does not affect the value of Mr. Williams's point. It is reasonable to believe that the growth of the two communities since the taking of the Federal census would entitle them conjointly to six Representatives in Congress. Those very figures, without any increase, would entitle them to four, or twice the number of Senators to which the State would be entitled. That is a fair proportion, much fairer than the proportion of most new States at the time of their admission. Nevada, for instance, has saddled upon the Senate a permanent incubus of two members, with no prospect of her surpassing their number in the House.

In truth Oklahoma is abundantly entitled to Statehood upon any criterion of fitness which has ever been maintained by anybody. It is merely the stubbornness of the Speaker of the House of Representatives which keeps out of the Union a community having every claim to be let in. And Mr. Cannon assumes to keep them out, not for their own demerits, but simply, in order to dragoon two heterogeneous communities of which neither desires to be associated with the other, from coming in as one community. The Speaker's stand upon this question is absolutely untenable. He will have to recede from it. Even if he manages to bully the House into voting against sense and reason to register his will, he can exert no compulsion on the Senate. And, by the way, recent events indicate that the Senate is not, as we have been in the habit of believing, potent for mischief alone. It may be powerful for good. It is certainly on the right side of this issue of the new States.

THE MAYOR'S WATER BOARD.

At the inception of a work involving expenditures of more than $160,000,000 of the city's money, with the appointment of 1,000 engineers rapidly progressing, with a salary list already swelled to above $300,000, and with no certainty of actual construction for a year upon the world's greatest projected aqueduct, the Mayor's Water Commission naturally becomes a target for professional and other stone throwers. The three Commissioners draw salaries of $12,000 each, and they as yet give only a portion of their time to their duties, it is said. J. Waldo Smith, the Chief Engineer, is salaried at $16,000 a year. Prof. William H. Burr is paid $6,000 as consulting engineer, although he already has a handsome salary as engineer and member of the Panama Canal Commission, besides fees and salaries in other public and private undertakings. Engineer John R. Freeman draws $12,000 a year. Fred P. Stearns, who was Chief Engineer of the Boston Water Works, mulcts the city at the rate of $100 a day. For these alleged reasons Assemblyman Yale has seen fit to introduce a bill abolishing the present pestiferous Commission after June 1. New Commissioners are to be installed, who, "unless sooner removed," shall hold office for terms of four years, and their successors shall be appointed for like terms. The "extravagant" salaries of the Commission are curtailed $5,000.

Is Mr. Yale pandering to Tammany's desires? The Mayor's Commission was appointed through the recommendation of three non-partisan bodies, namely, the Chamber of Commerce, the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, and the Manufacturers' Association of New York. They were appointed until the work for which they were made responsible shall be completed. What earnest has Mr. Yale that his substitute Commission would be made in like manner non-partisan? Does he suppose, moreover, that men of the character and ability of Mr. J. Edward Simmons, Mr. Charles A. Shaw, and Mr. Charles N. Chadwick would assume office in their stead under an uncertain political tenure and at a disproportionate salary—men with the wit and courage to appoint and to act according to the prevision of able engineers, not seldom in the teeth of unskilled public criticism?

We should say it would be well to wait, before creating a worse situation, in order to let the present Commission fairly grapple with its gigantic responsibilities, and not prejudge it.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The Trustees of the Public Library are not officially "charged" with the possession of a sense of humor. All the more gratifying to know that that valuable and sometimes indispensable element is "thrown in." A correspondent of ours, waxing warm, has insisted that the inscriptions upon the three cartouches, or lozenges, or panels, or whatever they may technically be, over the three doors of the entrance on Fifth Avenue claim too much credit for the "nucleators" of the Public Library, and give too little to the City of New York, which, after all, built the edifice. Astor, in effect said our indignant correspondent, may have planted, and Apollinaris have watered, but it is the Municipality which hath given the graft.

The unchartered sense of humor of the Trustees is indicated in the official explanation that the inscriptions to which our correspondent objected are only painted and tentative, not chiseled and final. The representative of the Trustees, who was appealed to by the representative of The Times, in effect explained that the Trustees had determined to forestall criticism by inviting it, and thus to disarm it in advance. Which recalls the crafty behavior of the ingenious P. T. Barnum, what time there was a popular curiosity about the gorilla, which impelled him to add to his collection a gorilla, "or animal to that effect." But some scientist who knew something about gorillas happened in, and, detecting the sham, went to the veteran showman with the expostulation: "But, Mr. Barnum, your animal has a tail; a gorilla has no tail." "My dear fellow," responded the humbug, "that doesn't make the least difference; the tail is only sewed on."

That the triple inscription is only sewed on may not be the most dignified form of rejoinder for the Trustees to make against indignant remonstrances. But it is certainly a conclusive form. "Such, fellow-citizens," said the campaign orator, "are my sentiments. But," after a pause, "if they do not suit you, they can be changed." Such is the candor of the Trustees of the Public Library, and such their possibly unscrupulous but certainly effectual confutation of their precipitate critics.

In sober fact, the inscription which the building ought to bear is perfectly obvious. It ought to import that the building is the habitat of the corporation known already for a dozen if not for a score of years as "The New York Public Library; Astor, Lenox, and Tilden Foundations"; a form which luckily has the advantage of combining alphabetical and chronological order. And it ought further to import that the actual edifice is erected by the city. It does not seem that the problem of such an inscription ought to be too much for the combined intellects of the architects and stonecutters employed. If it be, the Municipality should employ other architects and other stonecutters, if not other Trustees, "ad hoc."

BULLS AND FARMERS.

The frequency with which the great American bull turns on his proprietor and gores the life out of him, tossing his mangled remains over the nearest fence, invites a degree of remedial attention which it has not so far received. Occurrences of the kind are happening all the time and in all the pastoral regions of the country, and as they do not fail of record in the newspapers, local and other, it would seem as if cattle owners near and far would learn the lesson of their peril and profit by it. The prize bulls which they pay so much money for, with pedigrees straight as the tails they draw behind them what time they come charging down the meadow, are really more dangerous than so many Soudanese lions or striped tigers out of the reedy jungles of India. About these latter beasts there is as a rule nothing dangerously aggressive. They are not all the time looking for trouble; in general the quest for dinner monopolizes the greatest share of their attention. If you let them alone they will let you alone, unless hunger comes in as the incentive to greater intimacy of attention.

It is not that way with the bull. He seeks you out with defined purposes of assault, and does not stand on delay for lack of provocation. The great number of useful and innocent agriculturists carried off in this manner each year has become quite a severe drain on the business, and it is therefore encouraging to come across one case at least in which the overture of the performance showing the farmer tossed high into the air, with his legs and arms revolving like an old-fashioned Long Island windmill, was not the whole show, nor anything like it. In the case referred to, happening somewhere down in Maine, the farmer thus cast upward some fathoms into the healthy and exhilarating air of that Commonwealth came down within grasping distance of a pitchfork, on which he received the returning charge of the animal, as Wellington's dragoons received the onset of the French cuirassiers at Waterloo. At this crisis a reinforcement came along in the person of a neighboring yeoman, and together the pastoral heroes succeeded in cornering the beast and tying it up safely to a tree by the brazen ring in its nose, put there as an instrument of restraint and remembrancer of moderation at the beginning of its professional career.

But it would not be the part of wisdom to lay too much stress on a single victory of this kind. In the recorded schedule of collisions, growing longer and longer all the time, the bull almost always has the best of it. Like the ancient empire of Japan, he pitches into the midst of his war, leaving its declaration to follow along after, like the baggage. Before the owner is aware of any hostile intentions toward him he is most likely sailing over a neighboring apple tree or coming down bewildered on the other side. Choosing thus the times and conditions of his assault, the beast can generally have everything his own way, which is prejudicial to all wholesome pastoral interests and invites some radical remedial measures. The only efficient ones will be found in the adoption of a pastoral and agricultural article of faith to the effect that the bull is really a savage and dangerous animal, and that his occasional aspects of placidity are like the ashes covering a volcano likely to break out in a destructive explosion at any time.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Heroism in the Cold and Dark. As regards the number of lives lost, the wreck of the Phoenix liner British King does not rank high among marine tragedies, but nevertheless it well illustrates both the terrors of the sea and the heroism which such disasters so often bring into view. It is unfortunately rather obvious that the steamer was not too well prepared, as regards the adjustment of her cargo, for meeting the storms to be expected at this season of the year in the vicinity of Sable Island. Apparently the vessel would have survived if her sides had not been battered in by the oil barrels that washed overboard from her deck. That, however, is a point for consideration elsewhere and by others. Certainly nothing except the highest praise is deserved by the officers and crew of the British King or by those of the Mannheim and the Bostonian, the two steamers that undertook the work of rescue in the midst of storm and darkness. There was no failure of discipline anywhere, and, though Capt. O'Hagan violated the traditional rule and was not the last to quit his ship, that he did so was not his own fault, but the credit of his companions, all of whom delayed, and some of whom lost, their own chance for safety in order that they might first lower the injured and helpless commander into the boat heaving in the waves below the slowly sinking rail. The rush was to save, not to be saved, and the rescuers shared all the perils of the rescued. Such stories as this one, which was particularly well told in our dispatches, show that the change from sails to steam has not made either the sea or the sailor prosaic. Some of the old romance and much of the old beauty are gone, but their places have not been left empty.

Dr. Slicer Still Unconvinced. So far as we can see, the chief difference between the original accounts given by the indignant Mr. Crafts and by the argumentative Dr. Slicer of the latter's trafficking with the race track syndicate lies in the fact that the one of them says that "a contract had been signed" and the other that "assurances had been given." Now, it seems, the contract really has been signed or agreed to. The thing works out about the same in either case, and in either the reverend doctor is driven into the position of "standing for" something that we had confidently expected him to oppose as intrinsically bad. Once there, and while there, he is compelled to make most remarkable statements and to use extremely crooked logic. He returns again and again to the facts that poolroom keepers have often assailed the constitutionality of the Percy-Gray law, and that poolroom keepers are worse men than some other men who regard that law with affection. We have already admitted our inability to see any force or relevancy in those well-known facts. Of a decidedly different nature is Dr. Slicer's argument that if racing passes from the hands of those who are now in control it may fall into the hands of men who have not given him any assurances that the evils of race track gambling will be kept within bounds approved by himself. But those evils, according to many who seem to speak with authority, would altogether disappear if the Percy-Gray law were repealed, for then there would be no races upon which to bet. To this Dr. Slicer replies, "Yes, there would, because other States permit racing and the poolrooms can use long wires as well as short ones." The answer will not do. In the first place, races in distant places do not bring as many or as profitable patrons to the poolrooms here as do near races, because they do not excite as much interest, and, what is much more important, if New York should imitate the many States which have already abolished track gambling—and thereby abolished track racing—it would hasten the day when there would be no track gambling anywhere in the country. And what would the poolrooms do then, poor things? It's really a pity to see Dr. Slicer, who, as everybody knows, is thoroughly well-intentioned, squirming helplessly in the logical maze in which he has involved himself by his unfortunate compromise with what he knows and admits to be a very great evil. It is extremely well to be "practical," even though a reformer, and many reformers are not, but when a good man advocates the erection of a big fence around a big field, and making felony lawful within that inclosure, he presents a most discouraging spectacle. Also, he is delaying a triumph of decency and reason that is sure to come sooner or later, whatever he and the managers of country fairs may do in opposition to it.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Representative Wadsworth of New York received a letter to-day from a constituent, which is considered by competent judges to hold the season's record for requests made by constituents to Congressmen. It reads:

Albaion, N. Y. March 13, 1906.

Dear. Sir.

I wirte to see iff you would give me a pernit to carry a wepon as i travel with a merry-go round in the sumer and we have some pretty tough cranck to deal with iff so you will oblige

I remain yours Truely

At an uptown social function the other night strawberries and peaches were the fruit served. One of the guests, who had come down from the first Cleveland Administration, was reminded of the occasion when Secretary William C. Whitney gave his friends peaches at a big dinner in February, the first Winter he was here. Mr. Whitney wanted to do something novel, and he asked his marketman what he could get that would make his guests open their eyes and at the same time be a nice treat for them.

"I don't know unless you get some peaches," said the man. "I heard of a man up in Maryland the other day who had some he had raised in a hothouse by training the trees cordon fashion along a brick wall."

"Good," cried the Naval Secretary. "Get the peaches if you have to go up there and kill the man who has them."

The marketman got on the cars and went up to the little mountain town where the peach man lived. Mr. Whitney had given a fifty-dollar bill to him to pay for the peaches, fully expecting that the man would ask a big price, and that he was to be mulcted somewhat, anyway. After a good deal of haggling the agent got the whole crop—forty-eight peaches in all—for $50.

In due time the peaches came, and were carefully laid away until the night of the dinner. They caused a big outcry, and the guests did not cease talking about them all the evening, and Washington heard of them for days.

The marketman came with his bill.

"You don't say those forty-eight peaches cost $250?" asked Mr. Whitney.

"On my life, Sir," declared the marketman. "The fellow robbed me to the tune of $50 a dozen for those peaches. The other $50 is for my time and trouble."

The bill was paid with a check for $250.

"I got my money's worth," said Mr. Whitney afterward, telling the story. "The peaches were really delicious, but Cleveland seemed to me that night to be crowding the mourners hard. He ate five of those four-dollar peaches."

OUR WIVES AND MOTHERS.

Another of Them Enters the Lists Against Mary Mortimer Maxwell.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I add a few words to the interesting discussion arising out of the Englishwoman's articles in the Sunday TIMES about American wives and mothers? I would suggest from the American side what seems to me the natural and legitimate cause.

A true woman feels an unmatched responsibility in bringing a child into the world, an absolutely helpless creature whom no one, however experienced, can understand as she does herself. Its very cries mean definite things to her—pain, fear, hunger, &c; therefore she feels the need of being constantly beside it to act as interpreter.

Consider, too—and this is the chief point—that after a year or two of married life the young husband invariably lapses into the preoccupations of business, clubs, &c., and gives evidences indisputable that the honeymoon is over. The wife recognizes this, her little endearments and attentions are often disregarded, and her young rose-colored illusions fade into the dull gray of prosaic married life. Now nature wonderfully steps in and sends partial compensation for these aching disappointments in the shape of a baby—a baby all her own—more closely related to her than the most ideal husband could ever be—a baby in whose future she can hope to see all her beautiful illusions brought back to life.

What can be more natural and more rational than her devotion to the child, and what man, with even a little unselfishness and sympathy in him, would not understand and acquiesce? Isn't it an old truth that "love descends" from the man to the woman and from the woman to the child? MOTHER AND WIFE.

New York, March 16, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Every little while discussions are raised in the American newspapers about the difference in character and temperament between the English and the American people. And just so often come little storms of indignation over adverse criticism, however well deserved. Or is it never deserved?

Will you allow me to say that these discussions on the letters of Mary Mortimer Maxwell remind me of one difference between the two peoples which, during my residence here of a few years, I have often had occasion to notice?

Americans have allowed themselves to become abnormally introspective. One word of friendly criticism from a foreigner and the columns of the newspaper teem with self-analysis in self-defense.

Now, in England, we have just as many criticisms of our national characteristics, and in these days it is hard to find any one, save those who know us really well, who has a good word to say for us. We read these criticisms. But that is all. We then go smiling on our way, unheeding. We never think of writing to the newspapers about them.

A BRITISH ADMIRER OF THE AMERICANS.

New York, March 16, 1906.

The Universal Complaint.

From The Washington Star.

"What is your particular grievance against the railroads?"

"Well," answered Farmer Corntossel, "I'm kind of indignant 'bout their givin' rebates, an' sort o' suspicious of the influence they've got in politics. But what makes me downright mad is havin' to pay my fare instead o' ridin' on a free ticket."

OUR LANGUAGE.

A Variety of Opinions and Suggestions on the Proposed Simplification.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Every good American citizen and every intelligent parent should enter a protest against "simplified spelling." The English language is one of the grandest among those of the nations of the earth. That of the French may be more beautiful, the Italian more musical, the Spanish softer in tone, but none are so full, so dignified as our own.

The English nation would never concur in such changes as are proposed. We can make ourselves sufficiently ridiculous witout monkeying with the language in which our Bible is translated, our Prayer Books and Hymnals are printed, and in which all the English classics and poems are familiar to us.

We have jargon enough, with all the different nationalities forced upon us, without changing the style or purity of our mother tongue. The persons advocating such changes would seem surely to have lost their senses. D. B. H.

New York, March 15, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Aundra Carnegie hiz a wheen o' sonsy guid gumption in her bit noddle, Maister Editor. The kind o' language they English an' Yankee chiels blether is oot-an'-oot gibberish. Fegs, mon, she canna be fashin wi' them. They're ower stippit an' they've ower muckle gab, like a beadle an' a washerwoman ower a platter o' broth an' a kirk scan'l.

Seemplify it, Aundra! Seemplify their blether. Here iss she, Tuncan McGregor, son of Tuncan McGregor an' bluid of ta McGregor, wha harangued an Edinburgh parrister till she was tumfoonered at her command o' ta gab—an' she haen tae speir a mon yince mair whit she'll pe meanin.

Pit intilt, Aundra, a mickle o' ta pawkiness that maks ta gab o' ta Plack Wallace like to pibroch an' "loud ceempals" in ta unifersal lug.

Seemplify it, Aundra, seemplify it! 'Tis a praw slogan. KIR-KOO-BRAY.

New York, March 16, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I hear that Mr. Carnegie and his "committee" advocate a reform, or simplification, as they call it, in the spelling of English words. Can Mr. Carnegie not use his money to better advantage founding a free university instead? Let us learn to use our language properly before we vulgarize it.

I heartily agree with the world's greatest living poet, Charles A. Swinburne, who says that the movement is a "monstrous, barbarous absurdity." DANIEL BLOOMFIELD.

New York, March 15, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The changes in spelling advocated by E. C. Hudson in this morning's paper is a description of phonography (or stenography) as it is being used to-day by hundreds of thousands of persons throughout the civilized world.

While I know the general use of a universal system of phonography would be a great saving of time and perfection in spelling and writing, I believe it can only be accomplished by the slow process of education through the public schools. F. WOOD.

New York, March 15, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What is needed is certainly "a new alphabet." Each sound should be represented by a separate symbol, and this symbol should represent only the sound assigned to it in the phonetic alphabet. J. P. PRATT.

Brooklyn, March 15, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Regarding the question of spelling reform, as advocated by Prof. Matthews in lecturing to his class in English at Columbia University, allow me to say that time will surely prove the incalculable benefit which can be expected from such a reform, not only for the reason given by Prof. Matthews but for a realization more precious than the saving of time, paper, and money, far more necessary and essential to mankind—the economy of brain!

New York, March 16, 1906. G. COSENZA.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Anent the controversy of the attempt to introduce a new orthography for the English language, should not a new orthoepy be devised first? The same words are pronounced quite differently in certain sections of the United States and England.

If we spell words as pronounced by sound we should commence with a sound, fundamental principle in a double sense. We must have a correct standard of orthoepy or pronunciation before we can have a standard of orthography or correct spelling.

THOMAS W. PITTMAN.

New York, March 16, 1906.

B. R. T. Did Build the Ash Stations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of to-day, under the heading "Contract Mutilated," it is stated, among other things, in speaking of the controversy between Commissioner Woodbury and President Coler:

"Under the terms of the original contract the Brooklyn Rapid Transit people had to construct thirteen stations to receive ashes. Not a single one of these buildings has been constructed, and President Winter of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit says that Commissioner Woodbury himself granted permission to abrogate that section of the contract."

Be kind enough to correct this misstatement. The thirteen stations to receive ashes were built and built exactly in accordance with plans approved by the Street Cleaning Department, and were made suitable to the service required of them. The adoption of these plans by the department in substitution of those proposed by Kennedy was undoubtedly because it was found that the latter would be impracticable of operation. Commissioner Woodbury never granted permission to abrogate that section of the contract, such permission was never solicited, and I have never made any statement to that effect.

The Making of Citizens.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was very much interested in reading the article in THE NEW YORK TIMES last Sunday on the noteworthy results secured by Miss Olive M. Jones at the Truant School in Broome Street. It seems to me that work of this kind, if extensive enough, will have an important bearing on the character of our citizenship.

I think the people of New York do not properly appreciate the great benefits that flow from the work of the Educational Alliance on the east side. This institution performs a great service in fitting a large number of the immigrants who come to this country with the duties of citizenship. The educational and moral value of this work is not thoroughly appreciated in the community and is not adequately supported. L. W.

Exclusive Graveyards.

From The Chicago Evening Post.

Everybody will be pleased to know that our excellent fellow-citizens, the union men, are going to have a nice cemetery of their own, where they can be laid away without any fear of contamination from "scabs." And now that they have acquired this comfort and degree of elegance we venture to hope that they will permit us to enjoy our own cemeteries and proceed thereto at the appointed time without unnecessary impediments or hindrances. If the union hack drivers and the union gravediggers and union casketmakers will proffer to us the same consideration we are willing to give to them, everything will be lovely, and our various cemeteries will exist in peace and concord.

A Critical Classification.

From The Pittsburg Dispatch.

Still, there does not seem to be any necessity for gloating over that Moro incident. Granted that the criticism of Wood for the killing of women and children is unreasonable, there was nothing glorious about it save the fact that the American troops did their duty, as always. The whole affair was one of those unfortunate incidents, regrettable but unavoidable, about which the less said the better.

FROM THE DYNAMITED.

Firm Attacked with Explosives Just Didn't Suit the Walking Delegate.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I notice in this morning's edition of THE TIMES an editorial on labor anarchists, in which reference is made to the explosion in our store on the morning of March 14, which was undoubtedly the result of the "hold-up" of us by the truck drivers' union. One statement is not a fact and I should be pleased to have this corrected. The statement referred to is this:

"The firm concerned [meaning ourselves] had objected to paying its teamsters as much as the teamsters thought they ought to have."

There was no objection on our part to paying the union rate of wages, and there had been no demand on the part of our teamsters that any other wages than those they were receiving and with which they professed themselves satisfied should be paid. A demand, not through our men or backed up by our men, was made by the walking delegate of the teamsters' union that we should sign an agreement placing our trucking business under the control of the union—that is, employing none but union men, agreeing to all the terms that they chose to impose and in the event of any disagreement between our truckmen and ourselves the matter should be left to the arbitration of three, one of which should be the teamster himself and another a representative of the union.

Our refusal to sign this agreement resulted in the union ordering our teamsters not to work for us. We have been and are paying full union wages to all of the men now employed by us; in fact, we are in one instance at least paying more than union wages. The whole proposition was whether we should be allowed to run our business ourselves or permit outside parties to run it for us. This is the sole matter in controversy; one that admits of no arbitration, and something that no American citizen should submit to.

A Word for Corporations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I don't own any gas securities, (because I can't afford to buy any,) but would like to say that your correspondent "Gas" was not fair in his attack on the company as far as last year's gas bills were concerned.

The Winter of 1905 was a very cold one, and both coal and gas bills were naturally large on account of the severe weather. If "Gas" will look up his coal bills (if he uses coal) he will find this statement to be true. I am sure when gas is reduced to 80 cents that the consumption will increase and blame will follow if bills are not as small as expected.

I believe in being just. I am not a young man. My experience covers years where corporations were unable to serve the public as well as they do now. I bless the inventors of electric cars with the many free transfers (compared with the days gone by) and the great saving to men who can't afford much.

New York, March 16, 1906. JUSTICE.

Modernizing Russia.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES never tires of reiterating the phrase that Czar Nicholas II. appointed Witte to modernize Russia. As Russia and the true friends of Russia see, the best way to modernize Russia is to un-Germanize the Government of Russia, to deliver the Russian Empire from the rule not only of the Holstein-Gottorp Czars, but also of the bureaucrats, the great majority of whom are of German birth or of German descent—the Trepoffs, Wittes, Plehves, ad infinitum—a Government which ever works "pour le roi de Prusse."

That is the reason why, in Russia, Count Witte is not regarded as the "providential man" to "bring Russia into the list of modern nations." WACLAW PERKOWSKI.

For Library Inscriptions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If the citizens of New York City were alive to the importance of the place that such an institution as the New York Public Library building, now in course of construction at Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue, holds to themselves and posterity, there would be more protests handed in in answer to Mr. Haydel's late suggestion.

The library is a civic institution, a mighty factor in the development of morals, and the universal instructor of mankind. For this reason, if for no other, it belongs to the people. Let it be then dedicated by them on an inscription placed where it properly belongs.

Private inscriptions on the face of the new Public Library seem to us to be entirely wrong. I would suggest only "New York Public Library." W. E. A.

Miss Clemens a Miracle Worker?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You delighted all readers who pity the needless sufferings of man's faithful servants when you printed on your editorial page of the 13th the sharp denunciation of the cruelty of women in encouraging the use of the restraining check rein for carriage teams, the hideous docking of tails, and the killing of birds for their feathers, uttered by Mark Twain's young daughter.

With such a defender, and dear old Mark to employ his marvelous power of words in aid, the poor dumb mouths shall yet speak, the birds shall no longer be denuded, and the bobtailed horse shall become a thing of the senseless past.

I thank the little lady. She is clearly a chip of the old block. F. F.

Perhaps They Can Explain.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

By what authority do the Wells-Fargo Express Company and the Knickerbocker Express Company occupy the sidewalks in Greenwich Street, immediately south of Morris Street, with their wagons? The wagons occupy the sidewalks to the extent of actually forcing pedestrians into the street to escape being trampled upon by their horses.

Automobile Etiquette.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is especially desirable for the driver to sit on the left in an automobile, because, in case of collision, under the present custom, it is the passenger who is liable to be hurt, and this passenger is usually a woman.

There would be fewer collisions if the driver had to take the bump.

THE TACTLESS HOSTESS.

The meat pies made by Jarley's wife
Are famed throughout the town;
They'd raise a mortal to the skies,
Or draw an angel down.

But Jarley's spouse, though skillful cook,
Fails woefully in tact;
And I, who pose as raconteur,
Have learned that painful fact.

How oft a climax I have reached
In story choice and new,
When, fork up-poised, she has implored,
"Another helping? Do!"

Or when the guests, with eager ears,
Some jest's keen point await,
She'll pout, "A wee bit? I insist!"
My dear, just pass his plate!"

Now, I'm a law-abiding man;
And Jarley's of my kin;
But I confess it fires my blood
When Jarley's wife butts in!

And if, some day, this artist-cook
In weltering gore's descried,
The verdict must be "Self-defense";
Or "Murder justified!"

SAY CEMETERY IS RUN ON CIRCUS PRINCIPLES

Lot Holders of German Lutheran Burial Ground Protest.

WOULD OUST GEISENHEIMERS

Suits for an Accounting and Steps for More Decorous Management Discussed by Speakers.

That the German Lutheran Cemetery at Middle Ground, L. I., is badly managed and that the Geisenheimer estate should give an accounting of the way in which the affairs of the corporation have been run for the last half century was the gist of the speeches that were made in Teutonia Hall, in Sixteenth Street, near Third Avenue, last evening. About 400 men and women were present. The object of the meeting, it was said, was to ascertain whether or not it was possible to compel the Geisenheimer estate to allow the owners of 30,000 cemetery lots to have a say in the management of the property.

Philip Wagner of 138 Second Avenue was elected President of the Lot Owners' Association, organized last night. He declared that a few weeks ago when he told Jacob A. Geisenheimer, in the latter's office in William Street, that he was going to bring to the attention of the lot owners the way they had been treated by the six Trustees of the cemetery, all of whom are supposed to represent the Geisenheimer interests, Mr. Geisenheimer had begged him on bended knees not to do so, and had assured him that in a few years all would be well if present conditions were undisturbed.

Mr. Wagner said that he made an investigation, and had been unable to find out what had been paid for the land added to the cemetery plot in the last fifty years. The only thing known at the present time was, he said, that the land had been divided into lots and sold at $100 a lot, or, in other words, about $34,000 an acre. Of this amount, he said, half went to the Geisenheimer estate and the other half, less 7 per cent., to the cemetery corporation.

"We want to take this cemetery away from the Geisenheimers," said Mr. Wagner, "but the Geisenheimers refuse to let us do it. I went to see them the other day and asked that we, the 30,000 lot owners, be allowed to name two Trustees. This was refused, and when I asked why it was, I was told, 'family interests.' Mr. Geisenheimer then told me he would give me thirty days to get together the $87,500 due on the cemetery, and I told him I would do so. When I went back he had changed his mind and wanted $500,000. Then I told him I would call this meeting, and he begged me not to do it."

The Geisenheimer interests, he added, wanted to retain their interest for eleven years more, and then he added significantly that lots worth more than $1,000,000 were as yet undisposed of.

Next Mr. Wagner said that many of the lot owners had been deprived of their votes. According to the by-laws, a man must own a ninety-six foot lot to vote. In a great many cases the deed read ninety-five feet, thus depriving the holder of his right to vote. While the cemetery, he said, ought to bring in an income of $70,000 a year, it still owed the Geisenheimer estate $87,500, a debt contracted in 1871, and on which interest of 7 per cent. per annum had been paid ever since.

A man who asked if the meeting was called for the purpose of insulting the Geisenheimers caused such a commotion that he was silent for the rest of the meeting.

Magistrate Wahle followed Mr. Wagner.

"I doubt," he said, "if ever a meeting of this kind was held in the history of the City of New York. It is a meeting for our dead. I don't know, and I don't care, what the Geisenheimers paid for that land, but I protest in the name of decency against what they are doing with what belongs to our dead.

"You go there and it is like going to a circus. They stop you and try to sell you peanuts and lemonade, and when you refuse they want you to stand on a grave and have your picture taken. It is the only cemetery in the State of New York where flowers are stolen from graves, and there is no one to stop it. It is the only one where you can find the flowers you place on the graves on sale later on. It is the only one where thieves will steal an American flag from a grave. It is the worst managed cemetery I know of."

Magistrate Wahle advised suit for an accounting.

A committee of fifteen was authorized to engage counsel. Charles Dersch, President of the Slocum Survivors' Association, also spoke. The meeting adjourned to assemble again in Teutonia Hall a week from next Friday.

The present Trustees of the cemetery are Frederick W. Geisenheimer of Sea Cliff, L. I.; Jacob A. Geisenheimer of 68 William Street, F. W. Hunter of 68 William Street, M. H. Getty, who has an office in the Grand Central Station; Jacob F. Miller of 120 Broadway, and B. W. Segge.

ELEPHANT DREW THE SLEIGH.

A Dull Day at the Hippodrome Saved by Jennie's Feat.

There was gloom at the Hippodrome yesterday morning. W. W. Powers, the elephant man, was almost in tears.

"To think I have elephants," he growled, "that haven't done a printable thing in two days!"

Just then Press Agent George Lynch strolled in.

"It's a cool day," said Mr. Lynch, "but it will be really cold when I can't find work for idle elephants. Watch me."

Mr. Lynch strolled out again and winked at a snow drift. Then he went to find Pete Barlow, the keeper of the herd.

Within fifteen minutes late breakfasters at Sherry's, Delmonico's, and the Harvard and Yale Clubs were running to the windows to see a big elephant ambling through the snow attached to a small red sleigh.

In the pung were four young women from the Hippodrome company, and enough straws to show which way the wind blew. The girls were Rose La Harte, Georgie Dix, Eileen Spellman, and Bernice Bartlett. The lephant was plain Jennie.

Messrs. Lynch and Barlow went on ahead to shake hands with policemen and explain that everything was all right. The party brought up at the Hotel Astor, where they gave a little boy 5 cents to hold Jennie while they went in to breakfast.

When they came out a crowd had gathered. Somebody proposed a cheer.

"Don't cheer, boys," said Mr. Lynch. "Wait until we really do something." No date has been set for that.

MRS. ROOSEVELT AT GROTON.

Goes to See Her Son Kermit Confirmed —Staying Overnight.

GROTON, Mass., March 16.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, who came here to-day to attend the confirmation service at the Groton School, where her son Kermit is a student, was a guest to-night at the residence of Prof. W. A. Gardner, a member of the school Faculty. It is expected that she will leave to-morrow afternoon on her return to Washington.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived here from Boston at noon. Her special car was sidetracked at Ayer Junction, where Mrs. Roosevelt was met by a member of the family of the Rev. Dr. Endicott Peabody, head master of Groton School, and was driven in a carriage to the Peabody residence. After seeing her son, she attended the confirmation service in the school chapel. Bishop William Lawrence confirmed twenty-three boys, including Kermit Roosevelt.

SIGHTSEERS IN STRAITS.

A Crater Stormed with Snowballs in the Bowery Horror District.

The heavily loaded sightseeing automobile was passing through the Mulberry Bend section yesterday, and the megaphone man was telling in blood-curdling tones the ancient grisly history of the place, with appropriate frills, that the customers might get their two dollars' worth.

"Here," said he, "was the headquarters for six gangs who thought no more of murder than of plucking flowers from the meadow."

"Awful!" breathed a little country school teacher who is traveling for culture.

"No policeman went through this section alone," continued the shivering story. "For the mangled body of at least one guardian of the law was found each morn when the sun had risen in golden splendor in the east."

"I wish we'd go faster," sighed a fat, tender-hearted woman.

The automobile halted a moment.

"Over there to the right lived the dreaded Crocci gang," continued the narrator. "To them murder was a pastime. They often threw stones from the top of their house upon the heads of mere sightseers, and then they'd come down and butcher stunned visitors. Many—"

A big chunk of snow fell from a house and almost struck the car. Everybody shivered.

"Many came here," said the diabolical megaphone man, "but few went away. But now, thanks to our system of—"

"Thank Heaven, we will soon be out of it!" whispered the little school teacher loudly.

The heavy automobile groaned and stopped, creaked and started, stopped suddenly with a lurch. "Ah!" shivered the sightseers.

The chauffeur did not stop to reassure the passengers; he crawled underneath the machine to see why it had let a pile of snow stop it. The megaphone man was moodily silent and dispirited. The fears of the passengers were not calmed.

Another chunk of snow fell from the cornice of a house, and as it passed downward it took away the streaming green veil of one visitor. Then a gang of boys, taking a hint from the hunk of falling snow, began to pelt the party with snowballs. Unwisely did the few representatives of chivalry take up the fight for beauty. The carnage was awful. The boys didn't have their victims in a crater, but they had them on an automobile.

"I just know the Croccis are coming," said one young woman on the automobile.

Then Policeman O'Reilly came strolling down Bayard Street. In spite of the fact that he was alone the party on top of the automobile, chivalry as well as beauty, fairly leaped from their high seats to run toward the guardian of the law. "Save us, save us," pleaded the young women. He said he would.

The megaphone man called to his party to come back, but they paid no heed to him. All but six were led out to where they could call cabs and board cars for their hotels. After the automobile had been pulled out of the snowbank by a pair of horses the brave six continued on to Chinatown and got the culture which they started out to get.

DUFFY SAW THE PLAY.

But, as It Was Chinese, He Had Trouble Bringing It to Court.

The Chinese Melpomene, which is the Tragic Muse, and the majesty of American law, as represented by Ireland, wrestled in the Centre Street Court yesterday before Magistrate Wahle, whose name tells his Teutonic extraction. Melpomene won on points.

Patrick Duffy, known in the Eldridge Street Police Station as one of the most eloquent and aesthetic members of the force, was called to the stand in the Sunday-closing case against John Cavanaugh, manager of the Chinese Theatre.

"What was the nature of the performance?" asked Magistrate Wahle.

"The nature of the performance wuz noise. It wuz somethin' turrible. You see these black rings unner me eyes? Oi couldn't slape fer three nights."

"Was it a comedy?"

"It wuz not. There wuz no fun in the house."

"Was it a tragedy?"

"It wuz the awfullest tragedy that iver happened."

"Well, did the principal die as the victim of fate after an enthralling fight against adverse circumstances?"

"Most all died one time or 'nother. Ever now an' thin a fat Chink 'ud die o' the cramps."

"Maybe it was an oratorio?" suggested Magistrate Wahle delicately.

"It might 'a' bin."

"Perhaps a cantata?"

"Oi have not the Chinee tongue. They might 'a' bin callin' everybody all the names, or they might 'a' bin askin' each other out to a saloon fer a schooner o' beer. Be the looks o' their faces Oi think they wuz cussin'. Cantata? I guess it wuz a cancan."

"What kind of musical instruments did they use?"

"Yer honor, they used no musical instrumints at all. They bought out a junk shop, an' each feller had two pieces o' junk which he slambanged togither an' hollered. But the haythin injiyed it, but iv'ry man to his likes, says Oi."

"Officer Duffy," called out Magistrate Wahle in a mock passion of anger, "do you mean to say, Sir, that you arrested Mr. Cavanaugh here without knowing what you arrested him for? Were there any violation—that's what this court wants to know—were there any violations?"

"Well, yer honor, Oi pinched him in the first place because the Cap'n tould me to. An' in the second place it wuz safe. Be the way the Chinks talked an' cut up on the stage there must 'a' bin a hundred violations."

Nevertheless Cavanaugh was discharged.

FUN WITH THE SODA CLERK.

Proving That There's No Corrosive Sublimate in Lithia Tablets.

A despondent-looking man rolled into a Times Square drug store yesterday afternoon, and, calling for a glass of water, pulled from a pocket a small bottle, extracting a tablet which he dropped into the glass. Holding the water on a level with his eyes, he looked thoughtfully as the tablet slowly dissolved. Then, with a sigh, he turned to the young soda clerk, who was watching him narrowly.

"It's a hard life," he remarked gloomily; "we'd best be out of it."

"What's that you put in the glass?" asked the boy nervously.

"Now, Willie," answered the other, "you're a sweet young thing, all right, but I'd advise you to go back to the patchouli department for more." The boy reached over to examine the potion the man was arranging.

"None o' that," growled the disconsolate one. "That's corrosive sublimate, and it's my finish, see!" Then he raised the glass and drank its contents.

The boy jumped over the counter and ran out, yelling. He brought back a policeman and a crowd.

"What's all this?" demanded the policeman.

"Oh, just the mere trifle of the finish of a man who's tired," answered the rolling one indifferently. The policeman stuck his hand into the man's pocket and brought forth a bottle labeled:

FIVE GRAIN LITHIA TABLETS.

"What the divvle d'ye mean by throwing us this sort of a scare?" demanded the policeman.

"That's all right," responded the unsteady one, shambling out. "I jus' wanted to teach that squab over there not to be so darned new; that's all."

Then he walked off with a chuckle.

VICHY CELESTINS

CONRIED'S LICENSE IN WEISS-NICHT-WO

Police Willing to Help Him Find It, Apparently.

TALK MADE OF A SUMMONS

Meanwhile, However, the Play Goes On at the Irving Place Theatre with a St. Patrick's Day Calm.

A threatening cloud loomed up before Herr Direktor Conried again yesterday, when he was still busy trying to forget the annoyance which the police had caused him over his Sunday night concerts at the Metropolitan Opera House. This time it was over the license for his Irving Place Theatre.

Acting Inspector Hodgins strolled over to the Irving Place on Wednesday night. He is taking Inspector Schmittberger's place just now, and has on several occasions asked embarrassing questions. Inspector Hodgins takes no especial interest in the German drama. Looking at the posters and pictures in the lobby of the theatre, he missed the license that usually hangs in a frame in every theatre.

"Where's your license?" the Inspector asked the ticket seller.

"Oh, it's in the safe," replied the young man carelessly.

"Let me see it," said the Inspector.

"Can't now; Mr. Conried has the key," the ticket seller replied.

The Inspector looked up the Herr Direktor. The latter wanted to know why the Inspector made such a fuss about so trivial a matter.

"Because it's up to me; that's all," replied Inspector Hodgins.

Mr. Conried was disturbed. He said that he had given $500 on or about May 1, 1905, and had received in return what he had never doubted was a certificate to give shows at the Irving Place Theatre in the German language.

"But where is it?" the Inspector asked.

Mr. Conried scratched his head. He had already made a cursory search for the certificate and had been unable to find it. He asked for further time to look among his papers. The time was granted. On Thursday, however, the Inspector called upon Mr. Conried again. The Herr Direktor seemed amused.

"Funny," funny," said Mr. Conried. "I haven't been able to sleep because of that thing. I put it somewhere, but I can't tell where."

The Inspector fumbled in his waistcoat pocket, bit off the end of something he held concealed in his hand, and began to fumble for a match.

"What are you going to do?" asked Mr. Conried.

"I'm going to light a cigar," replied the Inspector. "I'm afraid you'll have to go to the Yorkville Court."

Mr. Conried did not allow the incident to interfere with his work as impresario yesterday. He did, however, send his Treasurer, Max Hirsch, to Police Headquarters to see Gen. Bingham. He was informed that the Commissioner would not interfere with the Inspector in the performance of his duty.

Inspector Hodgins and Sergt. Savage went up to the Yorkville Court yesterday afternoon, and had a talk with Magistrate Walsh. It was said that a summons was issued for Mr. Conried's appearance in court this morning, but Mr. Conried last night would not admit that he had been served. When Inspector Hodgins was asked if he proposed to proceed against the theatre he replied:

"Now, see here. To-night will be St. Patrick's Day eve. I'm too good an Irishman to annoy a Dutchman at such a time."

Mr. Conried said:

"It's all fixed up. I showed Commissioner Bingham the voucher of my checkbook, showing that I paid the license on April 29, 1905, and it's all right."

At the box office of the theatre last night it was said that ex-Judge Dittenhoefer, counsel for Mr. Conried, had proved to the Commissioner that the license for the theatre had been paid, and that there would be no interference with the performance. The performance at the Irving Place was not interrupted last night.

Nobody would say whether the Herr Direktor would appear in court to-day.

"LA GIOCONDA" AT THE OPERA

The Last Subscription Night a Scene of Great Enthusiasm.

The last subscription night of the opera season, which was last night, was a brilliant occasion. The audience was very large, many people having been turned away at the doors, and it showed much enthusiasm over the performance of "La Gioconda." Ponchielli's opera was sung by the cast which has been concerned with previous representations of the work this season. It was the last appearance this season of Mr. Caruso, Mme. Nordica, Mr. Plançon, and Mme. Homer, and the audience showed an eager desire to honor the popular favorites. There was great enthusiasm in several places in the performance, and after the acts they were recalled repeatedly. There was a strong effort made to induce Mr. Caruso to repeat his air "Cielo e Mar" in the second act, but in vain.

The People's Symphony Concert.

The fifth of the People's Symphony concerts was given last evening in the Grand Central Palace, having been played first the evening before at the Cooper Union. There was a very large audience present that showed the usual interest in the performance. The programme included Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" overture, Liszt's symphonic poem "Tasso," MacDowell's suite, Op. 42, three movements, and the introduction to the third act of "Lohengrin." Mme. Marian Van Duyn sang the air "O Don Fatale" from "Don Carlos," and Edward Déthier played Saint-Saëns's Rondo Capriccioso for violin. Mr. Arens explained, as is his custom, something of the form and significance of the music.

Italian Benefit Concert.

There will be a concert given in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria this evening by Mme. Nordica, Mr. Gilibert, and Victor Herbert with his orchestra. It will be in aid of the Society for Italian Immigrants and Miss Leary's Italian Settlement. Mme. Nordica will sing the polonaise from "Mignon" and a group of songs; Mr. Gilibert will sing the romance from "Tannhäuser," the serenade from "Don Giovanni," and several songs, and together they will be heard in Fauré's duet, "The Crucifix." The orchestra will play a number of short and agreeable selections.

His First Theatre Since 1865.

Charles Stewart, who says he has not been inside of a theatre since the night Lincoln was shot at Ford's Theatre, Washington, witnessed the performance of "Happyland" at the Casino last evening. Mr. Stewart is 84 years old, and the attire of the chorus amazed him a bit. Things were not so in his time, he said.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Tim Murphy has bought the rights to a three-act original comedy entitled "Rufus Ruggs," by Paul Wilstach, and will present it on tour this Spring and bring it to New York in August.

A benefit performance for the poor of New York will be given at the Belasco Theatre on April 17 by a committee consisting of Borough President Ahearn, Randolph Guggenheimer, Dr. Darlington, Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, Bishop Greer, and Postmaster Willcox.

Charles Emerson Cook starts to-day for Chicago to arrange for a four weeks' engagement of Mrs. Leslie Carter at the Grand Opera House in that city, beginning on Monday night.

ELSIE JANIS IS SEVENTEEN.

The Young Actress's Birthday Celebrated in Many Ways.

Yesterday was Elsie Janis's seventeenth birthday. The young actress celebrated the day by giving three new imitations in "The Vanderbilt Cup" last night. She added Mme. Guilbert, Dan Daly, and Sam Bernard to her list. Miss Janis's mother celebrated by giving her daughter a birthday supper at the Hotel Marie Antoinette after the performance. All the "Vanderbilt Cup" Company was invited. Miss Janis's friends celebrated by filling her dressing room with flowers and gifts, and papering the walls with telegrams from out of town wishing the actress "many happy returns." Liebler & Co., Miss Janis's managers, gave her a complete new set of costumes.

A dozen Yale students celebrated by sitting in the front row at the Broadway Theatre last night, and pelting the seventeen-year-old star with violets at the close of the last act.

SUIT OVER "MLLE. MODISTE."

Clara Lipman Asks $25,000 Damages for Alleged Stolen Scene.

Clara Lipman, the actress, wife of Louis Mann, has brought suit in the Supreme Court against Charles B. Dillingham, theatrical manager, for $25,000 damages. She alleges that without her authority a scene has been produced in "Mlle. Modiste" taken from "Julie Bonbon."

The plaintiff asserts that about Oct. 1, 1904, she submitted "Julie Bonbon" to the defendant, and that on Oct. 14, 1904, the play was returned to her with the explanation that it could not be produced, as the schedule was overcrowded. At that time, it is asserted, Dillingham had Fritzi Scheff under contract, and had arranged with a man named Blossom to write a play for her. It is alleged that Dillingham instructed Blossom to incorporate in "Mlle. Modiste" a scene from "Julie Bonbon."

Both plays were put on here at the same time. Damages are asked on the alleged similarity of one scene, as "because of this fact theatregoers failed to attend the performance of 'Julie Bonbon.'"

THE CIRCUS HERE AGAIN.

On Thursday Next the Elephants Will Walk Around Once More.

The circus has come to town. Last night the Barnum & Bailey freaks and wonders were led or carted into Madison Square Garden for the beginning of the forty-third season. At midnight a large corps of men began putting up the aerial rigging and other appurtenances necessary for the acrobats to show their newest tricks.

About the same time the trainload of living wonders arrived in the Mott Haven yards. They were led out of Winter quarters in Bridgeport yesterday and conveyed in five trains to this city. There was a procession of elephants, camels, and other animals down to the Garden. The zoological exhibit this year is said to be the finest yet shown.

The building of the rings and the hippodrome tracks requires a corps of 200 men. The most intricate apparatus to be erected this year is that for the feature act called "The Limit," about which information is being prepared by the press agent. The opening day is Thursday afternoon, March 22.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The sixth annual performance of the Junior Singing Club of the Boys' Club, Avenue A and Tenth Street, will take place on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, March 29 and 30, at 8:30 o'clock at the Berkeley Lyceum, when "The Mikado" will be acted and sung by the boys. Tickets may be obtained from G. H. Kinnicutt, Chairman, 1 Nassau Street. The Board of Trustees includes E. H. Harriman, President; Philip T. Dodge, Vice President; Henry Stanford Brooks, Jr., Secretary, and Eliphalet N. Potter, Treasurer.

⁂

Mr. and Mrs. John Elliott, (Maud Howe,) who sailed some weeks since, have arrived in Spain and probably will remain there two years. Mrs. Elliott is the daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe. For some time prior to their sailing the Elliotts had made their home in New York in the Washington Square section.

⁂

The wedding of Miss May Valentine Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Johnson of Spuyten Duyvil, to Wyatt Warner Taylor will be held April 5 in the Marble Collegiate Church, Twenty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue, at 8:30 o'clock in the evening. A reception will follow at the Waldorf-Astoria. On the evening of March 30, at the Café des Beaux Arts, a dinner will be given for the ushers and bridesmaids. The bridal party will consist of Miss Bessie H. Taylor, maid of honor, and Mrs. Henry J. Hildebrand, matron of honor, and the Misses Ilona Mighietta, Ethel Lockwood, Frances Jenkins, Katherine Daniell, Theresa Mathews, and Elizabeth Pearsall, bridesmaids. Everett V. Meeks is to be best man and the ushers Reginald Johnson, Emory Johnson, Harry Wilde, Henry Hildebrand, George Jenkins, H. Elmer Crall, Hiram Taylor, and Adriano Mighietta.

⁂

Mrs. William Hazard Field and Miss Mary Field of 8 West Thirty-seventh Street went to Chatsworth on Wednesday and will remain in the clubhouse there for several weeks.

FISHERS OF MEN
By S. R. CROCKETT

This is the story of Kid McGhie, of three of the most attractive girls ever described in a novel, of a young man almost good enough to deserve one of them, of some kindly criminals, and a simple-souled, silver-haired little missionary who is made of the stuff of which heroes are made. The "Fisher of Men" saves Kid McGhie from his associates, and the novel ends happily.

OARSMEN UNDER FIRE BEFORE INVESTIGATORS

Mulcahy and Varley Describe Their Troubles at Hamburg.

SAY ACTION WAS JUSTIFIED

Committee of National Association Files Official Report—George Stegmaier Was Star Witness.

The decision of the sub-committee appointed to investigate the conduct of John J. F. Mulcahy and William Varley of the Atalanta Boat Club at the Hamburg Regatta last July has been placed in the hands of the members of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, and the result will be officially announced to-night at the annual midwinter meeting of the parent body at the New York Athletic Clubhouse. The Investigating Committee, consisting of Fred Fortmeyer, Claude R. Zappone, and John O. Regan, met at the Hotel Marlborough yesterday, when Mulcahy and Varley presented their evidence.

While no charge of lawbreaking has been made against Mulcahy and his rowing partner, their actions during the Hamburg Regatta and subsequently were deemed such as to warrant an investigation by the National Association. Mulcahy and Varley represented the Atalanta Boat Club in the Hamburg Regatta, competing in the double-sculls race. After the race the American oarsmen cabled to their club that they had won.

About a month after their return it developed in another quarter that a protest had been lodged during the race on the ground of a foul. This was followed by a letter from Dr. Rupertti, which stated that the race was ordered to be rowed over by the referee owing to a foul that had been committed during the race, and that Mulcahy and Varley had refused to row a second time, insisting that they had won the race fairly and honestly.

At yesterday's meeting Mulcahy testified that during the race several attempts were made by the foreign oarsmen to foul them, but they finally pulled clear of the other contestants, and after a hard race won by over a length. They returned to their boathouse and at once began to prepare their boat for shipment to America, having accepted the invitation of George S. Stegmaier, who had aided them in their training, to pay a flying visit to Berlin, it being their intention to leave for the German capital the same evening. While dismantling their boat they heard in a casual way that there was some trouble over the race. Later they were visited by Commodore Adolp Tietjens of the yacht Hamburg and Franz F. Eiffe, who confirmed the report of the protest, and said the race was to be rowed over on the following day. Mr. Tietjens said he was very sorry the race had been spoiled by an inefficient referee, and if he had officiated the race certainly would have been awarded to the American crew, as they were entitled to it.

Mulcahy then stated in detail his protest to Dr. Rupertti against the decision and claimed the race. He said it was not until the following morning that they were told by Dr. Rupertti that they were not only not in the lead when the foul was committed, but they were absolutely last, and the two crews that had fouled each other in the race were in the lead.

William Varley's testimony was a repetition of Mulcahy's, and George S. Stegmaier, City Treasurer of Wilkesbarre, Penn., who saw the race, substantiated the oarsmen mainly.

Mulcahy handed a letter to the committee from Otto Witthaufer, Jr., in which he says he was informed that Mulcahy and Varley had won the race, and a professor from Heidelberg University had told him that "the two American gentlemen had won the race without a doubt." A note from F. J. Hoenig of Hamburg introducing Mulcahy and Varley to G. F. Zeller said: "This will introduce Mr. Mulcahy of the New York crew, who won the race here, and somebody got the prize."

Fred Fortmeyer, Secretary of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, presented the statements of Dr. Rupertti and other officials of the Hamburg regatta, which showed that Mulcahy and Varley had refused to recognize the ruling of the referee to row the race over again owing to a foul, and as a result the American crew did not row in the race which decided the ownership of the prize. The correspondence showed that at the time the foul was committed Mulcahy and Varley were not in the lead and the crew which the Americans claimed to have defeated was returning to the boathouse as a result of the foul. Dr. Rupertti in his statement said that the committee regretted the incident and voted to present the Americans with a silver cup as a souvenir of their visit.

Nothing was mentioned about the action of the oarsmen impressing their American friends with a victory when they knew they were not even in the actual race.

Four Athletic Meets To-day.

This promises to be a memorable day in the history of athletics in New York. It will be a sort of "open house" at the Madison Square Garden, for in the afternoon the free games for novices of the elementary schools, under the auspices of the Public Schools Athletic League, will be held, and in the evening the much-looked-for carnival of the Pastime Athletic Club will take place. There will be in the neighborhood of 1,300 boys represented in the school meet, while for the Pastime's event, which includes four National championships, all of the best metropolitan performers have entered.

Another attraction in the afternoon will be the annual meet of the New York Interscholastic Association, which will be decided at the Eighth Regiment Armory, while in the evening the annual games of the Twenty-third Regiment will be held at the armory in Brooklyn.

Gen. Wingate, President of the Public Schools Athletic League, called attention to the fact yesterday that the Principals of some schools have evidently misunderstood the arrangements made for admittance to the games. Only the authorized seat ticket will be accepted for admission, and not the white invitation card which accompanied a certain number of admission tickets.

Invincible Bowlers Beat Crescent.

The bowling team of the Invincible Club of Brooklyn gained a well-earned victory over the Crescent Athletic Club representatives last night, winning two games out of three in the Inter-Club League series on the New Moon Alleys. The scores follow:

FIRST GAME.

Crescent Athletic Club.—Worcester, 186; Doyle, 143; Judge, 172; Holmes, 203; Stebbens, 161. Total—865.

Invincible Club.—McElroy, 164; Mullins, 166; Mowen, 199; Leuly, 213; Fisher, 151. Total—893.

Seventh Regiment Teams Play Hockey

Two Seventh Regiment hockey teams played a match last evening at St. Nicholas Rink. Company K outclassed and defeated Company I by a score of 9 goals to 3. There was quite a gallery of pretty girls in attendance to cheer the soldiers at play, and there was some lively and spirited runs made. Company K's attack was superior. Line-up:

Company K, 9.	Position.	Company I, 3.
K. Smith	Goal	Saylor
Nicoll	Point	McKenna
Richards	Cover point	Starbuck
Struthers	Forward	Milligan
Kobbe	Forward	Slosson
E. Fiske	Forward	Myers
G. W. Fiske	Forward	Peabody

Goals—Richards (3,) E. Fiske (2,) G. W. Fiske, Peabody (2,) Slosson, Kobbe (2,) Struthers. Referee—C. Palmer, Moorestown Field Club. Goal Umpires—R. Strange, New York Athletic Club, and W. Struthers, Company K, Seventh Regiment. Time of halves—Twenty minutes each.

Umpire Sheridan Has Signed.

SAN JOSE, Cal., March 16.—Umpire "Jack" Sheridan announced last night that he had signed his 1906 contract with the American League, and would leave for the East next week.

CLUBMEN ON THE MAT.

N. Y. A. C. Wrestlers in Training for Championships Next Week.

Wrestlers of the New York Athletic Club are busily training for the thirteenth annual championship bouts of the organization, which will be held on March 21 in the gymnasium of the clubhouse, Sixth Avenue and Central Park South. Instructor Hugh Leonard has a splendid lot of men to contest in the five classes. A number of them will also compete in the metropolitan championships of the Amateur Athletic Union two weeks later. In the special weight class at 125 pounds W. P. Baxter, who has for two consecutive years held the title for this class and the Harned Medal, will endeavor to make the trophy his personal property. His most formidable opponent will be W. W. Swan, who has shown much improvement on the mat in his preliminary work.

Hugo Jaeckel, Jr., who has held the lightweight title for two years, will not be among the 135-pound men this season. He has been unable to train because of rheumatism. R. N. Dixon, J. Quinn, W. A. Haupt, and A. Narganes are among the most expert men in this class. Three good wrestlers are entered in the welter-weight class, 145 pounds. They include Richard Jaeckel, holder of the Richard Stevens Cup, which he won for the first time last year; E. A. Jurgensen, and C. R. Wood. Jurgensen gave Jaeckel a hard tussle for the cup a year ago, when he won the second prize.

The metropolitan champion, Fred Narganes, again heads the list for the middle-weight championship, his two strongest competitors being E. A. Jurgensen and Richard Jaeckel. The heavy-weight class, above 158 pounds, has received but few entries as yet. The list does not close until March 20, and before that date Instructor Leonard expects that Echeverria, Scott, Larendon, and Newton will fill the list. Dave Hennen will referee the bouts, and William Muldoon, the ex-professional champion, will act as one of the officials.

HAND TENNIS AT N. Y. A. C.

W. D. Bourne, Scratch, and W. A. McKenna, with 6 Aces, the Winners.

Two hotly contested hand tennis matches held the court of the New York Athletic Club yesterday afternoon, W. D. Bourne, a scratch player, and W. A. McKenna, handicapped at 6 aces, being the winners. Robertson gained a lead over Bourne in the opening set of their match, as the latter was unable to get his swift service into accurate working order. Bourne failed to score until his fifth service hand. He came up in fine trim on his eighth hand, rapidly scoring 11 aces by hard-hit place shots through Robertson's court. The latter came back at his opponent with 7 aces on his service, but to the end of the set Bourne held to the lead and won. Both men played fast at the net in the second set. When closely pressed Bourne used the lob stroke with good effect, just getting the ball over Robertson's head for the point. The play was so speedy that neither contestant was successful in scoring high on his service hand. The best hand was that played by Bourne on his last service, a run of 5 aces, with which he finished and won the match. The score:

FIRST SET.

W. D. Bourne, (scratch)—0 0 0 0 1 1 1 11 4 1 3 2 1. Total 25.

W. P. Robertson, (scratch)—0 1 1 3 1 1 0 0 7 1 1 2 1. Total, 19.

SECOND SET.

W. D. Bourne, (scratch)—2 3 3 2 0 1 1 1 0 2 3 1 1 5. Total, 25.

W. P. Robertson, (scratch)—1 0 3 1 0 1 2 0 2 8 1 2 0. Total, 10.

Linesmen—Dr. G. H. Mallett and W. A. McKenna.

Peter Doelger, Jr., worked heroically to win his match with McKenna, and by vigorous playing held to the lead in the first set until the playing of the twelfth service hand, when McKenna used his passing volley stroke with skill and scored 3 aces, which he followed up with 2, and finally taking the set at 25—20. The pace of the first set fatigued Doelger so greatly that he was able to do little more than play on the defensive in the last set, McKenna winning by 25—17.

More Perfect Scores in Zettler Shoot.

In the rifle tourney in progress on the range of the Zettler Rifle Club, at 159 West Twenty-third Street, several good additional scores were made yesterday. In the 100-shot match, possible 2,500 score, four more men made better than 2,400. R. Gute stepped into second place with 2,464, 4 behind the leader, A. Hubalck. W. A. Tewes is now third with 2,461, while Dr. Hudson of Colorado took fourth with 2,450. F. R. Geisel took tenth place with 2,429, and G. Schleit eleventh with 2,431.

F. H. Kellar increased his lead for the most bull's-eyes, having now 58 to his credit. Dr. Hudson joined those tied for third in the Zimmerman Trophy target match with 88, 38, 37, while in the re-entry three-shot one-eighth-inch ring target match, possible 75, A. F. Lautenbach took the lead with his fourth 75 score, leaving R. Gute and E. Ittel tied for second with three perfect scores. W. J. Carr made another 75, tying L. Buss with two, and Dr. Hudson and F. R. Geisel joined E. H. Van Zandt as the only others that have made perfect scores.

The tournament ends to-night.

Donlin Trains with Giants Again.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 16.—Michael Donlin returned to the training fold to-day, taking an active part in road runs and other forms of preliminary practice of the Giants' local season. The belligerent player, who apologized last night to McGraw for breach of baseball etiquette offered to his manager, was in an amicable mood all day.

There was little doing to-day in the practice performance of the Giants. Outside of the sprints of the two squads, led by Manager McGraw during the afternoon hours on the city and suburban streets, there was little physical exercise indulged in. With warmer weather promised here, the first clash in many days of the rival "colt" and "vet" squads is promised for to-morrow.

Greater New Yorks Have Light Work.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 16.—The appearance of the sun this afternoon allowed the Greater New Yorks to return to the park, and while the weather was cold, Griffith put the men through a light practice. After batting a few easy ones to the infield Griffith set the pace about the park, and the men ran for several minutes. To-morrow, in case the weather moderates sufficiently, will occur the second regular game with the Birminghams. Clark and Wilhelm will be the pitchers for the local team, and Griffith will use Chesbro and Orth.

Columbia Bowlers in the Lead.

Columbia won an easy victory over the Haverford bowlers last night at the Riverside Alleys, in West 125th Street, taking three straight games. Schlacter of Columbia was high man, with 225. The scores:

FIRST GAME.

Columbia—C. Schlacter, 144; J. Cosgrove, 182; M. Ansorge, 191; W. White, 180; W. Scharf, 105. Total—802.

Haverford—W. Kennard, 188; G. Comfort, 146; W. Lindsay, 134; T. Crowell, 167; D. Schweyer, 178. Total—813.

SECOND GAME.

Columbia—C. Schlacter, 181; J. Cosgrove, 146; M. Ansorge, 159; W. White, 171; W. Scharf, 156. Total—813.

Haverford—W. Kennard, 156; G. Comfort, 157; W. Lindsay, 132; T. Crowell, 124; D. Schweyer, 101. Total—780.

THIRD GAME.

Columbia—C. Schlacter, 225, J. Cosgrove, 183; M. Ansorge, 190; W. White, 167; W. Scharf, 140. Total—905.

Haverford—D. Kennard, 143; G. Comfort, 156; W. Lindsay, 128; T. Crowell, 119; D. Schweyer, 125. Total—671.

AUTOMOBILE TOURS PERSONALLY CONDUCTED

Motoring in Europe Next Summer to be Made Easier.

THREE TRIPS ARE PLANNED

American Cars to be Used in Sight-seeing Runs Through France, Spain, and Switzerland.

Automobile touring in Europe will be comparatively easy the coming Summer. Personally conducted tours by motor cars through the most picturesque and historically interesting parts of France, with side runs into Italy, Switzerland, and Germany, is the latest thing for comfortable European travel. T. Winton Henderson of Philadelphia has arranged three different trips, and he has already secured nearly enough passengers to fill all the cars that he intends to use.

In addition to Mr. Henderson's plan a new organization has lately been formed in this city for the purpose of supplying correct and helpful information to intending tourists who may wish to hire a car abroad and make their own trip. Maps, routes, hotel and other information will be supplied either here or in Paris. Sight-seeing in Europe from a motor car has become so popular that a public bureau of information has become an absolute necessity.

Winthrop E. Scarritt, ex-President of the Automobile Club of America, who made a tour through France last Summer, and is now writing a book of his experiences, said that he was surprised at the poor facilities for information on touring conditions.

"If there were some bureau where intending motor travelers could go and ascertain the expense of certain trips, how much it costs to hire a car by the week or month, what a good chauffeur is worth, what clothing and necessities should be taken along, and many other details, this would be highly appreciated and save lots of trouble."

These necessities will all be forthcoming the coming Summer. Mr. Henderson's plan is interesting from its novelty, and also because he is first in the field to realize the possibilities of a personally conducted tour. He has arranged every detail with extreme care. He has planned three tours, each lasting about six weeks. The cost of each tour, including every expense—hotels, railway fares when necessary, and amusement expenses—is $965.

Mr. Henderson's first party will leave New York May 23, sailing on the steamer Noordam. The second party will leave on the steamer New Amsterdam on July 4, and the third tour will start on Aug. 11, its members sailing on the steamer Zeeland. The itinerary for the first and third tours is the same, but the second trip will go through a different part of the country.

It is expected that the tourists on the first trip will reach Boulogne on June 2. Mr. Henderson will accompany them to Paris by rail, where two days in sightseeing will be spent. On June 5 the party will take to their motor cars, American machines being used exclusively. The run will lead through Orleans, along the River Loire, and visits will be made to the famous French castles in the south of France. Stops will also be made at Poitiers, Bordeaux, and three days will be spent at Biarritz, from which a little trip will be made into Spain. Leaving Biarritz, the tour will skirt the foot of the Pyrenees Mountains, stopping at Pau, Nimes, then Marseilles and Toulon. A leisurely tour of five days will follow along the Riviera, visiting Cannes, Mentone, Nice, and Monte Carlo. A run will then be made to Avignon, then north along the Rhone River to Valence, stopping for three days at Aix-les-Bains. On the homeward run to Paris, Lyons, Dijon, and Fontainebleau will be visited, and on July 6 the party will sail for home.

The second tour will give the tourists a taste of Switzerland. Making Paris the starting point, the run will extend to Tours, Vichy, Lyons, Aix-les-Bains, and then to Geneva. A week will be spent in touring and visiting different parts of Switzerland, finishing at Bale, in the northern part of the Alpine country, from which place the return journey will begin, stopping at Dijon and Fontainebleau on the way to Paris.

While traveling by motor car, each passenger will be allowed to carry one suit case or valise and one handbag, which will be protected by dust and water proof carriers. Trunks and heavy baggage will be shipped ahead. Only four passengers will be carried in each car. Mr. Henderson will drive one car on every trip, and he has secured experienced chauffeurs to pilot the other cars.

MULDOON QUITS WRESTLING.

Bothner Secures Fall and His Opponent Refuses to Go On.

The first wrestling exhibition at the newly organized Paddock Athletic Club at its quarters at 250 West Thirty-fourth Street resulted in a fizzle last night through no fault of the management. George Bothner and Young Muldoon were to wrestle a twenty-minute bout as the main feature of the opening programme. After shaking hands Bothner dropped his opponent to the mat with a leg and arm hold and fell on top of him. Before the men had been in this position more than a minute Bothner secured a half Nelson and bar lock and gradually bore down on Muldoon. Muldoon bridged, but Bothner steadily forced him down, and in three minutes and 30 seconds received the referee's slap, having scored a pin fall.

Muldoon crawled through the rope. "Where are you going?" shouted Referee Florrie Barnett after him. "Going to quit," answered Muldoon, "that was no fall." Immediately there was a commotion. Barnett stood dumbfounded, while the crowd hissed wildly. "I'll give you five minutes to get back in the ring," shouted Barnett when he had recovered from his surprise, and Muldoon withdrew into a corner, where his seconds gathered about him and endeavored to persuade him to return. Muldoon refused, so Barnett awarded the bout to Bothner.

The two preliminaries repaid those who attended the show. They were both excellent contests. Both resulted in draws, because pin falls were required.

In the first preliminary Charles Weaver and Dick Kugler wrestled twenty minutes to a draw at catch weights, about 140 pounds.

In a fast, aggressive bout neither young Roeber nor John Tompkins could secure a fall in twenty-five minutes.

Recreation Centre Championship.

Evening Recreation Centre No. 16 defeated Recreation Centres Nos. 31, 110, and 105 in an athletic meet held last night for the district championship at Public School No. 188, East Houston and Lewis Streets. The result was close, No. 16, with 33 points, beating No. 31 by only 7 points. There was much enthusiasm when No. 31 won both junior and senior relays, thus taking the lead in points, but first place in the high jumps enabled No. 16 to regain the lead.

COLUMBIA WRESTLERS WON.

Defeated Princeton in Well-Contested Match by 4 Bouts to 3.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 16.—Columbia defeated Princeton here to-night in a well-contested wrestling match by 4 bouts to 3. The local wrestlers seemed in good form, but on the whole the team, which was the same that met Yale last week, did not exhibit the fierceness they did against the New Haven men. The contest was so even that three of the matches went the limit of fifteen minutes, when Referee Feagles was forced to render a decision on points. Of these Columbia won two and Princeton one.

Decidedly the most interesting match was that between E. O. Howell, 1907, Princeton, and W. W. Wise of Columbia. The two special 125-pounders struggled with varying success until just one minute before the time would have been called, when Howell secured a half Nelson and turned his man with a hammer-lock. Probably the fastest match of the evening was that between J. F. Cross of Princeton and I. Bloom, which Cross won after vigorous work. The summary:

Featherweight.—J. F. Cross, Princeton, threw I. Bloom, Columbia, by a half Nelson. Time—3:45.

Special Weight.—E. O. Howell, Princeton, threw W. W. Wise, Columbia, by a hammer-lock and half Nelson. Time—14:00.

Lightweight.—A. S. Shimmon, Columbia, threw A. H. Scott, Princeton, by a half Nelson and body hold. Time—2:27.

Welterweight.—E. P. Kilroe, Columbia, threw A. H. Ormond, Princeton, by a half Nelson. Time—6:30.

Middleweight.—E. P. Kilroe, Columbia, gained the decision over J. K. Ormond, Princeton.

Light Heavyweight.—J. R. Dickson, Princeton, gained the decision over H. B. Post, Columbia.

Heavyweight.—J. F. Echivirla, Columbia, gained the decision over R. R. King, Princeton.

WRIGHT'S HIGH-RUN RECORD.

San Francisco Billiardist Ties Poggenburg's Average in Championship.

CHICAGO, March 16.—H. A. Wright of San Francisco in the National billiard tournament to-day defeated Calvin Demarest of Chicago. He made a high record run of 127 for the tournament and tied the individual average of 16 12-18 made yesterday by Poggenburg, the Liederkranz Club competitor from New York. Wright made his 300 points to 265 for Demarest at 14.2 balk line.

It took Wright eighteen innings to run the game out and 199 out of the 300 points were made in the last two innings. For the first sixteen innings his stroke was bad and his judgment on cushion shots was poor. Demarest also left the balls in difficult positions.

At the end of the sixteenth inning Wright's score was 101 and that of his opponent 260. When Wright opened the seventeenth inning he started in with deliberation, studying every shot carefully. His control of the balls seemed to be perfect until the sixty-fourth point had been scored, when the balls became frozen in the corner. He chose to spot the balls, and then continued clicking off billiards until he had rolled up 127, the highest run of the tournament, exceeding Poggenburg's high run by 15.

In his seventeenth inning Demarest made 5 and then missed. Wright finished with a run of 72. Demarest played a brilliant game, making an average of 15 10-17 and a high run of 75 in the eighth inning. Summary:

Wright—Total, 300; high run, 127; average, 16 12-18.

Demarest—Total, 265; high run, 75; average, 15 10-17.

After one of the most tedious games seen since the tournament began, Gardner won to-night from Norris, the score being 300 to 263. Both players were in poor form and it took Gardner 46 innings to run the game out. Norris started off in the lead with a run of 36 and kept well ahead until the forty-second inning, when Gardner, who had been playing weak billiards, passed his opponent. Summary:

Gardner—Total, 300; high run, 41; average, 6 24-46.

Norris—Total, 263; high run, 36; average, 5 38-45.

Basket Ball Victory for St. George.

The St. George Athletic Club basket ball team defeated the Grace Church team last night in the St. George Athletic Club gymnasium by the score of 37 goals to 14. The game was in the Church League championship series, and the final match to decide the title will be played next Wednesday in the St. George gymnasium, 207 East Sixteenth Street. The St. George players last night outclassed their opponents in all-around team work and superior accuracy in throwing the ball. The line-up:

St. George, 37.	Position.	Grace, 14.
Rohner	Left forward	Stutz
Feidel	Right forward	Stumph
Mayer	Centre	Wielage
Kleifuf	Right guard	Eaffner

In the junior championship series the St. George team also defeated the junior Grace Church team by a score of 27 goals to 7.

High Billiard Average for Hoppe.

Willie Hoppe, the world's champion billiardist, was in grand form again last night in his match with Tom Gallagher at Hoppe's billiard rooms, 56 West Thirtieth Street. Playing 18.1 balk line, the young player ran out his 400 points in twelve innings, making the splendid average of 33 1-3 and a high run of 196, within one of his record high run during the present exhibition games. Gallagher, who played 18.2 balk line, made 118, his average being 10 8-11. The scores are:

Hoppe—58 31 2 1 2 29 1 196 2 29 17 32. Total, 400; average, 33 1-3.

Gallagher—5 0 56 0 18 5 7 5 2 1 19. Total, 118; average, 10 8-11.

In the afternoon Hoppe ran out 200 points to 88 for Thomas McManus. Hoppe's average was 20, his best run being 149. McManus made a high run of 11 and averaged 4 2-9.

American Athletes Represent Oxford.

LONDON, March 16.—Three American Rhodes Scholarship students have been selected to represent Oxford in the inter-university sports which are to take place on March 24. P. M. Young, University of South Dakota, will compete in the high jumping; Warren E. Schutt, Cornell, in the one-mile run, and Albert M. Stevens of Willimantic, Conn., in the hammer throwing.

In the Balliol College sports to-day Stevens won the broad and high jumps and the 120-yard hurdles.

Coe Under the Ban at Michigan.

Wesley W. Coe has been added to the already long list of athletes recently disqualified by the Western universities and colleges for offenses against the amateur code for Summer baseball playing or for deficiencies in scholarship. Coe is out for the latter reason, and will be unable to compete for the University of Michigan, adding one more to the number of his collegiate experiences. Coe has been a registered student at Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Oxford, and Michigan since he was a schoolboy athlete of uncommon ability and renown.

Schoenweg Lost First Game at Pool.

H. Schoenweg met with his first defeat in the amateur pool tourney at the Broadway Billiard Academy last night, L. Davis, playing 125, winning from Schoenweg, who had 100 to make, by a score of 125 to 60. The winner's high run was 28, and he had but one scratch. Schoenweg's best run was 17, and he had two scratches. The result of this game places W. Downs and Schoenweg on even terms for first place, with six victories and one defeat. To-night W. Downs, 100, will play S. Meehan, 100.

COLLEGE FENCERS BEGIN CHAMPIONSHIP TOURNEY

West Point Lads Lead Columbia Slightly in Early Bouts.

OTHERS PLAINLY OUTCLASSED

Cadets, Dickinson, and Williford of West Point and Kehrlein of Columbia Make Perfect Scores.

West Point fencers took the leading position last night in the preliminary fencing bouts of the championship tournament of the Intercollegiate Fencing Association. Two of the members of the team, Dickinson and Williford, finished the night with clean scores, and their skill with the weapon won the admiration of the large assemblage of fencing experts present in the gymnasium of the New York Athletic Club, Sixth Avenue and Central Park South. Next to West Point, the fencers of Columbia University showed best. Lage, the intercollegiate champion of last year, held to a clean score of victories until he met Dichman of the Naval Academy. The young cadet from Annapolis made short work of Lage, defeating him with an unexpected ease that was the surprise of the night.

Seven teams were represented in the preliminary bouts, including Annapolis, West Point, Columbia, Cornell, Pennsylvania, Harvard, and Princeton. A team was entered from Yale, but serious academic conditions barred one of the best of the men and caused the team to withdraw at the last moment from the competition. The series will be finished to-night, when both individual and team championships will be awarded.

The bouts of three minutes each were rapidly run off. The schedule of the evening contained eighty-four of these bouts, but long before they were completed the West Pointers had demonstrated their superiority in no uncertain way. There were three men on each team, and a new method of competition was used, by which the leaders of each met the other leaders, the second men the second on opposing teams, and so on. Humphreys lost the only bout scored against the West Point team. He was defeated by Rousset of Pennsylvania, who wielded a cunning foil, which found the inside of Humphreys's guard, much to the discomfiture of the cadet. On the Columbia team, Kehrlein caused considerable surprise by his splendid showing, which was better than he has ever before demonstrated in previous tournaments. Kehrlein won all five of his bouts without ever being hard pressed.

One of the most spirited bits of fencing was that which occurred in the bout between Dichman of Annapolis and Bowman of Harvard. The latter tied with the naval cadet on the first bout. Then they faced each other a second time, and Dichman won by a single touché. The summary:

United States Naval Academy winners—Dichman beat Beltrami, University of Pennsylvania; Burdick beat Howard, Cornell; Dichman beat Bowman, Harvard; Crenshaw beat McLeod, Harvard; Burdick beat Miller, Columbia; Dichman beat Lage, Columbia.

United States Military Academy winners—Dickinson beat Delcasse, Cornell; Williford beat Fleischer, Pennsylvania; Dickinson beat Dichman, Military Academy; Williford beat Burdick, Naval Academy; Humphreys beat Crenshaw, Naval Academy; Dickinson beat Delcasse, Cornell; Williford beat Howard, Cornell; Dickinson beat Bowman, Harvard; Williford beat Tyng, Harvard; Humphreys beat McLeod, Harvard; Dickinson beat Auerbach, Princeton; Williford beat McAlpin, Princeton; Humphreys beat Breckenridge, Princeton.

Columbia University winners—Lage beat Bowman, Harvard; Kehrlein beat McLeod, Harvard; Lage beat Beltrami, Pennsylvania; Kehrlein beat Rousset, Pennsylvania; Lage beat Auerbach, Princeton; Miller beat McAlpin, Princeton; Kehrlein beat Breckenridge, Princeton, Lage beat Delcasse, Cornell; Kehrlein beat Crenshaw, Naval Academy; Kehrlein beat Heckheimer, Cornell.

Cornell University winners—Heckheimer beat Crenshaw, Naval Academy; Heckheimer beat Humphreys, Military Academy; Howard beat Miller, Columbia.

University of Pennsylvania winners—Rousset beat Humphreys, Military Academy; Fleischer beat Miller, Columbia; Fleischer beat McAlpin, Princeton; Rousset beat McLeod, Harvard.

Harvard University winners—Tyng beat Miller, Columbia; Tyng beat McAlpin, Princeton; Tyng beat Burdick, Naval Academy; Bowman beat Beltrami, Pennsylvania; Tyng beat Fleischer, Pennsylvania.

Princeton University winners—Auerbach beat Bowman, Harvard; Breckenridge beat McLeod, Harvard; Auerbach beat Beltrami, Pennsylvania; Breckenridge beat Rousset, Pennsylvania.

Harvard Crews in a Race.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 16.—Harvard's 'Varsity crew had its first race of the year this afternoon and the showing made was entirely satisfactory. The 'Varsity and the second crew engaged in a quarter-mile brush, and though the second boat rowed a much higher stroke than the 'Varsity, the first eight led by more than two lengths at the end of the quarter.

Capt. Filley stroked the 'Varsity: Guild, 7; Bacon, 6; Richardson, 5; Glass, 4; Emmons, 3; Newhall, 2, and Flint, bow.

Race King Travels Five Furlongs in 1:13¼—Final Work for Benning.

At Gravesend yesterday "Jim" McLaughlin gave his Benning string of thoroughbreds the final preparation before the shipment to-day. The weather and track conditions were fairly favorable, and some of the moves of the horses in his charge were decidedly impressive. He is taking a particularly large string, and unless all signs fail should be a factor in the early races of the Washington Jockey Club.

The Poet, one that has been going along in excellent fashion for some time, was sent along briskly for five furlongs in 1:13½. He has improved greatly over last season and ought to be a thoroughly useful horse. Kuro had the same task, and he finished up, with plenty to spare, in 1:14. Blue Coat stepped his five-furlong breeze in 1:13½ and was fighting for his head all the way. High Brush, Jack McKeon, and Race King were sent along in company, and it was over the same route in 1:13¼. Race King, probably the best horse that McLaughlin has in his care, is looking well and is ready for the races. The hoof that spread in a race at Benning last Fall appears to have healed and he is to all intents and purposes perfectly sound.

Of the two-year-olds Moccasin and The Galloper breezed a clever three furlongs in 0:42. They went along in company. Miss Dixon accomplished her three-furlong task in 0:42½. Solly M. and Sun Up were shown together in a handy three furlongs in 0:42¼, while Sunburst and Mode went the same route in 0:42.

Trainer Burlew had a busy day with the Newton Bennington string. Green Room and Waterbearer together went a smart quarter in 0:27¾. Belmere's task was three furlongs in 0:41½; Marius Caius, a quarter in 0:27, and Cinna the same route in 0:26¾. Edna Jackson, one that has developed into an impressive three-year-old, breezed along for three furlongs in 0:43. She had plenty in reserve all the way and is not far from racing condition.

The large string of two-year-olds was also sent along nicely. Paumonok and Sir Toddington had no trouble in breezing a quarter in 0:27. Judge Post, Captain Emerick, and Waterbury, in company, accomplished the same task. This trio looks well and has a way of going suggestive of real class. Tiro went a quarter in 0:27 and was permitted to go along to the three-furlong mark in 0:42. Ellicott romped his quarter in 0:27¼ and Demund and Waterfall breezed three furlons in 0:43. Dollie Dollars and Miss Spooner went a quarter in 0:27¼ and Gold Note was at the 0:27 mark for the same distance. All of these youngsters have been going along in a manner that suggests an early start, and it will be surprising if there is not much useful stake quality developed in the big string before the racing season is old.

Phil J. Dwyer's Red Eye went a smart three furlongs in 0:42. He shows improvement over last season and has a nice way of going.

Con Leighton had Little Flea and Clovercrest under saddle, and after a long gallop they were allowed to step along through the front stretch for a quarter in 0:28.

With the McLaughlin string that leaves to-day will go a two-year-old filly that has been in preparation for the Oxnard Dinner Stakes. She is the property of H. T. Oxnard and is by Knight of the Thistle, out of Reginelle.

"Father Bill" Daly will ship his Benning string Monday. He promises to send the lot through some stiff work to-day.

David Gideon has taken a house at Sheepshead Bay for the season. Little was done among the trainers at Sheepshead Bay yesterday, though some horses were shown in light galloping exercise.

POLICE PROTECT JOCKEY.

Miller Ruled Off—New Orleans Race Crowd Resents His Ride.

NEW ORLEANS, March 16.—Steeplechase Jockey E. Miller furnished the excitement at City Park to-day. He had the mount on Judge Nolan in the second race, and to many spectators seemed to keep the horse from finishing in the money. Judge Nolan was ridden to the extreme outside at every jump and was finally pulled in behind the leaders.

Before the numbers went up a howling mob was after the jockey, who took refuge in the paddock under the protection of the police. The stewards at once ruled Miller off the turf, and as soon as the excitement had quieted down he was smuggled out of the grounds, escaping a small but determined knot of men who waited for him in the customary exits.

Pirate, which won the race, was the only winning favorite of the day. Covina was caught in a jam at the half mile in the last race, fell, and broke his leg. The track was lumpy and slow.

Favorites cut no figure in to-day's racing at the Fair Grounds, all six being beaten. The track was slow, and is worked constantly for the big race to-morrow.

THE average young man must take his fling at extreme fashion—lend himself to the exploitation of his tailor's wildest fancy. When he awakens to the dignity of man's estate, he appreciates the eloquence of good taste that silently bears testimony to character.

Apawamis Player Wins 21-Hole Game at Pinehurst in Final.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 16.—J. D. Foot of Apawamis, who beat C. L. Becker of Woodland, Mass., for the club championship last week, will meet the same opponent again to-morrow in the thirty-six-hole final round for the chief trophy in the second annual Spring tournament.

The weather was perfect for the match-play contests to-day, half a dozen rounds under eighty being played, and Mr. Foot's match in the second round with E. B. Humphreys of Camden, N. J., required twenty-one holes, Foot finally winning by a put. J. O. H. Denny of Oakmont, Penn., beat H. C. Fownes by one hole in a close game, but in the semi-finals Denny was beaten by Foot.

Where Americans Will Swim.

Information received from England announces the dates for the English swimming championships for which the American swimmers, who are going to Athens to compete in the Olympic games, will remain abroad to enter. The Amateur Swimming Association has settled on July 7 for the opening contest, and others at various times until Oct. 1. The list is:

Long Distance—July 7, at London.
One Mile—July 14, at Bradford.
One Hundred Yards—July 15, at Nottingham.
Five Hundreds Yards—Aug. 13, at Weston-super-Mare.

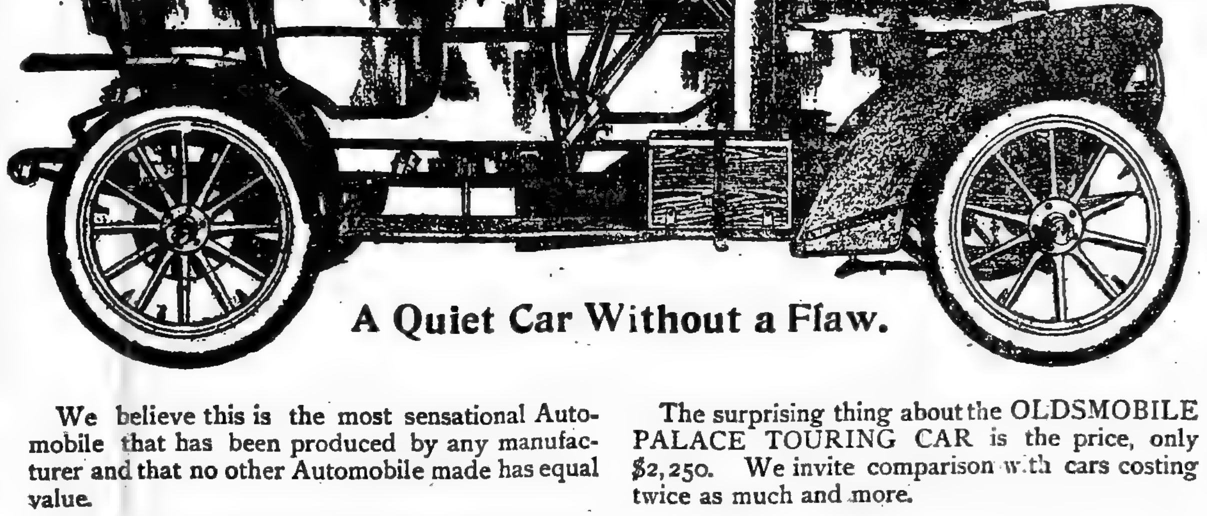
Oldsmobile

4 Cylinder Palace Touring Car $2,250



A Quiet Car Without a Flaw.

We believe this is the most sensational Automobile that has been produced by any manufacturer and that no other Automobile made has equal value.

The more you know about Automobiles the more anxious we are to have you examine and ride in this one.

If you are not an expert, bring your friend who is Automobile-wise.

First we want to give you a demonstration. Try it on the road, on the hills, on good roads and bad roads. Then we will go over the car with you part by part, and if it is possible to make a better Automobile or to use better materials in one, we will be thankful if you can show us how and where.

The surprising thing about the OLDSMOBILE PALACE TOURING CAR is the price, only $2,250. We invite comparison with cars costing twice as much and more.

Four cylinder water cooled motor, sliding gear transmission (selected type) controlled by one lever, 26-28 horse power, shaft drive, powerful and perfect system of brakes—in fact, just the best there is of everything and not a weak point anywhere.

This advertisement is our invitation to you to come and see the car. If you can't come to us let us send the car to you.

Come and see the Oldsmobile Fast Roadster—the 4 cylinder, 2 passenger, 30 horse power car. Speed, 60 miles an hour. Price $2,250.

Oldsmobile Co. of N. Y.
Broadway and 31st Street.

The good old standby—the $650 Oldsmobile Runabout—is made in two styles now—curved dash and straight. We have both kinds to show you.

MRS. POILLON NOW SUES EX-GOV. BLACK'S FIRM

Says $8,422 Is Due Her from the Brokaw Settlement.

INTIMATES SHE WAS DUPED

Says She Thought She Signed a Receipt for $2,370.42 When She Really Signed a General Release.

The law firm of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge, of which ex-Gov. Frank S. Black is the head, was made the defendant yesterday in a suit for an accounting brought by Mrs. Katherine Poillon, in the Supreme Court. Mrs. Poillon sued W. Gould Brokaw for $250,000 for breach of promise of marriage, and the law firm was her agent when the suit was compromised for $17,500.

The complaint, drawn by Henry T. Goldsmith, recites that in all the plaintiff received $6,078.67 from her attorneys. She estimates that there is still due her from the law firm $8,422. She says that the reasonable value of the lawyers' services was $2,000.

Mrs. Poillon intimates in her complaint that she was duped, declaring that when she thought she was signing a receipt for $2,370.42, she was in reality signing a general release for all claims she might have against the lawyers. Her allegation upon this point reads as follows:

> In truth and in fact, as this plaintiff has been informed and believes, the said instrument purporting to be a receipt as aforesaid was a general release of all claims from this plaintiff against the defendants, and that said representations were false and untrue and so known to be by the defendants at the time the same were made for the purpose of inducing the plaintiff to sign the instrument of release in the belief that it was a receipt as aforesaid.

The plaintiff includes in her complaint a long account of her dealings with lawyers in her suit against Brokaw. She says that prior to December, 1903, she instituted the breach of promise suit, with James T. Fitzgerald as her counsel. In December, 1903, she declares, the present defendant firm was substituted as attorneys of record. Mr. Fitzgerald has sued Mrs. Poillon for $2,625, alleged to be due him for his services before Black, Olcott, Gruber & Boynge were retatined. If Fitzgerald should win this suit it would reduce Mrs. Poillon's share of the $17,500 paid to the defendant firm, according to her account, to $3,458.

In the extended account of her dealings with lawyers contained in her complaint, Mrs. Poillon sets forth that she made an attempt to retain ex-Assistant District Attorney James W. Osborne as her counsel. She says that Mr. Hess, of the firm of Osborne & Hess, offered to act for her while Mr. Osborne was abroad, and that she signed some sort of a paper, believing that Mr. Osborne was her attorney in fact.

Dynamite Bomb Found in Ice.

SPOKANE, Washington, March 16.—Following an attempt made three weeks ago to blow up the Standard Mill, three miles west of Wallace, Idaho, a dynamite bomb was found yesterday in the ice on the south fork of the Coeur d'Alene River, back of the fire station and in the heart of Wallace. The bomb was a sheet-lead-incased cylinder, 13½ inches long, 27½ inches in circumference, and contained thirty pounds of dynamite.

Reappraisement Proceedings Held to be Valid—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Judge Somerville the Board of United States General Appraisers overruled yesterday a protest filed by Thomas Leeming & Co. of New York, it being held that various reappraisement proceedings before the board and certain acts of Collector Stranahan were regular, and not illegal, as charged in the protest.

Judge Waite wrote a decision sustaining the contention of A. Cora of San Francisco, it being held that certain chocolate confections were properly dutiable at the specific rates charged in Paragraph 281, and not at the high rate of 50 per cent. ad valorem under the provision for "sugar candy and all confectionery not provided for."

Other importers' claims sustained were filed by Loeb & Co. and others, New York; William C. Schoenemann and others, Philadelphia, and K. Franco, San Juan, Porto Rico.

The board overruled protests by the Stillwell-Germain Importing Company, Charles T. Jones, Magnus & Lauer, the American Express Company, Moor Nadir Ally, Peebles, Sackett & Crawford, and William W. Thomas & Co., New York; Julius S. Lowitz and Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., New York; J. D. Williston, Bangor, Me.; Central Vermont Railway Company, Burlington, Vt.; M. Sellar & Co., Portland, Ore.; G. W. Morris, Portland, Me., and Samuel Jagger, Plattsburg, N. Y. Protests by Robert Ronsman, New York, and the Rosenthal-Sloan Millinery Company, St. Louis, Mo., were partially sustained.

CURRENCY MOVEMENT.

Estimates of the loss in cash by the banks this week resulting from the known movements of money varied yesterday from a nominal amount to about $2,200,000. The estimates of the net results of the movements to and from the interior varied considerably. The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper amounted to $2,479,900. This was reduced by the receipt of payments for new gold and, in some of the estimates, by a large gain from the interior.

Discussing the week's movements of currency The Wall Street Journal says in its issue to-day:

The reported movements of currency this week indicate a gain in cash held by the banks of $122,900. They received from the interior $6,668,300, and sent to the interior $4,878,400, including $2,082,000 National bank-notes sent to Washington for redemption. The gain from the interior was $1,789,900; receipts of new gold were $812,900, namely, $681,800 on New York Assay Office checks, $117,800 on San Francisco Mint checks and telegraphic transfers, and $13,300 on Seattle Assay Office checks.

Ordinary disbursements by the Sub-Treasury were $20,411,000, extraordinary disbursements were $1,700,000, of which $200,000 was increase of United States deposits in New York banks, and $1,500,000 was increase of United States deposits in other banks paid to their New York correspondents, making total disbursement $22,111,100. Payments by banks to the Sub-Treasury for customs, internal revenue, 5 per cent. redemption fund, retirement of circulation, &c., were $24,591,000. The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was $2,479,900. The total gain from the interior, $1,789,900 and new gold $812,900; was $2,602,800. Deducting from this the loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper, $2,479,900, the net gain was $122,900.

Receipts of currency from the interior were about $354,000 more than in the preceding week, while shipments, not taking into consideration the extraordinary transfer to San Francisco last week of $2,000,000 for Japanese account, were $2,293,300 less. Receipts were chiefly from near by points and the South. Shipments were pretty well distributed; about $2,000,000 was sent to Boston.

The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was caused by payments into the 5 per cent. fund, transfers of internal revenue collection, and deposits of lawful money for the retirement of circulation. The loss would have been about $1,700,000 greater if it had not been for the increase in United States deposits. Customs collections were $4,390,869, compared with $3,881,500 in the preceding week. Pension payments were $1,013,000, compared with $479,000 in the preceding week.

INCORPORATED IN DELAWARE.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, March 16.—The State Department to-day issued certificates of incorporation to the Mount Morris Petroleum Company of Meadville, Penn., to engage in buying and selling and to otherwise deal in oil and gas and lamps; capital, $100,000.

The George F. Lang Company of Wilmington, to manufacture and deal in mattresses and to carry on the business of storing and warehousing; capital, $25,000.

Weekly Failure Report.

Bradstreet's reports 187 failures in the United States during the week against 177 for the previous week and 186, 193, 194, and 197 for the corresponding weeks of 1905 to 1902. The Middle States had 57, New England 30, Southern 34, Western 30, Northwestern 22, Pacific 13, and Territories 1. Canada had 33 against 34 for the preceding week. About 86 per cent. of the total number of concerns failing had a capital of $5,000 or less and 8 per cent. had from $5,000 to $20,000 capital.

American Knit Goods Company Settles

A meeting of creditors of the American Knit Goods Manufacturing Company, whose sales office was at 43 Leonard Street and factory at Wythe Avenue and Penn Street, Brooklyn, was held yesterday before Arthur T. Stoutenburgh, referee in bankruptcy in Brooklyn, and a pomposition at 27½ cents on the dollar was accepted. The unsecured liabilities are about $200,000 and the secured liabilities $400,000. Leo Oppenheimer of Thomas & Oppenheimer is the Trustee of the estate. Most of the creditors are in Manhattan.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

SYLVESTER ROBERTS.—Sylvester Roberts, machinist and carpenter at Chester, Orange County, N. Y., has filed a petition in bankruptcy here, with liabilities $3,000 and assets $40, in tools and stock.

HERMANN DOHRMANN.—Hermann Dohrmann, bartender of 444 First Avenue, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $4,649, contracted in 1897, when he kept a saloon, and no assets. The largest creditor is Fred Hackman, $4,000, for money loaned.

GORDON & STEIN.—Isaac Gordon and Abraham Stein, composing the firm of Gordon & Stein, painters of 32 West 116th Street, have filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $6,578 and nominal assets $3,816 in claims which are in suit. They began business on Oct. 1, 1904.

CAROLINE H. BARTHELMESS.—Caroline H. Barthelmess, residing at 413 West Fifty-seventh Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $1,706 and no assets. The debts were contracted between 1899 and 1905 for household supplies, drugs, medical services, legal services, teacher's services, &c.

JOHN RUEGE.—John Ruege, barkeeper, of 692 East 142d Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $18,766, contracted in 1900 and 1901, and nominal assets $135 in outstanding accounts of no value. Among the creditors are M. Groh's Sons, $8,500; Engel, Heller & Co., $1,350, and Cook & Bernheimer, $650. The same liabilities appear in a petition in bankruptcy filed on Jan. 30, 1903, by John Ruege, Jr., who was formerly a liquor dealer at 61 Amsterdam Avenue, which case was closed without a discharge.

CHICAGO CLOTHES DRYER WORKS.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed Frederick McLaughlin receiver in bankruptcy for the assets of the Chicago Clothes Dryer Works of 136 West Twenty-fourth Street, with a bond of $10,000, and he was authorized to continue the business for ten days. It was stated that the assets are $17,500, consisting of cash $1,000, machinery $3,000, due on contracts now $6,000, and on contracts when completed $7,500. Several suits are pending in the State courts against the company, and these are stayed by an order of Judge Holt.

H. HUENNEKES COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of H. Huennekes Company, engineer and contractor at 114 Liberty Street and at Chicago, show liabilities $76,686 and nominal assets $244,885, consisting of office furniture $600, patents $1,000, shares of stock in other companies $57,900, the largest being 400 shares in the New York Granite Brick Company $49,000, and outstanding accounts $185,385, of which $58,147 is for machinery and $127,238 upon licenses. Among the creditors are the Abbe Engineering Company, $17,693; Chisholm, Boyd & White Company, $17,068; Struthers, Wells Company, $8,515; Hooven, Owens, Rentschler & Co., Hamilton, Ohio, $4,116; Ohio Ceramic Engineering Company, $4,537; Stephens Adams Manufacturing Company, Chicago, $4,033, and Austin Manufacturing Company, $3,888.

CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

The widespread Winter storm has delayed the opening of Spring trade at retail, causing some complaint of bad roads and interruption to personal buying at leading jobbing centres. On the other hand, the benefits of accompanying heavy snows or rains to the crops probably far outweigh the damage due to this cause. Wholesale trade and industry show no signs of hesitation, and even the building trades have given little heed to the temporary weather setback, in view of the immense business for Spring and Summer offering.

Jobbing trade at leading centres is large, and reorders for Spring delivery are already reported at Western centres; railway earnings for February and the first half of March break all records for this season, collections are classed as fair to good, export trade is of a large midwinter volume, and there are signs that lowered prices of cereals have found response in improved foreign buying. Additional favorable features are reports of improvement in the flour trade, of heavy sales of leather for home and foreign consumption, and of higher prices for wool. Prices generally show strength; cereals are certainly firmer, but cotton is lower than a week ago, and the vagaries of the raw material affect some lines of goods; this, however,

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Easier Money Helps Market—Foreign Exchange Rates Lower.

Price changes in yesterday's Stock Exchange session were due almost wholly to the operations of professional traders, for there was only the slightest evidence of outside participation, while the trading was once more on a very small scale. Such features as the trading possessed were found in a further abrupt decline in Missouri Pacific and a later rally in that stock to a point which represented a net gain of 1 point for the day; in the support which for the first time was accorded to Consolidated Gas at a price nearly 2 points under Thursday's closing figure; in the advance of Louisville & Nashville on increased dividend rumors, and the firmness throughout of Union Pacific, Reading, St. Paul, Pennsylvania, and other standard shares. The United States Steel issues were helped only nominally by the publication of one of the best reports in the history of the corporation. The document makes it fairly certain that, in view of the ambitious construction programme which the corporation has under way, and owing to the policy of the management to maintain its many plants in the highest state of efficiency, dividends on the common stock are still rather remote. Including the $26,300,000 for new construction and appropriations for work contemplated, there is left as a result of the year's operations 3.36 per cent. for the common stock, while the earnings upon that issue, if the new construction and appropriation deductions are left out of account, amount to 8.53 per cent.

Money on call at the maximum rate of the day fell 3 points below the high rate touched on Thursday, while the foreign exchange market at last proved sensitive to the present activity in the money market, demand sterling rates declining some 25 points on the day. The rate is still many points away from that obtaining when the recent gold engagement was arranged, and the demand made by Paris upon London for gold yesterday, as well as the announcement from Berlin of the near approach of a new Russian loan of the reported amount of $250,000,000, present hindrances to a renewal of the gold movement. On the other hand, such favorable trade balances as that reported yesterday, consisting of an excess of $398,419,000 in merchandise exports for eight months of the fiscal year, a gain of $119,357,000 over the figures of the previous like period, favor such a movement. Preliminary estimates of the currency movements of the week varied in their findings from a gain of $125,000 to a loss of $305,000 in cash. Inasmuch as the receipts of Government money failed to find full reflection in last week's bank statement, and the banks have received an additional $2,000,000 of Government funds from the allotments of out-of-town banks, the actual return to-day may be better than yesterday's estimates would make it appear. As a result of another turn, this time for the better, in the Moroccan situation, there occurred a general recovery of prices at London and Paris, while the Berlin market was firm.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 16.—The stringency in the money market was somewhat relieved to-day by the maturing of Treasury bills releasing $5,000,000. Discounts were firm.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was mostly quiet and dull, but recovered later on the better political outlook. Consols started easy, but rallied well at the close.

Americans opened flat on New York selling, moved irregularly, became inactive, improved during the last hour, and closed steady.

Foreigners were in better demand after early dullness on Paris advices and more favorable news from the conference at Algeciras.

Kaffirs sagged owing to lack of business, but there was no pressure to sell, and prices recovered later, and closed steady.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 104⅛.

Bar silver closed firm at 29 13-16d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15.10; Lisbon, 4.50.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, March 16.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were firm on favorable reports from Algeciras. The payment of the coupon accounts for the lower price of rentes.

Russian imperial 4s were quoted at 84.25 and Russian bonds of 1904 at 506.

Three per cent. rentes, 99f 12½c ex-interest.

Exchange on London, 25f 13½c for checks.

BERLIN, March 16.—Trading on the Boerse to-day opened indecisive. Speculation was limited, but prices closed very firm.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 47¼ pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates: Short bills, 4 per cent.; three months' bills, 4⅛ per cent.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 16.—Trading was only slightly more active than yesterday and prices were irregular. Bidding in general throughout the list was changeable. In the late afternoon a stronger sentiment was expressed and price changes were fractional. Norfolk Railway and Light 5s ran off ¼, Macon Railway and Light 5s advanced ¼, Consolidated Gas lost 2 points.

The United Railways securities eased off fractionally. Seaboard new second preferred sold ⅜ higher. Houston Oil common eased off ¼. Seaboard new common came into prominence late, selling actively at 31. Alabama Coal and Iron 5s jumped ½, to 94.

The market closed firm, but dull. Sales: Bonds, $66,000; stocks, 551 shares. The list:

D. & H. EARNINGS GROW.

Railroad's Annual Report Shows a Large Increase for 1905.

The annual report of the Delaware & Hudson Company, published yesterday, showed a large increase in gross earnings for 1905 and a substantial gain in net. The surplus earnings after the payment of interest and rentals amounted to $4,679,595, equal to 11.14 per cent. on the company's $42,000,000 of stock. Out of this surplus $2,869,300 was paid in dividends, which amounted to 7 per cent., and $1,302,643 was charged to profit and loss and credited to the extent of $800,000 to mining plant and to the extent of $503,642 to equipment. The balance, which after some minor adjustments amounted to $188,908, was credited to profit and loss. The $800,000 credited to mining plant wipes off that item from the company's accounts. In 1903 the mining plant was carried in the company's balance sheet at $2,300,000, which in 1904 was reduced to $800,000. This year it is wiped out altogether.

The earnings for the year compare as follows with those for 1904:

	1905.	1904.
Gross	$37,331,629	$34,655,113
Expenses and taxes	29,635,706	27,202,634
Net	$7,695,923	$7,452,479
Interest, rent, &c.	3,016,328	2,999,957
Surplus	$4,679,595	$4,452,522

During the year the capitalization of the property was reduced by $635,000, resulting from the payment of $585,000 of debentures and from the purchase and cancellation of $50,000 par value of the company's stock. The cost of this stock to the company was $92,512. The balance of $223,632 to the credit of the sinking fund at the close of the year will be used in part payment for $457,000 of Albany & Susquehanna bonds which were left at the disposal of the company in addition to the amounts subscribed for by the company's stockholders.

The Delaware & Hudson Company in 1905 mined 5,695,493 tons of anthracite coal out of a total production by all companies of 61,410,201 tons. At the close of the year the Delaware & Hudson Company had on hand 113,061 tons of coal.

The betterments and additions to the property in 1905, none of which was charged to capital account, represented a total cost of $2,407,791.

DIDN'T BUY WALSH ROADS.

Railroads Wouldn't Meet the Price—Properties May Be Developed.

The negotiations between the Chicago Clearing House Committee and the Pennsylvania, New York Central, and Rock Island systems, looking to a purchase by the latter of the Walsh railroads, have been broken off. There is no immediate prospect that the matter will again be taken up between the Chicago bankers and the railroads, and as no other purchaser is in sight it has become necessary for the committee to consider other plans in connection with the Walsh properties.

Just what the Chicago Clearing House Committee may decide to do in the matter has not been determined. J. C. Hutchins of Chicago, counsel to the committee, said last night that the committee had not had any opportunity to consider the situation.

Mr. Hutchins said that the committee might decide to develop the properties and hold them indefinitely. In any event, as the matter now stands, the committee will be obliged to hold the properties, and it may in the long run be necessary to go ahead with their development.

The railroads with which the negotiations for the sale of the Walsh properties were conducted were at the time over-anxious, it is said, to acquire the Walsh properties. The absolute failure of the negotiations was due to the fact that the Chicago bankers named a minimum price which the railroads were not willing to pay. Advices from Chicago have been that the bankers demanded at least $25,000,000.

STEEL TRUST EARNS $119,787,658 IN A YEAR

Increase of More Than $36,000,000 Over 1904.

GREAT SUMS TO BE EXPENDED

Necessary, Says the Company's Report Just Issued, to Maintain the Corporation's Position.

The gross sales and earnings of the United States Steel Corporation in 1905, shown in the annual report of the company issued yesterday, amounted to $585,331,736, an increase of more than $140,000,000 over the gross sales and earnings in 1904. The net earnings for the year amounted to $119,787,658, an increase of more than $36,000,000 over 1904. While the net earnings of the company fell short of the record established in 1902, the gross sales and earnings and the output of the company's plants exceeded all previous records. The report sets forth in detail the expenditures on the company's plants in the year at a total cost of $37,471,769 for maintenance, renewals, and extraordinary replacements, which compares with a trifle more than $11,000,000 spent for the same purposes the previous year.

The great expansion in the steel business is reflected in various ways by the report. At the close of last year the company had in its employ 180,150 men, compared with 147,343 men employed at the close of 1904. The year's salaries and wages amounted to $128,052,955, against $99,778,278 paid to the employes in 1904. In 1905 the Steel Corporation mined 18,486,556 tons of iron ore, an increase of nearly 6,000,000 tons, and produced 9,226,386 tons of finished products, compared with 6,792,780 tons in 1904.

Referring to the vast sums which have been expended since the incorporation of the company for increasing the capacity of its plants, the report calls attention to the fact that, notwithstanding these expenditures, the Steel Corporation has done no more than maintain its position in the trade. It is pointed out that in 1901, when the company was organized, it produced 43.2 per cent. of the pig iron manufactured in the United States and 66.2 per cent. of the Bessemer and open-hearth steel.

Lost Some Ground in Steel.

The proportions of these products manufactured by the Steel Corporation in 1905 were, respectively, 44.2 and 60.2 per cent., showing that the Steel Corporation has slightly increased its proportion of the pig iron output, but has lost ground in the production of Bessemer and open-hearth steel. The statement to the stockholders says in this connection that while the Steel Corporation does not expect nor desire to control the steel industry, it must, so far as possible and practicable, maintain its position. It is added that to do this it will be necessary to continue to expend large sums of money.

The extent of the contemplated expenditures for the current year is indicated by the following statement taken from the report:

"The subsidiary companies have authorized extensive appropriations for construction and improvement work for the year 1906. On Jan. 1, 1906, the amount unexpended on these appropriations (exclusive of requirements for construction of the new plant in the Chicago district) was approximately $61,500,000. Probably 20 per cent. will, however, not be expended until after Jan. 1, 1907."

For the construction of the plant in the Chicago district a special fund of $10,000,000 has been set aside out of last year's earnings, and it has already been officially announced that the Steel Corporation will in addition to this amount issue bonds to cover part of the cost of this new plant.

Discussing the company's export business, the report says that a total of 953,850 tons of manufactured products were exported during the year. The report sets forth that in order to keep the mills of the company in full operation it is "sometimes deemed proper and desirable to sell for export what would otherwise be surplus product at prices lower than domestic prices." Last year, however, the prices received for export business approached more closely domestic prices than in previous years.

Wages Nearly Those of 1901.

The report draws attention to the efficiency of the company's organization and points out that in 1905 the company's employes had been re-established on practically the same basis of wages as that which existed in 1901, although the prices received for the company's output last year were materially less than in 1901. Careful attention has been given to the affairs of the corporation, the report states, by the Board of Directors and by the members of the Finance Committee.

The Directors held thirteen meetings in the year and the Finance Committee met sixty-five times. In addition special committees of the Finance Committee were frequently appointed to consider special matters of importance. The action of the Finance Committee was recorded from time to time and reported to the Board of Directors.

The offer of preferred stock made at the close of last year to the company's employes resulted in subscriptions by 12,256 employes for a total of 23,989 shares.

The company in the year increased largely its holdings of ore lands, but a large part was acquired on a royalty basis, so that the increase in capital investment on this account was small.

The bonded and debenture debt of the company amounted at the close of last year to $570,472,264, a net decrease during the year of $4,673,882.

The earnings of the company and their disposition for the past year compare as follows with the figures for 1904:

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 16.—La Salle Street bankers and brokers are besieged with the question: "What shall we do with our street railway stocks?" The best informed can give no comforting advice. On the local Stock Exchange to-day the small dribbling liquidation of North Chicago and West Chicago stocks continued, indicating the despair of old-time investors in saving anything from the wreckage. Very bitter men and women came to the visitor's corner of the Exchange floor and watched their brokers sell the few securities which in some cases represented their life savings.

Brokers in many cases are telling those who ask for advice simply to await the final disposition of the traction negotiations with the city. It is assumed in more than one quarter that Messrs. Field, Morgan, Mitchell, and Valentine would never have bought control of the Chicago City Railway at 200 unless they intended to work and fight for some solution of the problem which represents so many millions to them. People of a speculative turn are working on this assumption, and it is they who are buying up the stocks now being sacrificed in the narrow market.

Other local stocks were somewhat affected by tractions. Chicago Telephone fell from 118 to 113 on small lot sales, and Chicago Edison was at 158. South Side Elevated sold at 94. Western Stone rose to 41 on its usual dividend declaration.

Meetings and Elections.

NOTICE.

A special meeting of the stockholders of the Kansas City Southern Railway Company is hereby called to meet at the general offices of the company in the Thayer Building, at the northwest corner of 9th Street and Broadway, in Kansas City, Mo., on Monday, March 19th, 1906, at 12 o'clock noon, standard time, to consider and vote upon each of the following propositions:

1. To authorize and consent to an increase of the bonded indebtedness of the company by issuing ten million dollars par value of four and one-half per cent. twenty-year improvement gold bonds, with semi-annual interest coupons attached, redeemable at any interest period, upon sixty days' notice, at one hundred and five per cent. at the option of the company, to be secured by a mortgage upon the present and after acquired property and franchises of the company; the bonds and mortgage securing the same to be in such form and contain such covenants and conditions as may be approved by the executive committee of the company.

2. To authorize and consent to the issue by the company of five million one hundred thousand dollars par value of five per cent. negotiable gold notes, payable in six years, with interest coupons attached if deemed advisable, interest to be payable semi-annually, the notes to be redeemable at par at any interest period upon sixty days' notice, and to be secured by a pledge of six million dollars par value of the aforesaid issue of mortgage bonds and to be accompanied by such agreements and contain such conditions and provisions as the executive committee shall determine; such notes when underwritten as provided below to be offered to the stockholders at the price of ninety-five per cent. of the par value, and accrued interest; each stockholder to have the right to purchase notes at such price to an amount equal to ten per cent. of his stock holdings.

3. To authorize and consent to the underwriting of the entire issue of notes by Messrs. Ladenburg, Thalmann & Company, Kean, Van Cortlandt & Company, and Blair & Company, and their associates, each of which firms of bankers is represented in the Board of Directors, at the price of ninety-five per cent. and accrued interest for the notes, less an underwriting commission of two and one-half per cent. on the total par amount thereof.

4. To authorize and consent that individual Directors and officers may become members of the underwriting syndicate and participate in the profits and commissions thereof for their individual benefit notwithstanding their positions as Directors.

5. To authorize the transaction of such other business connected with or appertaining to the above-mentioned subjects as the stockholders may deem proper.

The books for the transfer of stock, both common and preferred, will be closed for the purposes of the meeting at the close of business on the 3d day of March, 1906, and will be opened at ten o'clock A. M. on the 20th day of March, 1906.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Of the writing of stock market guff there is no mortal end, whether speculation be moribund or animated. There is a minimum below which the output never falls.

***

Mr. Lawson evidently acts upon the idea propounded by the late Addison Cammack, that if you expect to hit the moon you've got to keep shooting at it. He visited his disapproval upon the stock market yesterday, in words only, predicting a calamity in the immediate future, nature of the event not indicated. He is still making a target of United Copper, having apparently transferred his enmity from Amalgamated Copper, the "System's" property, to the Heinze stock. He informed Wall Street that he was bidding for the privilege to put 100,000 shares of United Copper to anybody overnight at a price ten points below the quotation prevailing yesterday. Wall Street is weary of Lawson. His utterances receive scant attention. Possibly, if he keeps trying he will succeed again in hitting the psychological moment and pretend to take credit unto himself for a break in prices, but for the present he is out of vogue. He has no following among speculators because they believe that he has lost his feeling of the market. Formerly it was said of him that he had a genius for catching the market when the chances were 100 to 1 that it would go his way, but recently his intuition has been betraying him into all sorts of blunders. After having launched four or five abortive attacks at inopportune moments he quite missed the psychological moment at the end of the January boom, when, if he had but made one more attack he could have said, "I did it," and many would have believed him. He missed that opportunity completely.

***

Bartlett, Frazier & Carrington say: "Any sane man who will consider the bills that have been introduced at Albany and the bills that have been introduced at Washington, aimed against corporations, must arrive at the conclusion that the present is a period of corporation baiting. Incidentally, it would be an excellent thing if a list could be made up of those who received favors of these corporations heretofore, and who are now attacking them simply because "it is the popular fancy."

***

The degree of indifference which the stock market as a while has so far exhibited toward such incidents as the crash in Chicago Union Traction, the heart-breaking decline in local gas securities, notably Consolidated Gas, and the condition of the Missouri Pacific as disclosed this week, as well as toward the widespread popularity of corporation whacking, is astonishing. These are matters which may be supposed to touch investment sentiment, besides affecting speculative opinion, but the bear crowd in Wall Street has not been able to turn them to much account. The important bull account in the stock market obviously is not vulnerable. The principal holders of stocks are not alarmed. Wall Street men return from contact with the outside world all wrought up over the anti-corporation feeling which they have discovered, and then they talk with bigger men and are soon persuaded that their alarm is silly. One man who had just had this experience declared: "The higher up you go the more confidence you find." It is nevertheless true that the highest opinion in Wall Street is often fallible. The most conspicuous illustration of this truth in recent years was the confidence with which very eminent bankers predicted right up to the last that there would be no war with Spain. Those whose counsels influence speculative thought in Wall Street are very confident at the moment that we shall have a better stock market in the Spring, beginning around April 1. Everybody seems to be looking for the traditional Spring boom; many are planning to take the fullest possible advantage of it.

***

There is supposed to be a large short interest in Reading.

***

Opinion having become almost unanimous as to the probability of a coal strike, the only chance for a surprise would seem to lie in the possibility of its being averted.

***

Consolidated Gas touched a new low point for this decline yesterday, at 142¼. It is understood that some large holders of the stock have been shifting their interest to the convertible 6 per cent. bonds—selling their stock and buying an equivalent amount of the bonds. The bonds were very active yesterday and relatively strong. After July 1, 1907, these bonds may be converted into stock, dollar for dollar, at any interest period. They are redeemable in 1909 at par. In the event of the Consolidated Gas dividend being reduced to 4 per cent. (an extreme possibility) the bonds might be expected to decline materially from their present level, because they would either have to be redeemed at par in 1909 or exchanged for a 4 per cent. stock, but even in this event the bonds could hardly be expected to go as low as the stock. The holder of Consolidated Gas stock reasons that by selling his stock and buying the bonds he is at least no worse off than he was before, with the chances all in favor of his having improved his position. He has a 6 per cent. bond in place of a stock on which the dividend at the moment is uncertain, and in the end, if he so chooses, he may recover his stock by converting the bonds.

***

George J. Gould is thought of as the most isolated financier in all Wall Street.

***

A crowd that had been bulling Atchison common made the prediction some time ago that its stock would cross Missouri Pacific. The two stocks crossed yesterday, Missouri Pacific selling at 93 simultaneously with a quotation of 93¼ for Atchison. Missouri Pacific is a 4 per cent. stock, while Atchison, whose fortunes are subject to pretty much the same vicissitudes as Missouri Pacific's, is a 4 per cent. common stock.

***

Missouri Pacific declined on the opening yesterday to 93 and recovered 3 points in the course of the day. George P. Butler, Brother & Co., whose operations in the stock for several years have been apparently intended to discourage bullish activity, were reported as large buyers. Most of the buying yesterday was thought to be for short account. Other Gould stocks were rather weak. Western Union, which is rarely active, declined 1½ per cent. under light selling and closed at a decline of ¾ per cent. Wabash preferred suffered a maximum decline of more than 2 points, recovering very little, but Wabash common, which was weak on Thursday, was strong yesterday and closed at a fractional advance. There was very little doing in the Wabash debenture B bonds. The Wabash securities recently have been very active and wonderfully strong, especially the debenture B bonds and the preferred stock. The movement is supposed to have been of other than Gould inspiration. In the Gould-Ramsey contest several months ago it was discovered that the Goulds did not hold control of Wabash outright. They had to borrow a lot of stock to make their showdown. Since then it has been hinted from time to time that control of the Wabash property might change hands through the open market. A good deal of mystery has surrounded the recent buying of Wabash securities.

***

The best behaving stock in the whole list is Union Pacific. There is always a good market for it, whether prices be rising or falling, and it has shown very remarkable resistance on several occasions to bear pressure. It is selling now within 7 or 8 points of its extreme high price in January, which, when you come to think of it, is an extraordinary fact. The stock was the object in January of tremendous speculative enthusiasm, as it has been off and on from the beginning of this bull market, but when the break came at the culmination of the January boom the bull account in Union Pacific was found to be less vulnerable than that in any other leading security. Notwithstanding the fact that everybody seemed to be long of it between 155 and 160, its decline to 149⅛ was marked throughout by constant absorption. Hope of distribution to stockholders has been practically abandoned, but that seems to make not the slightest difference in the market for the stock. A speculative element in Union Pacific keeps insisting publicly upon a distribution. Action to compel the company to give away its assets has been threatened. This, of course, is ridiculous, notwithstanding the Hon. Jefferson Levy. How can a company be compelled to give away its treasury assets except by a vote of a majority of the stockholders? Conservative interests in the property take the view that its future would be injured by any such distribution of resources as this speculative element clamors for; the conservatives are satisfied with the prospect of an increase of the dividend to the rate of 7 per cent., and think the stock ought to advance 20 or 25 points from this level on that alone.

***

The Pennsylvania has applied to the Stock Exchange to list new stock amounting to nearly $3,000,000. Wall Street entertains the suspicion that new stock may be coming on the market from the company's treasury.

HEAVY MERGER DEPOSITS.

Time Limit Has Expired, but More Shares Will Be Accepted.

Deposits of the local traction stocks made under the plan for the consolidation of the companies amounted at the close of business yesterday to 95½ per cent. in the case of Interborough Rapid Transit, 93½ per cent. of Metropolitan securities, and 81½ per cent. of Metropolitan Street Railway stock.

The time for the deposit of these stocks expired yesterday. While no formal extension of the time for deposit will be made, the committee in charge of the organization of the new company has decided to accept stock, the holders of which may give reasons satisfactory to the committee for their failure to deposit their holdings within the time specified.

The deposits of the several stocks considerably exceed the percentage named in the plan of consolidation as requisite to make the plan effective. It was required that two-thirds of the outstanding stock of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company and of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and 50 per cent. of the stock of the Metropolitan Securities Company should be deposited.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 16.—Interest was centred in the local public utility shares to-day, owing to the introduction into City Councils yesterday of an ordinance granting the right to the Philadelphia & Western to build an extension of its line down Chestnut Street as a competing road to the Philadelphia Rapid Transit.

Early prices, however, proved to be the lowest of the day, as effective support was given to Philadelphia Rapid Transit, Philadelphia Electric, and United Gas Improvement. Speculation is rife as to the probable action of Mayor Weaver on the Philadelphia Rapid Transit ordinance extending the time for the completion of the Market Street Subway. In fact, more interest was taken in this matter than in the Philadelphia & Western ordinance, which is regarded as a "hold-up," directed more against the Pennsylvania Railroad than against the Philadelphia Rapid Transit. After the early dealings the general market became dull and steady.

The issue of Treasury stock of The Pittsburgh Bullfrog Mining Corp'n, Ltd., at 35 cents per share being nearly subscribed, the price will be

ADVANCED TO

45 CENTS PER SHARE

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21st.

The two veins recently discovered on our Sapper claim, composed of quartz and white talc, the identical Shoshone formation, indicate that equal development will make the shares of this Corporation worth many times par, as it has already done for the Montgomery-Shoshone. That this fact is thoroughly appreciated by the knowing ones on the ground, is shown by the large number of orders being received for the stock from Bullfrog and Rhyolite.

Immediate application is therefore advisable on the part of those who wish to secure this stock at 35 cents, as no more than the allotted amount will be sold at this price.

The right is reserved to reduce or return any subscription.

APPLICATIONS BY MAIL should be accompanied by check to the order of this Corporation, at the rate of 35 cents per share for the number desired. Minimum subscription accepted, 100 shares.

JOHN J. DELANY,
Corporation Counsel, Borough Hall, Brooklyn, New York City.

SUPREME COURT—First Judicial District.—In the matter of the application and petition of George B. McClellan, Herman A. Metz, Alexander E. Orr, Charles Stuart Smith, Morris K. Jesup, John H. Starin, Woodbury Langdon, and John Claflin, constituting the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners of The City of New York, for and on behalf of said city, for the appointment of Commissioners of Appraisal, under Chapter 4 of the Laws of 1891 and the various statutes amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, relative to acquiring the perpetual easements necessary for the construction, maintenance, and operation of an elevated railroad in Westchester Avenue, from Third Avenue to the Southern Boulevard, thence along the Southern Boulevard to the Boston Road, thence along the Boston Road to One Hundred and Eighty-first Street, in the Borough of The Bronx, wherever said easements have not been already acquired by purchase or otherwise.

Notice is hereby given that an application will be made at a Special Term of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, to be held at Part III. at the County Court House in the Borough of Manhattan, in The City of New York, on the 29th day of March, 1906, at the opening of the court on that day, for the appointment of three disinterested persons, being citizens of the United States and residents of the City of New York, to ascertain and appraise the compensation to be made to the owners and all persons interested in the real property, rights, franchises, easements, or privileges sought to be taken, affected, or extinguished for the construction, maintenance, and operation of an elevated railroad in Westchester Avenue, from Third Avenue to the Southern Boulevard; thence along the Southern Boulevard to Boston Road, thence along Boston Road to 181st Street, in the Borough of The Bronx, wherever the same have not been acquired by The City of New York by purchase or otherwise.

The real estate sought to be affected is located in the Borough of The Bronx, in The City of New York, abutting on Westchester Avenue, Southern Boulevard, and Boston Road, as above described, and the property is laid out and indicated on three similar or triplicate maps, one of which was filed in the office of the Board of Public Improvements on the 27th day of July, 1900, and another in the office of the Register of the County of New York on the 27th day of July, 1900, and one in the office of the Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners on the 27th day of July, 1900, each bearing the following certificate:

"Board of Rapid Transit Railroad Commissioners of The City of New York.

"Map, survey, and plan of lands and property necessary to be acquired or to which there may be appurtenant rights, terms, franchises, easements, or privileges necessary to be acquired or extinguished by The City of New York for the construction and operation of the Rapid Transit Railroad described in the routes and general plan thereof adopted by the said Board on the 14th day of January and the 4th day of February, 1897.

"Memorandum.

"There are to be acquired in relation to each and every parcel of property shown upon the sheets of this map, survey and plan, abutting upon Westchester Avenue, the Southern Boulevard, and Boston Road, and bounded in blue, the right, franchise, and easement to construct and operate the said Rapid Transit Railroad.

"Adopted and approved by the said Board the 21st day of June, 1900."

Dated February 10th, 1906.

JOHN J. DELANY,
Corporation Counsel,
2 Tryon Row.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Curb Market Spotty and Irregular, with Light Trading.

Industrials Get a Better Share of Market Interest—An Off Day for Coppers.

The market on the curb yesterday was active in spots and prices were marked by the same irregularity. Industrials got more of the traders' attention than has been their lot lately, while the mining shares suffered a proportionate lack of attention. United Copper was heavy in an inactive market, going down from 69 to 66 under sales of only 8,300 shares. The close was 66¾. Nevada Consolidated continued around 20, though the number of shares sold were only a third of Thursday's trading.

Interborough sold down from 227 to 225 in a 2,000 share market, though the merger shares, when issued, held their own, the common gaining ¼ point. Among the industrials American Can figured well in the trading, and both common and preferred made fractional gains on fairly active selling.

⁂

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The retiring Directors of the Sloss-Sheffield Iron and Steel Company have been re-elected. F. P. Olcott was elected Chairman in place of Walter G. Oakman, resigned.

Application has been made to list $5,000,000 additional capital stock of the Delaware & Hudson Company and $2,980,000 additional capital stock of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company on the New York Stock Exchange.

The State of Alabama has awarded $7,437,600 4 per cent. semi-annual fifty-year renewal bonds at 104.135 to a syndicate composed of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. and William Salomon & Co. of New York, the First National Bank, the People's Savings Bank, and Otto Marx & Co. of Birmingham, and the First National Bank of Montgomery.

"CONSOL. TRACTION" ACTIVE.

The Shorts Had to Cover at a Not Too Modest Price.

"Consolidated Traction," not the shares of the traction merger "when, if, and as issued," which sold under this name in the first days of the merger plan, but the stock of the new $1,000 corporation accommodatingly incorporated under real title a few days ago by an outside broker, was merrily kited on the curb yesterday.

Early in the day a well-known firm sold 1,500 shares at 74 and 73⅞. It was carefully explained that the stock had been sold "short." With equal attention to publicity, the "squeezing" of the sellers was conducted. The bids ran up with no sales to 400, at which point a "sale" was made, and as quickly to 502. Here the "shorts" were "covered," as the game went, and the price went back to around the original figures.

"Consolidated Traction" was organized to fill a long-felt want. The broker who got it up holds a lot of contracts with buyers of Consolidated Traction when that name was understood on the Curb to stand for the stock of the then unnamed traction merger. He stands to make heavy profits on his sales, but deliveries on the contracts of Interborough-Metropolitan stock, when issued, have been refused on the ground that the papers call for Consolidated Traction. "Consolidated Traction" (of a sort) is now to be had in plenty.

It isn't good practice among stock brokers to sell a stock short that is al in one set of hands, unless arrangements have been made in advance. The owners of "Consolidated Traction," keeping the trading between friends, could put the stock higher than the Broad Exchange Building with no one to forbid it on the Curb.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

Many Orders for Pig Iron, and Some Concessions in Lower Grades.

Pig iron buyers are taking more interest in the market, trade advices state, and the week's business shows a number of orders placed. Some concessions are reported in low grades, but producers of standard grades are making no bids for business in confidence that there will be good buying under way when present orders are satisfied. The continued heavy shipments and the clamor for prompt delivery seem ample justification for this belief.

No important buying is reported in finished steel, but the trade remains satisfied with the outlook. Mills are loaded up with business, and a fresh buying movement is looked for before present orders are cleared. Orders for steel bars and structural shapes continue in advance of shipments.

Sheets and tin plates are sold ninety days, but the wire and pipe situation is reported easier.

JAPAN REDEEMS BONDS.

The Last of the Hereditary Pension Issue Retired.

The Japanese Government, according to cable advices received by Consul General Uchida yesterday, has called for redemption the last of the "hereditary pension bonds," 16,631,640 yen, ($8,330,000.) These bonds are a relic of the reconstruction days in Japan and were awarded to the Kwazoku, (nobles,) Shizoku, (gentry,) and Heimin (commoners) for their services to the dynasty at the time of the overthrow of the Shogunoate.

The bonds were issued to the amount of 170,000,000 yen in 1877-8, and were then equal to one-third of the total revenue of the Government. They paid 5 per cent. interest and constituted the largest expenditure in the national exchequer. The date set for the redemption is April 23.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 16.—The local money market is quiet and a shade easier. Clearing House loans, 5 per cent.; New York funds, 5@10c discount. Clearings, $29,257,179; balances, $1,529,241; Sub-Treasury debit, $159,326.

Trading in the copper shares has been somewhat limited to-day, the principal activity being seen in Boston Consolidated and United Copper, both showing a loss for the day. The balance of the copper list has been very quiet and without special feature. In the local list American Pneumatic was again active and strong, advancing to 27⅞. The general market closed weak and irregular.

Press Club Factions Agree to Move.

Agreement has been reached between the factions of the Press Club whereby the club will move from 116 Nassau Street to 120 Nassau Street. The application for an injunction to restrain the club's Trustees from signing a lease for the new quarters was therefore withdrawn when it came up before Justice Greenbaum yesterday.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—An advance of a cent per bushel in wheat yesterday resulted from bullish foreign news and a scare of shorts. Opening up at almost best prices of the day, the market held very firm right up to the last hour, when profit taking by the room trade led to reactions which wiped out about half of the early advance. Final prices were from ⅛ to ½c above the previous night. Liverpool came ⅞d higher, influenced by Argentine shipments of only 3,160,000 bushels, compared with 4,392,000 bushels the previous week. The Continental markets were slow to follow Liverpool's advance with the exception of Berlin, which closed ¾ to 1 mark net higher. Paris was partly 5 points lower, and Budapest was off 6 points. The local cash market closed firm, with prices as follows: No. 2 red, 85¼c elevator and 87c free on board afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 87⅞c free on board afloat.

CORN.—The corn market was stronger and at times ⅝ to ½c above the previous night. Its early strength was based on an advance of ¼d at Liverpool, the wheat firmness, and covering. Commission houses bought on the advance, influenced at midday by the very light primary receipts and the seaboard clearances of 476,000 bushels. The Argentine shipments were 195,000 bushels, compared with 203,000 bushels, but the news from that quarter had a bearish average on account of a private estimate placing the surplus at 130,000,000, compared with 85,000,000 shipped last year. Moderate selling in the afternoon, together with the setback in wheat, gave the market an easier tone, and it closed in New York net unchanged. The export business amounted to 18 loads. No. 2 corn was quoted 51c elevator and 48¼c free on board afloat; No. 2 white, 49¼c, and No. 2 yellow, 49¼c free on board afloat.

COTTON.—The cotton market became more active and decidedly firmer after a dull and barely steady early session on reports that the bear leader of the earlier season had turned bullish, and expected to see higher prices. After this report was circulated May advanced to 10.56c and July to 10.68c, or about 16 points net higher. Part of the advance was lost toward the close, but final prices showed a net gain of 4@11 points. Sales for the day were estimated at 250,000 bales, most of the business being transacted after midday.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 4 points on covering and buying. There was general demand early, and with cables a little disappointing, the weather rather better than the previous day, and receipts fairly heavy, the market eased off to about the closing figures of yesterday, soon after the call and during the late forenoon ruled narrow and irregular. The advance came in the early afternoon, but the market slipped off toward the close, with the final tone barely steady.

Contract prices ranged as wollows:

Court Against Auction Room Change.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday handed down a decision denying an application to change the place for holding judicial sales of Bronx property. The opinion of the court is in part as follows:

"We do not think that at the present time this application should be granted. When the question of providing some place for making judicial sales was presented to this court most of the real estate brokers, through a committee, submitted a proposition whereby certain premises were to be hired by or for them, upon this court designating the place selected as the salesroom. This was done, and under that arrangement a lease of the premises was executed. To divert the business to any serious extent, which would be the result of granting this application, would be to increase the burden of those obligated on the present lease. This, we think, would be unjust, and would serve no useful purpose.

"To disturb any of the existing conditions in regard to the sale of mortgaged property under judgment of foreclosure might make a serious difference in the willingness of capitalists to invest in mortgage in the Bronx, and we are not at all satisfied that such an arrangement would be an advantage to the owners of real property who desire to obtain mortgages upon it.

"The motion is denied, but with leave to renew when the existing lease of the present Exchange is about to expire."

SAVOY HOTEL
LONDON.

OVERLOOKING THE RIVER AND EMBANKMENT GARDENS.

Never has the Press of England shown greater unanimity than in its praise of the additions and improvements to the Savoy Hotel, London, upon which have been spent upwards of one million pounds sterling.

The new building is characterized by extreme luxuriousness. The Times.

The magnificent buildings of the Savoy make a truly noble show. Daily Telegraph.

The most striking innovation in building which London has seen of recent years.—World.

A scale of luxury hitherto unattempted in any hotel in London. New York Tribune.

More beautiful than ever.—Morning Leader.

A delight to the eye—no lavishness seems to have been grudged. Sportsman.

One of the handsomest of London edifices.—Globe.

Elegance and artistic character are everywhere. Nothing has been omitted that could conduce to the comfort and content of the visitor. Ladies' Field.

The most beautiful hotel in Europe.—Outlook.

An ideal home for twentieth century London—Queen.

The great pile of buildings included in this latest addition to the architectural sites of London forms a combination of luxury and beauty which cannot be surpassed in the wide world. The New Savoy is a vast palace of a thousand splendours, of a thousand surprising and delightful innovations. Nothing that could contribute to the comfort, the smoothness, and the joy of life is wanting which the inventive genius of America and Europe could supply, or that the taste and skill of the world's schools of art in all its branches could furnish. The place is, in its way, a very triumph of genius. Its match is not to be found in London, nor in Paris, nor, indeed, in any capital of this little planet. To do it justice in a necessarily brief article is impossible. Having rambled through its glorious salons and galleries, and ante-chambers, up and down marble staircases of noble breadth, beneath panelled ceilings, adorned in relief with exquisite golden tracery, one feels that all this royal magnificence, this opulent beauty, might well inspire a volume which should be bound in white satin and gold.—Western Mail.

FRAUD STOPS PROMOTION TO POLICE CAPTAINCIES

339 Sergeants Must Take Another Examination for Places.

PAPERS UNJUSTLY MARKED

One of Eight Examiners Was Guilty, Says President Baker of the Civil Service Commission.

Fraud in marking the examination papers of 339 Police Sergeants who, on Dec. 28 last took the civil service examination for promotion to the grade of Captain, compelled the Municipal Civil Service Commission yesterday to adopt a resolution cancelling the entire examination. Detailed information of the fraud perpetrated is withheld by the commission for the present in order that the matter may be run down completely.

President Baker of the commission at first declined to discuss the matter yesterday, but finally he said that the fraud which had been discovered related solely to the passing on the papers. Eight examiners in all had charge of the papers, but only one is implicated in the scandal.

The fact of the cancellation of the examination first became public yesterday when the board, at a meeting held at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and at which all the members were present, adopted the following resolution:

Resolved, That the examination for promotion from the grade of Sergeant to that of Captain in the Police Department, held Dec. 28, 1906, be and the same is hereby canceled, the reason for such cancellation being that the commission found certain grave irregularities in the papers of several of the candidates, sufficient, in their opinion, to warrant such cancellation, in order to insure absolute justice and impartiality to all the candidates.

Resolved, That a new examination for promotion to the grade of Captain in the Police Department be held at the earliest possible date.

"The examination was held in Grand Central Palace," said President Baker later, "and every precaution was taken to prevent anything wrong. In the first place the Commissioners did not prepare their questions until they met at the Grand Central Palace, just before the examination. These questions were mimeographed right there under our eyes and then were distributed to the candidates. That precaution effectually prevented any leak on the questions to be asked.

"After the examination was over, however, there occurred something which aroused suspicion in regard to the way the papers were examined, and it was our investigation into this matter that caused us to cancel the examination. Proper action will be taken and announcement will be made shortly.

"The affair will cause no inconvenience to the Police Department, as no new eligible list for Captains is needed at this time."

PRINCIPAL O'SHEA NAMED.

To Fill a Brooklyn District Superintendency—May Be Opposed.

The Board of Superintendents announced yesterday the nomination of William J. O'Shea, Principal of Public School No. 171, in 103d Street, near Fifth Avenue, as District Superintendent of Districts 32 and 36, Brooklyn, to fill the vacancy due to the promotion of Edward B. Shallow to be Associate Superintendent. The nomination will be presented to the Board of Education for ratification next Wednesday.

Brooklynites protested against O'Shea recently on the ground that, although he was a resident of Brooklyn, he did not understand the needs of that borough. There were three Brooklyn candidates. It is expected that the Brooklyn members of the Board of Education will oppose O'Shea when his nomination comes up for ratification.

GUGGENHEIMS BUY STOCK.

Exercise Options in the Nevada Consolidated Copper Company.

The Guggenheims, who control the American Smelting & Refining Company and rank with the largest copper interests in the United States, have exercised their options on a large block of the stock of the Nevada Consolidated Copper Company, which owns extensive mines in the Robinson district of Nevada.

Four of the Guggenheim brothers have been traveling through the West for weeks past on a tour of inspection of mining properties in Nevada and Utah. Murray Guggenheim refsused to say yesterday what proportion of the company's $4,800,000 outstanding stock was included in the options, but it is not believed that a controlling interest has changed hands.

The stock, which is $5 par, has been selling on the Curb recently as high as $20 a share. Besides the mines, the company owns the Nevada Northern Railway.

Mrs. Patterson in a Sanitarium.

Mrs. Virginia Knox Patterson, formerly Countess Carussi of Italy, who was taken to Bellevue Hospital ten days ago suffering from dipsomania, was removed from the psychopathic ward yesterday to the private sanitarium of Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald in Pleasantville, Westchester County. She had been declared insane by Dr. Gregory, the Bellevue alienist.

New Wing for St. John's Hospital.

The Sisters of St. Joseph, who manage St. John's Hospital, in Long Island City, have filed plans for an addition to the building to cost $200,000. The new wing will face Jackson Avenue and will be larger than the main building.

JOKERS ACCUSED OF MURDER.

Watchman Played Cowboy with an 18-Year-Old Lad and Overdid It.

As a result of a practical joke that was overdone, four men are now in the Tombs charged with murder. One of them, Henry Crowley, was put on trial before Judge McMahon, in General Sessions, yesterday. His alleged accomplices are Frank Featherson, William Cody, and James Gibbons, three watchmen employed on buildings under erection at East Twenty-eighth Street and Third Avenue.

According to the evidence given by several witnesses yesterday, those four men held up an eighteen-year-old boy named James Supple in front of 236 East Twenty-eighth Street on the evening of Nov. 25 last. After forcing him to give them 25 cents, they pulled out revolvers and started to play at being cowboys.

From calling out to him "Dance, Jim, dance!" they went on to firing at the ground about his feet. One of the bullets struck the boy in the chest, inflicting a wound from which he died a few minutes later.

One of the witnesses—Mrs. Mary Hebe of 382 Third Avenue—fainted in court yesterday after having had to use one of the four revolvers introduced as evidence to show just how the shooting occurred. Before that she said she thought the four defendants had drunk more than was good for them and did not realize, even after Supple had collapsed, that they had killed him.

Assistant District Attorney O'Connor told the jury that he thought the men had no intention of killing Supple. The trial goes on to-day.

BRIDGE JAM AIDS JUSTICE.

Girl Fit-Thrower Caught—Sentenced by Magistrate Whom She Fooled.

A young woman who said she was Miss Bessie Alexander and owned a pretty little home in Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, was arraigned before Magistrate Wahle, in the Tombs Police Court, late Thursday afternoon on a charge of intoxication. She explained that she was not intoxicated, but had been taken suddenly ill on Park Row, near the bridge, and robbed of valuable furs and all the money she had. The Magistrate grew sympathetic, and not only gave her carfare, but sent his probation officer, Miss Coleman, with the prisoner to see that she got safely home.

The two women rode as far as the Brooklyn Bridge together and there waited patiently in the snowstorm for a Myrtle Avenue car. As a De Kalb Avenue car started rapidly on its journey Miss Bessie swung on board, and blowing a kiss to the probation officer yelled:

"Ta, ta, old girl; hope I'll never see you again."

Miss Coleman gave chase, calling upon the conductor to stop in the name of the law. He only grinned at what he thought a belated passenger's attempt to overtake him. In the centre of the span the car encountered a blockade. Miss Coleman got aboard. "Miss Alexander" skipped through the front door. Then there followed a hunt that ended with her arrest by a bridge policeman. At the Manhattan entrance she collapsed and was sent to Bellevue, where she was identified as "Bessie, the Professional Fit Thrower."

Yesterday in the Tombs Court Magistrate Wahle said:

"Well, Bessie, you have imposed on two well-meaning persons, Miss Coleman and myself. Now I'll send you to the Workhouse for six months in default of $500 bond to keep the peace."

AHEARN PRODS VREELAND.

A Better East Side Car Service or He'll Try for Penalties.

Borough President Ahearn is continuing his efforts to get the New York City Railway Company to give proper service to the people of the lower east side. He has arranged to meet President Vreeland next Wednesday and go over the matter.

"Since I first wrote to President Vreeland on the subject several weeks ago, the Madison Street horse car line has been improved, but nothing has been done to improve the conditions on the Delancey, Grand, Avenue B, or East Broadway lines," said the Borough President yesterday. "On Madison Street the company has put in new cushions in the cars, cleaned them up, and is running them on a schedule.

"Unless President Vreeland does something to carry out his promises in regard to the other lines, I intend to take the matter before the Board of Estimate and see if the company cannot be penalized for gross negligence."

GET TOGETHER, CAPITAL AND LABOR, SAYS COURT

City in Strike Turmoil, Declares Judge Cowing.

SENDS A ROWDY TO PRISON

One Year in Sing Sing for the Strike Sympathizer Who Assaulted a Post & McCord Watchman.

Judge Cowing advised both capital and labor in General Sessions yesterday, before he sentenced Edward Lynch, a union sympathizer, to one year in Sing Sing Prison for assaulting Charles Scott, a watchman employed on the building now being erected by Post & McCord for the American Can Company at Tenth Avenue and Fourteenth Street. He suggested that labor and capital come together so that the community might be spared the constant ruptures of its peace. To Lynch he said that he must think himself lucky in getting off with such a light sentence.

Lynch was indicted, together with David Marks and John G. McShea. All of them were at the time said to be members of the Housesmiths' Union, which has declared a strike against Post & McCord. To members of that organization have been attributed attempts to dynamite buildings under construction by the firm.

Marks was convicted and sentenced to three years in Sing Sing. McShea will be tried next week. Lynch pleaded guilty to assault in the third degree when put on trial before Judge Cowing yesterday.

William C. Post, of Post & McCord, filed an affidavit setting forth the history of the trouble between the labor union and his firm. The trouble dates back to Oct. 31 last year, according to Mr. Post. On that day his firm had 250 men employed on eighteen jobs. They were then visited by Thomas M. Ryan of the International Union of Ironworkers, Business Agent Charles Massey of the Housesmiths' Union, and two or three other union delegates. The delegation demanded that Post & McCord discharge twenty-five non-union men.

The reply was, according to Mr. Post, that his firm had nothing whatever to do with the job in question and that they had no connection with or influence over the firm for which the work was being carried out. The union delegates would not let themselves be convinced of the truth of these declarations, said Mr. Post, and on Nov. 3 a strike was declared.

"Since then," Mr. Post went on in his affidavit, "we have been doing business at the risk of life and limb and with great difficulty. Men have been assaulted. In five instances dynamite has been used. There have been sixty-five assaults in all, and we have had to have police to guard our men."

After reading the affidavit and listening to Mr. Post Judge Cowing said:

"At present this city is in a state of turmoil owing to difficulties that exist between capital and labor. When capital overreaches itself and oppresses the poor, it deserves censure; when labor seeks to serve its ends by unlawful means and tries force, it deserves censure. We must have order in the community, and we can only have it by observance of the law.

"When either capital or labor steps beyond bounds and disturbs the peace and repose of the community, it becomes a serious matter. Capital and labor, in my opinion, should get together. One is so dependent on the other that they should be closely united and act in harmony, and the city should not be upset by these constant disturbances and serious crimes, which hurt the cause of honest labor more than they help it."

One year's imprisonment is the maximum punishment provided for the crime to which Lynch pleaded guilty. Three revolver shots were fired at Scott when he was assaulted, and he was so badly hurt that he had to remain in the hospital several weeks.

AUDUBON SOCIETY PROTESTS.

Opposes Bill Allowing Sale of Game Birds Out of Season.

At the annual meeting of the Audubon Society of the State of New York, held yesterday at the American Museum of Natural History, resolutions offered by William Dutcher, protesting against four bills presented at Albany were unanimously adopted. These bills would allow the killing in certain counties of fowl northward bound for the breeding grounds and the sale of foreign-killed birds out of season. The President of the Audubon Society, Morris K. Jesup, presided. H. K. Job delivered an illustrated lecture on "Bird Studies With a Camera."

Mr. Jesup was again elected President, and President Roosevelt was added to the list of honorary Vice Presidents.

William Dutcher, who works in the society's interest as its legal representative without pay, before offering his resolutions decrying the legislation before the State representatives at Albany, said:

"Recently the Legislature began to plan laws for the extermination of the birds. We thought that, after defeating our enemies in two sessions, we were safe, but have found that it is never safe to slumber. There are four most vicious bills with strong adherents in Albany. Three make legal the shooting of wild fowl in the Spring in certain counties. This means the slaughter of the birds flying north for the breeding season.

"But the worst is the bill making it legal to sell game out of season that has been killed elsewhere. This was favorably reported without our being notified, but I have succeeded so far that I have temporarily stopped its passage, and the bill will be recommitted, so that the Audubon Society may have the chance to be heard."

THE TOMBS NOT CROWDED.

And Warden Flynn Vows He Hasn't Complained About the Prison.

When District Attorney Jerome read in the newspapers yesterday morning that the Tombs was so badly crowded that two prisoners had to be put in one cell; that Warden Flynn had written to the Judges of General Sessions for relief, and that seventy-six prisoners were to be sentenced yesterday to give the requested relief, he went straight down to the prison and asked for the Warden.

It happened that Francis J. Lantry, Commissioner of Correction, was there, too, as eager as Mr. Jerome to find out how the Tombs so suddenly had become overcrowded. They were informed that there are 450 separate cells in the city prison, 241 prisoners awaiting trial in General Sessions, 40 prisoners awaiting sentence, 9 prisoners awaiting trial in Special Sessions, and that the total number of prisoners in the Tombs charged to the District Attorney, General Sessions, and Special Sessions was 290.

Warden Flynn said last night that he had never complained to anybody, and that there was plenty of room in the Tombs. The total capacity of the prison is 548, while the total population yesterday noon—and the high-water mark of the week is generally reached on Friday—there was 473.

CAN'T WORSHIP IDOLS FREE.

The United States Customs authorities have instituted a boycott against Chinese josshouse furnishings, and hereafter such articles will be assessed at some fifteen or sixteen rates of duty. It seems that the Young Wo Society and the Lung Gong Cung Society, both of San Francisco, imported a variety of fittings for josshouses, asking free entry under the Dingley law provision for "regalia for a religious institution."

Mayor Signs the Pushcart Bail Bill.

THINKS GAS AGITATION LIKE GREENBACK CRAZE

Consolidated's Lawyer Says So at 80-Cent Bill Hearing.

BUT PLANTS WON'T BE SHUT

Speaker Asks the Mayor If He Owns Gas Stock—Mr. McClellan Says He Doesn't.

Mayor McClellan's public hearing on the Eighty-cent Gas bill brought a great throng to City Hall yesterday afternoon. After announcing that he would hear each side for an hour, the Mayor recognized Charles F. Mathewson, attorney for the Consolidated Gas Company, as the first speaker against the measure. He declared that 80 cents per thousand cubic feet was so low a price for gas that it practically amounted to confiscation.

"Does that mean that if this bill becomes a law your company will be driven into bankruptcy?" asked the Mayor.

"No, Sir, I do not mean that," said Mr. Mathewson, "but it would be but a single degree removed from that injustice. It is a crying shame that the company I represent, which is the largest taxpayer in this city, should be oppressed in this manner. This bill was passed to mollify a public agitation that has swept over this country like the old Greenback craze. In the past you declined to be swayed by this sentiment to do a grave injustice, and we hope that you will decline at this time to be swayed by the clamor that has been created."

Mr. Mathewson went in great detail into the cost of the manufacture of gas and declared that a maximum dividend of 10 per cent. upon the actual value of assets in the gas business is not excessive. He showed the capitalization and assets of the Consolidated system under the act of 1884, with the additional investments in the gas business. Regarding the question of overcapitalization and franchise values Mr. Mathewson said the companies claim only $7,781,000 for franchises and rights while the State assesses those franchises at $31,900,000.

William N. Dykman, accompanied by thirty or more stockholders, represented the Brooklyn Union Gas system. He declared that the passage of the Eighty-cent bill would destroy the dividend-earning capacity of the system.

"Will it drive you into bankruptcy?" asked the Mayor.

"No," replied counsel.

"You would continue to operate in order to pay the interest on your bonds?"

"Of course," retorted counsel, "you would make us operate, would you not?"

"I think we would," replied the Mayor. "We must have gas."

Mr. Dykman said the question of the price of gas should be left to the State Gas Commission, which is now considering the subject, but which under the bill is debarred from rendering any but a decision adverse to the gas companies. The cost of gas in Brooklyn, he declared, is actually 30.97 cents per thousand, with 13.81 cents cost of distribution, 5.88 cents general expense, 3.32 cents renewals, and 2.46 cents for increased candle power.

Mr. Dykman argued that the many suburban districts to be served justified Brooklyn in asking a different point of view than that which governed in Manhattan. Finally Mr. Dykman objected to the legislative standard of pressure, and declared it impossible to maintain.

Sidney V. Lowell, William Harkness, and Francis B. Thurber also spoke against the bill. Assemblyman Agnew spoke first in favor of the measure.

William Martin of the Knights of Labor astonished the gathering by asking the Mayor if he or any of his relatives was interested in gas stocks.

"I am going to ask a question," he said, "but it did not come from me personally. I have been requested by my district to ask you this question—so you can understand my position—and I say it in the kindest manner to you personally, as I have a very fair regard for you as a man, and that question is this—in behalf of my district: Have you or any of your near relatives any interest in any shape, form, or manner in gas stock or gas companies?"

"That is an absolutely improper question to ask," replied the Mayor. "I have no hesitation in saying to you, however, that neither I nor any of my relatives, that I know of, has any such interest."

Martin then spoke for the measure, declaring that gas could be manufactured for 11 cents a thousand cubic feet. A delegation from the Real Estate Owners' Association also favored the measure. No decision was announced by the Mayor.

LORD GREY TO VISIT JESUP.

Coming with Lady Grey to Attend the Pilgrims' Dinner.

Lord and Lady Grey will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Morris K. Jesup at their house, on Madison Avenue, the week after next to attend the dinner given by the Pilgrims at the Waldorf-Astoria on Saturday, March 31, in honor of Lord Grey as Governor General of Canada. Elihu Root, Secretary of State, will be one of the principal speakers at the dinner, and will, it is understood, confirm the announcement by the Earl that all questions in dispute between the United States and Canada have been settled.

The negotiations, it is expected, will be brought to a successful termination within eight or ten days. Among the issues in question are the protection of the fisheries in international waters, the fur seal fisheries, the protection of the Niagara Falls, the Newfoundland fisheries, and minor boundary disputes.

HOUSESMITHS LOSE AGAIN.

Last Hope for Recognition as a Union Vanishes.

The final attempt of the Housesmiths' Union to gain recognition from the Allied Iron Associations by an appeal to the American Federation of Labor failed yesterday. There is nothing left for the housesmiths to do but declare their strike off unconditionally or risk chances of reemployment by remaining out.

The last attempt of the housesmiths to do away with the open shop thus fails.

Subway Guard Killed Looking Out.

John J. Broder, a Subway guard, violated one of the rules of the company in opening the door of a train and looking ahead yesterday on the Broadway branch at 130th Street. His head struck an iron ladder and his skull was fractured. He died soon after in the J. Hood Wright Hospital.

McCLELLAN MEETS JEROME.

Then They Shake Hands for the First Time in Three Years.

Mayor McClellan and District Attorney Jerome buried their differences yesterday and shook hands for the first time in three years. It all happened just before the meeting of the Board of Estimate.

The Mayor reached the old Council Chamber early. The District Attorney was waiting there to ask the board for $10,000 for contingent expenses of his office in connection with insurance cases. Both men smiled cordially, and the Mayor walked over and held out his hand, which the District Attorney promptly took. When the board met the District Attorney made his request, and it was approved at once.

The board was lavish in its expenditures, and appropriated many millions of dollars for improvements, $5,000,000 alone going to the Dock Department, and this carried with it the commitment of the board to a further appropriation of $10,000,000 in the not-distant future. Commissioner Bensel asked for $21,800,000, of which $9,009,000 is to pay for lands acquired last year, $7,000,000 for wharves and terminals now under condemnation proceedings, and about $4,000,000 for the department payroll and labor for 1906. The board also divided up the $8,000,000 authorized by the charter for annual paving expenditures, giving $1,000,000 to Manhattan, a like sum to Brooklyn, $350,000 each to the Bronx and Queens, and $300,000 to Richmond.

An appropriation of $120,000 was made for the purchase of new apparatus by the Fire Department, but a request for $180,000 for fire hose was laid aside for a report from the Finance Department. An appropriation of $220,000 was made for the Topographical Bureau in Queens and $130,000 for the same bureau in Richmond; President Haffen also got $50,000 for his bureau in the Bronx.

Commissioner Stevenson of the Department of Bridges told the board that the Henry Hudson Memorial Bridge at Spuyten Duyvil would cost the city $5,000,000, instead of the $1,000,000 first counted on. He said the masonry alone would cost $2,000,000. When the board authorized the bridge it counted on no such expenditure, and the authorization now may be revoked. The Mayor declared at the meeting that if the bridge should be built there would be no further celebration in 1909 at the expense of the city. The whole matter was referred to Controller Metz and Borough Presidents Ahearn and Haffen.

An appropriation of $50,000 was authorized for the building and accessories of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences.

DR. GILMAN.

"The Launching of a University and Other Papers," by the President Emeritus of Johns Hopkins.*

By EDWARD CARY.

THEY are the remembrances of a long, active, useful life of which the President Emeritus of Johns Hopkins has made a "sheaf" in this most interesting volume. A graduate of Yale, one-time President of the University of California, called in 1875 to preside over the fortunes of the great Johns Hopkins plan for a quarter of a century, and now at the head of that generous enterprise for the promotion of thinking, the Carnegie Institute, and—a bye-product—President of the National Civil Service Reform League, Dr. Gilman's influence upon the life of his countrymen has been very great, felt in varied ways, and always noble and ennobling.

One can gather from the tone of these papers something of the secret of that influence. High ideals and practical methods, a strict standard for himself and others and unfailing kindness and tact, a firm grasp of general principles and patience in the mastery of facts in detail, untiring energy and sympathetic interest—these are the qualities with which the reader makes acquaintance. He does not merely perceive these qualities; he literally makes acquaintance with them and with their exceedingly attractive possessor. Withal there is in the volume a delightful innocence of the more obtrusive traits one sometimes associates with the educator. Dr. Gilman has no fondness for preaching; he even seems to have no special velleity for teaching; his interest is of the widest and his curiosity insatiable. To him the function of the educator is a part of the active, complex, advancing, evolving life of the nation and of the race. He recognizes the contentions that arise in the path of every leader in the profession, the struggles between the humanities and science, for instance, between science and religion, between idealism and industrialism; he knows only too well what heat and bitterness they engender, with what sore afflictions they surround the worker; but he will not, apparently, join in them; he insists on regarding both parties to them as striving more or less consciously toward a common end which slowly and painfully but surely they constantly approach.

⁂

HERE is a single incident long forgotten probably by those who took part in it. In 1876 Prof. Huxley delivered an address under the auspices of Johns Hopkins University at the Academy of Music in Baltimore. A newspaper reporter published the fact that no prayer was offered, no benediction pronounced. A clergyman in New York wrote to one in Baltimore: "It was bad enough to invite Huxley. It were better to have asked God to be present. It would have been absurd to ask them both. I am sorry Gilman began with Huxley. But it is possible yet to redeem the university from the stain of such a beginning. No one will be more ready than I to herald a better sign."

"It was a curious fact," remarks Dr. Gilman, "unobserved and perhaps unknown, that four of the first seven professors came from the families of Gospel ministers, and a fifth of the group of six was a former Fellow of Oriel and a man of quite unusual devoutness." "At length," he adds, "the prejudice wore away without any manifesto or explanation from the authorities." This was quite in the spirit of the university under Dr. Gilman's sagacious guidance, and, fortunately, quite in the spirit of its wise founder. What that was is clearly indicated in the closing lines of the statement issued in January, 1876: "In selecting a staff of teachers the Trustees have determined to consider especially the devotion of the candidate to some particular line of study and the certainty of his eminence in that specialty; the power to pursue independent and original investigation, and to inspire the young with enthusiasm for study and research; the willingness to co-operate in building up a new institution, and the freedom from tendencies toward ecclesiastical or sectional controversies. The Trustees will not be governed by denominational or geographical considerations in the appointment of any teacher; but will endeavor to select the best person whose services they can secure in the position to be filled irrespective of the place where he was born, or the college in which he was trained, or the religious body with which he has been enrolled."

⁂

IN other words, Johns Hopkins from the very start worked for the future in every line, and it was largely the breadth of mind and the foresight of Dr. Gilman that made its work the solid and brilliant success it is recognized as being. He himself pays generous and affectionate tribute to the founder of the university and to his many efficient associates in the Board of Trustees and in the Faculties; it is by inference, not by his own assertion, that his remarkable part in the task becomes known to his readers. It is extremely fortunate for the Carnegie Institute—and a happy rounding out of his own career—that Dr. Gilman should bring to the service of that extraordinary enterprise a mind trained so thoroughly in the service of another so closely allied in purpose. In one and in the other what is most impressive in the spirit of Dr. Gilman is its elasticity. Few persons interested in intellectual pursuits in these days fail to acknowledge in form the general principles of evolution. But of those who acknowledge them many fail to see that these principles forbid finality even in the things that seem to us the most certain and definite. Darwin's own "hypothesis," as he modestly and wisely chose to call it, has been substantially modified by the labors of his successors, and the "conclusions" of these latter are far from conclusive. Dr. Gilman seems never to let the truth thus illustrated slip from his mind. The boundaries of knowledge he sees no more firmly fixed to-day than they were in the days from which we have advanced. He believes as confidently in the continuance of the advance as in its past accomplishment, and he aims so to organize the work he has been and is engaged in that the forces telling for progress shall encounter no needless obstacles. It is this mental attitude that keeps him, one would say, so sane. He is tremendously in earnest; his convictions are sincere and profound; but there is no touch of the fanatic in him. He seems to know that he is playing in a vast game where the stakes are ever increasing and of which the rules are but dimly known; he will play it coolly, courageously, and always fairly, until he must drop out, confident that with each succeeding generation of players the rules will be worked out a little more clearly and the rewards will be a little richer.

PRE-RAPHAELITES.

Holman Hunt, in His Autobiography, Claims the Honor Generally Awarded to Dante Gabriel Rossetti.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

JOSEPH JACOBS.

Author of "Some Recollections of Sir Edward Burne-Jones."

WHEN one thinks of Pre-Raphaelitism there floats before one's mind not merely a special method in pictorial art, but the general movement of feeling which affected the whole imaginative work of England in the "fifties" and "sixties." We think not alone of Pre-Raphaelitism in pictures, but of Pre-Raphaelitism in poetry, of Pre-Raphaelitism in architecture, and even of Pre-Raphaelitism in furniture. Pre-Raphaelitism is the chief protest against the dull Philistinism of the early Victorians. It replaced the domestic interiors of Wilkie with the splendor of the Holy Grail, it substituted the Morris chair for the horse-hair couch, it opposed the roses and rapture of Swinburne to the longueurs of Wordsworth and his school; in one word, it reintroduced romance into English art. The question as to the origin of a movement of such wide-reaching importance is consequently fundamental and significant. It is this question which Mr. Hunt raises in what is practically his autobiography.

In this Mr. Hunt claims the initiation of the whole movement as coming from himself and from the late Sir John Millais, as against the similar claim put forth by the friends and disciples of Dante Gabriel Rossetti. He bases his claim on the fact that the Pre-Raphaelite brotherhood included these two before Rossetti was allowed to join. He points out that Rossetti was for a short time his own pupil, and that those qualities of pictorial art which are characteristic of Pre-Raphaelitism are only shown in Rossetti's work after, and not before, he had come under the influence of Mr. Holman. He might have gone even further and pointed out that there is very little in Rossetti's work which shows that minute reproduction of nature's specific color which is shown in Mr. Hunt's own work as in the early work of Sir John Millais. By specific color I mean that in these two painters each object is represented almost photographically, with the color it has in nature when viewed by itself and without regard to surrounding objects. This produces the patchwork appearance of these paintings and is the chief thing which brought down upon them the objurgations of the art critics of the early days.

Let it be granted at once that Mr. Hunt has proved to the hilt that part of his case. Millais and he were the founders of the photographic school of British art. Millais soon deserted this principle and finally developed into a fashionable portrait painter, and the chief advertising painter of his generation. Mr. Hunt alone has, from first to last, remained Pre-Raphaelite in this restricted sense. He has found no followers, and cannot therefore well claim to be the founder of the school.

But is this minute accuracy of reproduction all that is meant by Pre-Raphaelitism? That is the real problem raised by Mr. Hunt's book. When we think of the Pre-Raphaelite brotherhood, we think of something quite other than this matter of painting technique. It is the halo of romance that attracts us in the Pre-Raphaelite brotherhood, and this halo rests, not upon Mr. Hunt's, but upon Rossetti's head. Dante Gabriel Rossetti was a romantic of the romantics. An Italian domiciled in English literature and art, he had all the Italian's passion for color, sentiment, and romance. He was Italian also in a calculating selfishness, which makes him rather unattractive as a character, but is by no means alien to the artistic temperament. It was Rossetti who attracted the young generation around him, both the poets and the painters. From Rossetti emanated streams of influence which caused new departures in pictorial art with Burne-Jones, in poetry with Swinburne, in criticism with Watts-Dunton, in architecture with Philip Webb, and in poetry, furniture, and typography with William Morris. It is Rossetti's influence which produced Pre-Raphaelitism in the wider sense of the word, and to Rossetti belongs the glory of it.

Mr. Hunt is half conscious of this divergence of claim. He points out that some of his early paintings were influenced by Keats, and thereby suggests that the affiliation of mid-Victorian English poetry with Keats was to a certain extent anticipated by himself and Millais. He even half-heartedly suggests that the change of taste in domestic furniture was undergone by him- long before the firm of William is & Co. came into existence, and his contains a photogravure of early furniture made for him, which to some extent substantiates his claim. But all this is beside the mark. It was Rossetti who caused others to be influenced by Keats, it was Morris who caused others to adopt simpler and more artistic furniture. Mr. Hunt is trying to prove too much. He shows he had the taste, but it is notorious that he did not have the winning power to make that taste spread.

⁂

ALTOGETHER Mr. Hunt's book, valuable as it is with its interesting anecdotes of the most interesting set of men England produced in the middle of the last century, does not change the verdict of art-history as to the inception and influence of Pre-Raphaelitism in the wider sense; it only enables us to distinguish between the narrower sense of Pre-Raphaelitism which he gives to the term, and the wider one which it has gradually obtained. Mr. Hunt substantiates his claim to have initiated the former. He does little to rob Rossetti of his rights as monarch of the wider realm.

This question of the relative priority and importance of Rossetti and Mr. Hunt as leaders of the Pre-Raphaelite movement forms the main subject of Mr. Hunt's first volume, but it by no means exhausts the interest of the book in general. The glimpses given of Millais in his earlier years, as the "wunderkind" of English art, is charming in the extreme. How he got rid of the too fulsome attentions of his doting parents, how he rebukes the envious criticisms of his fellow-students, his generosity to Mr. Hunt, his romantic relations with the Ruskins, all are vividly portrayed in Mr. Hunt's pages. But the life history of Mr. Holman Hunt himself would give these volumes permanent attraction apart from what he has to say about his fellow students and companions of the Pre-Raphaelite order.

⁂

IF ever there was a case of irresistible vocation, it was that of Mr. Hunt's tendency toward the painter's art. The world conceives the artist as a weak, irresponsible creature, but in truth the grit shown by the men of artistic temperament in keeping to their aims exceeds that of the most strenuous promoter of Wall Street. Against the will of parents and friends, Mr. Hunt made up his mind that he would be a painter, and that he would paint in the particular manner which distinguishes the Pre-Raphaelite brotherhood. With remarkable persistency he has, almost to the present day, retained the manner of his early youth, and reproduces with photographic accuracy what he sees in nature. It was this striving to accuracy which caused him to spend so many years in the Holy Land, in order that he might reproduce the color effects of Palestinian scenery when painting his sacred pictures.

In describing his adventures to obtain this effect, Mr. Hunt gives an interesting account of the East before it had been vulgarized by Cook tourists, and gives many an amusing adventure illustrating the difficulties which the Western mind has to overcome in adapting itself to the mind of the Oriental. Much of his second volume is devoted to this interesting topic. But besides his own personal career, these pages are full of interesting accounts of the distinguished men whom Mr. Hunt has met during the course of a long and honored life; Tennyson, Thackeray, Ruskin, Burne-Jones, Leighton, Fred Walker, Gladstone, Morris, Dickens, George Meredith, G. F. Watts—the list is almost interminable of the famous friends whom Mr. Hunt has gained by his steadfast and loyal devotion to the highest art.

⁂

ONE of the most amusing passages in the work is a description of a Summer tour with Tennyson and Francis Palgrave, the editor of The Golden Treasury, who regarded himself as a sort of dry nurse of Tennyson, a position which the poet naturally resented. Occasionally Mr. Hunt indulges in pages of considerable literary beauty, in which, of course, the influence of Ruskin's style is obvious, but as a rule he is contented with a straightforward, narrative account, full at once of artistic insight and sturdy British common sense on the difficulties and dangers of the artist's life. The book is admirably illustrated with reproductions of pictures, not alone by Mr. Hunt himself, but by his colleagues, Rossetti, Millais, Richmond, Madox Brown, and a remarkable one by Spenser Stanhope, which indicates the origin of what is nowadays known as the Burne-Jones face. But just as Mr. Stanhope will scarcely claim the merit of all Burne-Jones's work, so Mr. Hunt has not proved by his elaborate argument that the inspiration that spread from Dante Gabriel Rossetti was entirely due to himself.

POLITICAL BOSSES.

FIVE AMERICAN POLITICIANS. A Study in the Evolution of American Politics. By Samuel P. Orth. Cleveland: The Burrows Brothers Company.

THE word bossism is comparatively new in our political vocabulary. Those who think the thing which it defines is equally new would do well to glance over these sketches written by Dr. Orth. The author's purpose is to describe the chief political events in the lives of the five Americans he has chosen, and the tendencies which their careers illustrate.

Only two of the five can lay claim to great statesmanship, Henry Clay certainly, possibly Stephen A. Douglas. The other three were party leaders, political bosses, spoilsmen. New York State has the dubious honor of having nurtured this trinity of manipulators, wire-pullers, and lobbyists, Aaron Burr, De Witt Clinton, and Martin Van Buren. Though all aspired to the Presidency, only one, fortunately, reached it, and Van Buren showed convincingly how poor a figure a mere politician cuts in the White House.

Burr's character is unlovely, but Dr. Orth seeks to shield him from one accusation, that he tried to defeat the will of the people in 1800 by snatching the Presidency from Jefferson after the election had been thrown into the House of Representatives. He thinks there is no evidence for this charge. But one claim to distinction must be accorded to the man who killed Hamilton. By founding the political power of Tammany Hall he became the political progenitor of Croker and Murphy.

To De Witt Clinton belongs the honor of employing to the full, for the first time, the power of appointment for partisan purposes. He is the father of the spoils system. Under his leadership, as member of the Council of Appointment and as Mayor of New York City, the political principle that public office is a public trust gave way to the theory that "to the victors belong the spoils." Officers of state and Judges became "ward heelers." As Mayor, Clinton plunged into the petty factional strife that forms the history of the city during the early nineteenth century. He dispensed patronage to his henchmen, shared in the barroom intrigues and street corner rivalries and discussions, and was esteemed by his friends "a good fellow." Breathing in this poisonous atmosphere, it is to his honor that he retained his integrity, and never thrust his hand into the change pockets of the public. It is pleasant to notice that his character advanced with his years, and that it is with a beneficent event, the construction of the Erie Canal, that his name is most closely linked.

Less attractive than the generous, profuse Clinton is the parsimonious, calculating, emotionless Van Buren. He was a typical and successful politician, with the omnipresent smile and the glad hand; and—a quality indispensable in his calling—he never forgot a face or a name. He controlled New York by means of a powerful, centralized party, presided over by a group of politicians known as the "Albany Regency." From the death of Clinton, Van Buren ruled with the autocracy of a Czar. Shortly after the election of 1824 he began to work for Jackson, and contributed not a little to the great victory of 1828. Jackson rewarded him with the Secretaryship of State. Crawford had already introduced the spoils system, or, as it was euphemistically termed, "rotation in office," into the Treasury. Van Buren proceeded to introduce it with a vengeance into the State Department. But being the man he was he did nothing to make himself a National figure and gave no evidences of statesmanship. Jackson designated him as successor and he became President, inaugurating in the White House the era of the mediocre. He lived and died a mere politician.

It is refreshing to turn to the careers of Clay and Douglas, men who could deal with great issues with principle and patriotism, and who regarded politics as something else than vote getting. Both loved the same Union, both longed in vain for the same Presidency. Clay was the regular and "logical" candidate of the Whig Party, and was actually nominated three times. Douglas, though his name was considered in several Democratic Conventions, was nominated only once. Each seemed to grow in grandeur by defeat. Clay was never more patriotic than when, at the very end of his life, he sought to pour oil on the troubled waters of the slavery controversy by his famous compromise. Douglas, who precipitated civil war by his Kansas-Nebraska bill, was never nobler than when, after his defeat by Lincoln, and at the very close of his short life, in pointing out the Southern conspiracy to destroy the Union, he said: "I express it as my conviction before God that it is the duty of every American citizen to rally around the flag of his country." It is as patriots and statesmen, rather than as politicians, that Clay and Douglas, as well as Lincoln, will be remembered.

A PARSON IN BAD COMPANY.

Another Picturesque Novel of the Theatrical Mining Camp, the Rough Diamond and the Tenderfoot.

THE novel called "The Sage Brush Parson," by A. B. Ward, (Little, Brown & Co.,) is one of those wholly improbable, mostly impossible, and yet always entertaining stories of the West and Westerners that have, times without number, proved highly successful on the theatrical stage, but may be safely declared to have little or no connection with the sober realities that exist out between the Mississippi River and the Pacific Ocean. The centre of interest in such tales is sure to be a man or woman marvelously at variance with his or her surroundings, and in this case it is a young Methodist parson who has come out from England with the avowed intention of using his talents as exhorter and teacher for the spiritual betterment of the rough mining element in Nevada.

At his own request the Rev. Clement Vaughan was assigned by the Superintendent of Missions to Eureka, which was supposed to be more completely given over to wickedness than any other city in the State, and therefore appealed mightily to the particular kind of fanaticism that had brought him to America, leaving conveniently behind his incompatible wife. She was to have followed on after when things were settled, as she did not look with favor on the family emigration, but she proved even more fiercely opposed to the definite horrors of Eureka than she had been to missions in general, utterly refused to play the helpmate to a husband with no salary, and stayed in England. This somewhat disturbed the preacher's rosy dreams, but did not prevent his speedy settlement in his queer parish without explanation of his matrimonial status. Thus inauspiciously, as far as his own conscience was concerned, did the Rev. Clement Vaughan start in on his crusade at Eureka, while the reader is painfully certain that, however long delayed, Nemesis is on his trail in the form of the unamiable Delia.

After the fashion of the story book tenderfoot, (and of no other,) this parson is equal to all occasions. The author insists upon his hero's slenderness of physique, his refined and ascetic nature, his almost childish ingenuousness, but under the force of necessity he rode the wickedest of broncos into submission; knocked out a skilled boxer who had tricked him into putting on the gloves for the malicious pleasure of hurting him; compelled drunkards and gamblers in the saloons to listen to his preaching; defied infuriated sinners of all sorts, and otherwise won the unbounded admiration of all the cowboys and miners in the place by playing their own game in first-class style. The real key to his popularity, however, was his winning the friendship of Jack Perry, the local saloon keeper and the real ruler of the town. His boyishness and enthusiasm struck some soft spot in Perry's rough heart, and from that time he had an invincible backer and champion. To attack the parson was to settle with Jack Perry, and no one in his sober senses relished such a prospect.

But unfortunately for the parson and his crusade, Eureka was the home of Arthur Sinclair and his widowed sister, Katherine Chisholm, owners of the mine, and one of the parson's first exploits was to rescue the latter's little girl from a runaway horse. That led to an acquaintance and a very reprehensible drifting on the man's part, ably seconded by the woman, who of course was wholly ignorant of Delia's existence, but adored the parson at first sight. Suddenly one day, while playing a little impromptu melody of his own to which Katherine had set some words, the revelation came, and the Rev. Clement learned into just what dangerous ground he had strayed. One looks for Delia at this interesting point, and is not disappointed. She was even at that very moment at the hotel, and Jack Perry was trying to keep her quiet. Repeated conferences resulted in anything but reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan, even though she had brought with her their son, of whose existence his father had never known. Miners have primitive ideas in regard to the kind of morals parsons ought to have, and this particular parson was soon made to feel his growing unpopularity. His church emptied as quickly as it had filled, he met public affronts, and it was not long before the Superintendent requested his resignation. To crown all, Delia jumped off a cliff with the child in his presence, he was put in jail as her murderer, and at the trial pleaded guilty. He referred to his spiritual guilt, but his words were taken literally, and he was within about a hair's breadth of hanging when a kindly disposed Sheriff got an inkling of his real meaning and set about his rescue. The Governor's reprieve waved between the prisoner and the scaffold in the best melodramatic style resulted in a collapse, through which the faithful Jack Perry nursed him.

The story ends with the equally faithful Katherine standing on the roof of her house, waving a farewell to her lover as he rides off down the mountain for a two months' vacation from Eureka and all his troubles. He was not a murderer, but the reason for his rehabilitation in Eureka's eyes is vague, to say the least. Logic is not A. B. Ward's strong point, but she or he (whichever it is) writes a readable story and one that keeps the attention right up to the last word, and logic can be acquired much more easily than the talent in this direction which the author of "The Sage Brush Parson" evidently possesses.

A TENOR.

THE TRUTH ABOUT TOLNA. By Bertha Runkle. 12mo. Pp. 368. New York: The Century Company. $1.50.

TOLNA is a singer of the kind who can "soothe with a tenor note The souls in purgatory." But is he "vox et praeterea nihil," or has he a soul behind his golden voice? "Artistic temperament" he assuredly has none; he is a sensible, good-hearted, jolly fellow, inclined to deride the emotions he excites. This does not suit the friend, Denys Alden, who has educated and produced him. Alden himself had looked forward to an operatic career, but the over-training of his voice caused its failure, and all his thwarted hopes and aspirations are transferred to Tolna. To enhance his popularity, Alden weaves about him a romantic fiction, and keeps him enshrouded in an atmosphere of mystery. This gets everybody into "a pretty kettle of fish," until the truth about Tolna sets things right.

Miss Runkle has conceived a very original plot, and shows much skill both in tangling and in untangling its threads. The story begins and ends in the Metropolitan Opera House, and the action occupies but ten days—long enough, however, for a great many things to happen.

The dialogue is particularly witty and vivacious, and the characters upon the whole are good. Honor Hammond, however, strikes us as a most disagreeable young person, and the obliquity of Denys Alden's ethical vision is only equaled by his creator's apparent unconsciousness of it. Are we altogether losing our scorn of lying, and coming to regard it as did the Virgin Queen, as merely an intellectual method of meeting a difficulty? Mrs. Burnham's audacities and her French are delightful; so is her artistic sister, who in her clinging "greenery-yallery" gown "looked like a caterpillar." The young millionaire's "Sing Sing dinner" is commended for the imitation of "the smart set." It is quite a delicious thrust at some of the "goings on," of which we others read with amaze.

A clever and merry story has Miss Runkle told, for which she deserves as enthusiastic a call before the curtain as Tolna himself. With its perfect type and paper the book is nothing but a pleasure from first to last. The reader enjoys the mystery and its unfolding, the sparkle of the dialogue, the surprises that lie in wait, and the final truth about Tolna and everybody else. It is good occasionally to relax one's emotional tension upon a novel that is recreation pure and simple.

Flammarion in English.

The volume on "Thunder and Lightning," by the celebrated French astronomer, Camille Flammarion, containing the data collected by him on the damages wrought by lightning, will be published here in an English translation by Little, Brown & Co. of Boston, March 24. Such topics as victims of lightning, atmospheric electricity, and storm clouds, flash and sound, fireballs, effects of lightning on mankind, animals, trees, and metals, &c., are treated.

FOUR ROYAL WOMEN.

◆

Two Unhappy Queens and Two Prosperous Empresses.*

THE most interesting part of Mr. Henderson's "Mary Queen of Scots" is the illustrations that the author has obtained for his volumes. These number more than one hundred, and are mostly from original portraits or, in the case of localities, from old prints. One sees the Queen, her friends, and her foes, the places which she loved, and those where she spent her captivity—far more than Mr. Henderson's text, they convey the idea and the personality of the men and women who made history in Scotland 300 years ago and more.

Mr. Henderson may have Mary's history at his fingers' ends—he has been a student of Scottish history and biography for years—but he has not succeeded in telling what he knows convincingly, or with clearness or fullness. Mrs. MacCunn's biography is not only far more interesting, but it is fuller. It is in one volume, Mr. Henderson's is in two volumes, and, its author insinuates, deals "in a somewhat detailed and critical fashion with the main episodes of her career." Taking up but one of those incidents, that of the murder of Darnley, we find that Mrs. MacCunn says decidedly that this occurred in February, 1567, and allows the reader to find for himself that it took place on the night of February 9th. Mr. Henderson, on the other hand, says that Prince James was christened at Stirling on Dec. 17, (no year date is given, nor even a year date for the Prince's birth) but gives no hint of the time of Darnley's murder until the next chapter. Mrs. MacCunn gives a contemporary plan of Kirk o' Field; Mr. Henderson gives an interesting picture of Bothwell's Hermitage Castle, but lets Edinburgh and its surroundings pass almost unnoticed. The woman quotes the recorded incidents of the murder, so that we know what happened; the man hums and haws, but tells us almost nothing except that it did occur. He gives us, however, an appendix on the Casket Letters.

His summing up of Mary's career, however, must be approved: "Indeed, the more the present writer has concerned himself with the career of Mary Stuart, the more has he been impressed with the inapplicability to it, in the strict sense, of praise or blame. Whatever may be the rights or wrongs of Protestantism or Catholicism, Mary appears to have been very largely the mere victim of a bitter religious quarrel." It is a pity that Mr. Henderson could not have shown us the reasons for his conclusion with fewer words and in clearer language.

⁂

MR. TAYLOR advances as the reason for his biography of Henrietta Maria the fact that though she has been charged with playing an important part in the "English 'troubles' of the seventeenth century," very little has been written about her directly. It does not appear from Mr. Taylor's book, however, that she did play such an important part. She supported her husband in his claims, as a woman and a Queen naturally would do; but she took no such part as her French ancestors took in politics and policies.

The author of these volumes has told his story well and sympathetically; but he has not proved that it was really worth telling. The history of Henrietta Maria does not stand out separately; it is part of the history of Great Britain as a whole, a part of the biography of her husband, from her marriage in 1625 to her departure from England in 1644; and thereafter is a part of the biography of her son Charles. After the Restoration she lived almost wholly in France in retirement, and died and was buried there. As her story is told by Eva Scott, in "The King in Exile," which deals with the wanderings of Charles II. before the Restoration, it receives all necessary attention. A single volume might well contain her history—and yet make room for the dates that Mr. Taylor omits—which is interesting but certainly not important.

The portraits of these volumes are excellent, and among them are some not ordinarily to be found in the usual biographies of the time.

⁂

MR. FITZGERALD MOLLOY is a voluminous writer who deals with history from a popular point of view. He is not original—how can a man be original who has to keep the griddle busy? He is much the same sort of writer as our own Hon. Joel T. Headley, who turned out biographies of the distinguished dead so that they could be sold on the day of the obsequies (never "funerals.") Only Mr. Headley dealt with quite proper subjects; none of his biographers (to use the library school word) was ever a mere man or woman. Mr. Molloy writes of the very human side of famous or infamous persons; if there is anything in the way of "scandal about Queen Elizabeth," he tells of it.

His latest book, "The Russian Court in the Eighteenth Century," deals really with the two notorious and able Empresses of Russia, Elizabeth and Catharine. There is nothing new in his story, which, be it observed, deals only with the latter half of the century. Mr. Molloy's account is fluent and interesting, as it ought to be, for he has had long practice as a literary Jenkins. But the most valuable—or is it the least worthless?—things in the two volumes are the portraits. Even they are not new. If one knows nothing of Russian history, these volumes will tell him something of it in a not too partisan manner, and in an attractive way; but they cannot be recommended to one who wishes to know the whole truth about the history of the Czar's empire during the second half of the eighteenth century. The abilities of the two profligate women who created Russia are ignored; only the baser side of Court politics is presented. In the cases of Elizabeth and Catharine this manner of presentation is conventional, and one who knows Mr. Molloy's writings can expect nothing unconventional from him—at least when the conventional jibes so perfectly with his own methods.

A YOUNG IRONMASTER.

MR. FRANCIS LYNDE, whose origin was in New England and who has lived long among the people of Tennessee—he has a house on the steep side of Lookout Mountain—is pretty well equipped to write about certain things with sympathy and without correlative bitterness. And his newest novel, called "The Quickening," (Bobbs-Merrill Company,) provides a singularly pleasing picture of that warm hearted and choleric old gentleman of the South who has suffered so much from the caricatures of his enemies and the idealizations of his friends. Major Dabney, late of the Confederate Army, totally unreconstructed, tenacious of his land and his prejudices, but easy of access by way of his heart, comes very near being a faithful portrait of the type—a type which Mr. Lynde has learned to admire without losing a humorous appreciation of its imperfections.

However, the story deals but incidentally with Major Dabney. It is chiefly concerned with the up growing and the moral development of one Thomas Jefferson Gordon, who enters the narrative as a barefoot boy, son of a solid yeoman and a good woman of the deepest (and narrowest) school of mountain piety.

Tom's mother is resolved to make a parson of her offspring—who is singularly ill fitted by nature for that calling—and the whole drama is conceived as a struggle of the elements in Tom, his father's practicality with his mother's mysticism—if one may use such an emasculated word for such a real thing as the old-time religion—till at last he finds himself. The apparatus for the process is a story which involves an entanglement with a mountain girl, a love affair with the Major's beautiful daughter, and a passage through the mill of modern industrialism. For promoters come to Paradise Valley, and make an iron town where once upon a time the autocratic Major ruled over wide ancestral acres and the mountain folk lived their narrow lives. Mr. Lynde has done well by these mountain folk, he has done well by the Major's daughter, and he has given strong dramatic interest to the industrial machinery, though his promoter persons are distinctly too villainous to be convincing. For his object is not entirely to tell a story, it is in part to point a moral, to exhibit the rottenness of commercialism.

Thomas Jefferson, rejected by the theological college to which he goes at first, applies himself later to a technical education and fights the devil with fire, doing to the Romans what they have done to him and winning out in the battle; it is, of course, the business of the Major's daughter to restore his moral balance. And it is there that the story, which throughout is rather compelling and in its local aspects often both fine and true, is weakest. In other words, the players (save the promoters) are better conceived than the plot, which creaks and gapes at the seams. However, no author is quite master of his plots nowadays. The public—and the publishers—insist on certain conventional attitudes. Considering all, Mr. Lynde has not done ill. It is a story of the kind of love none but cynics ever scoff at, a story of struggle and passion, stirring incident, and the nobler womanhood; and it includes pictures of childhood painted out of a fullness of knowledge, and painted simply and strongly. The reviewer happens to know that the author has children of his own—for he has seen them at play among the rocks around the house on Lookout already mentioned.

The acme of entertainment is a good story well told.

ROBERT ELLSWORTH, FAILURE, AND HIS BOOK.

"All science has one aim, namely, to find a theory of nature. Whenever a true theory appears it will be its own evidence. Its test is that it will explain all phenomena."—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

The book ingenuously presents an established fact, until now overlooked, not an ingenious theory, and uncovers, without doubt, the true theory of nature, which very palpably explains the phenomena of language, sleep, sex, and, if deeply considered, all phenomena. If glanced over in a casual way, the book, as a narrative, is rather pretty, but carefully read its disclosures are dramatic and even startling. To a deep thinker it might be described as intense.

"I am reading your book with pleasure and profit. It surely reveals an insight into the heart of things that is very excellent." — ELBERT HUBBARD.

HARDY'S PANORAMIC DRAMA.

The Second Part of "The Dynasts"—The Substance of a Prose Masterpiece, but Not a Great Poem.*

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

H. W. BOYNTON.

ABOUT two years ago appeared the first part of a work which presented unusual obstacles to the reviewer. "The Dynasts" appeared to lie outside the familiar categories. Was it in any sense a drama? Did it contain any true poetry? Was it not, on the whole, rather a joke than an enigma? There was no doubt, at all events, of the delightful readiness with which it lent itself to ridicule. Many of us made good use of the loan. There was nothing grossly unfair in our part of the transaction. The thing had certainly its ridiculous aspects; the question remained for us—and it is now being urged with much vigor by various critics in whom the perusal of the second part of the trilogy has induced a plucking up of spirit or a change of heart—whether it is not also in its way sublime.

This question the present writer is, for himself, constrained to answer flatly in the negative. It is not a great work, because its workmanship is not great. There have been generations when to make that remark would have been to utter an intolerable platitude. Just now, however, we seem to have thrown over so much of the ballast of criticism (or are we ignorant of it?)—we are so bent on riding light and going as we please, that we deserve to have a steadying truism thrown aboard now and then. Let us be glad, let us be mad, let us forget the old conventions. This is a new age: the ancients climbed Parnassus; we are going to show what elevation may be gained by means of the bootstrap. If any reader of this note thinks that a great writer is a man who has great thoughts and partially expressed them, or has mediocre thoughts and greatly expresses them, there is nothing for him in the rest of it.

⁂

BUT this denial of Mr. Hardy's workmanship is not based on distrust of its mere novelty of form. That form, indeed, a little examination proves to possess no real novelty. Mr. Hardy is essentially a writer of fiction, and he has produced in "The Dynasts" a piece of condensed historical fiction. Descriptive and narrative are taken care of by prolonged "stage directions" and by elaborate "dumb show." A full chorus is provided to do the necessary commenting and moralizing. Mr. Hardy in his original preface speaks of it as a drama, and later as a "panoramic show." It is not more a drama than "The Divine Comedy," and not more a panoramic show than Carlyle's "French Revolution." Its novelty of character and of form is, in short, purely superficial. Whether this work be called a drama, or a panorama, or an epic, or a history, is a matter of definition which, for the moment, we cheerfully waive; we challenge any one to prove it a new thing of any kind.

⁂

BUT, taking it as what it professes to be, an imaginative presentation of historical fact, wherein does it fail of high achievement? Primarily, one must think, in its failure as poetry. Mr. Hardy's blank verse is an empty thing—altogether an unnatural mode of expression for him. It is amazing to find some commentators discerning in his present abuse of metre evidences of "the grand style." He is said to have found an instrument of his own; his verses are, with some conceded roughness, said to be animated by a "high quality of dramatic sincerity," "genius," and "vision." Let us examine the facts a little, and see what we shall see. The prose dialogue we find to be uniformly good; we feel its integrity; Mr. Hardy here employs a medium of which he is a master. To read a passage made up in part of this prose and in part of that verse is to oscillate sharply between pleasure and dismay. When these persons speak prose they are in character, they are credible, they live and move. When they attempt to drop into poetry the result is either the adoption of a crabbed and unreal prose cut up into lengths, or a dubious echo of the Elizabethan rhetoric. Which is the true King George—the man who in plain prose commends to Pitt a grinning match througn horse collars as a very humorous sport, or he who says

I read it as a thing
Of signal augury and one which bodes
Heaven's confidence in me and in my line,
That I should rule as king in such an age.

Not even at great moments does this blank verse rise to the occasion. Nelson is dying, and some recent deaths among his men are reported to him:

NELSON.

Ah—
So many lives—in such a glorious cause.
* * *
I join them soon, soon, soon—O where is Hardy?
Will nobody bring Hardy to me—none?
He must be killed, too. Surely Hardy's dead?

A MIDSHIPMAN.

He's coming soon, my Lord. The constant call
On his full heed of this most mortal fight
Keeps him from hastening hither as he would.

It is surely bad enough to have Nelson represented as so tamely sentimental in his last moments without visiting upon us this mouthing midshipman. Nelson would have been near death indeed to endure so declamatory an urchin—as learned in Shakespeare as if he had been a Recording Angel, or the Spirit of the Years himself—or as Fox, who is represented as uttering himself (in speech with a French conspirator) as follows:

GEVRILLIERE.

[Of Napoleon.]
Ceasing to bluff, then ceases he to be.
None sees that written largelier than himself.

FOX.

Then what may be the valued revelation
That you can unlock in such circumstance?
Sir, I incline to spell you as a spy.
And not the honest help for honest men
You gave you out to be.

If this is sincere blank verse, Heaven defend us from blank verse!

We can have no disposition to speak flippantly of a work undertaken in a serious spirit, and worthy of serious interest. Mr. Hardy's blank verse fills us with something much more nearly akin to distress than amusement. What a fine consistent work this might have been if our master of vigorous prose had been content with his medium: poet he is not, and never will be. How idle, with all its appearance of qualification, is this dictum of one of the English reviewers: "Of the noblest poetry Mr. Hardy surely has all 'the matter and substance,' even if we must constrain ourselves to deny him the 'manner and the style.'" In what case is our criticism, upon what principles is it founded, when it is still possible for that hoary and oft-exploded fallacy, which strives to divorce the body of poetry from its soul, to be revamped? Noble poetry is noble matter and manner; if Mr. Hardy had noble poetic matter he would have noble poetic manner; surely this is one of the elementary principles of criticism.

⁂

IF "The Dynasts," however, is not a great work it is certainly an interesting study in its kind. The imaginative historian is here trying to do two things—first, to give human body and reality to the Napoleonic struggle, already half a myth; second, to do tardy justice to England's part in that struggle. There are moments when these two objects appear to change places in order of importance; they were perhaps of almost equal weight in the writer's mind. But a basis of patriotism is not a bad underpinning for the imagination; it is hard to fancy what the poets and historians would have done without their National or party bias. In his larger mood Mr. Hardy is the unprejudiced and more or less remote spectator of the thronging events and persons of his "panorama." This dramatist and his audience are not suffered to occupy comfortable seats and to watch the story unfold before them without effort on their part.

"A panoramic show like the present," says the author, "is a series of historical 'ordinates.' * * * The spectator, in thought, becomes a performer whenever called upon, and cheerfully makes himself the utility man of the gaps." So here we go, all of us, flitting over the earth's surface at different elevations, our view often obscured by clouds, but getting a glimpse of all sorts of activities, now in London, now in Berlin, now in Madrid; descending to enter now into the boudoir of Josephine, now into the Royal Pavilion at Brighton, now into the traveling carriage in which Napoleon bids welcome to the new Empress. Over us hover a variety of attendant spirits, or "phantom intelligences," with their comments, ironical, grim, or tender, upon the play of human circumstance before us. These intelligences compose unhappy verse; it is in the stage directions and "dumb shows" that we find the most striking elements in the whole work. Here is our real panorama:

ACT SECOND. Scene I. The Pyrenees and valleys adjoining.

The view is from the upper air, immediately over the region that lies between Bayonne on the north, Pampeluna on the south, and San Sebastian on the west, including a portion of the Cantabrian Mountains. The month is February, and snow covers not only the peaks but the lower slopes. The roads over the passes are well beaten.

DUMB SHOW.

At various elevations multitudes of Napoleon's soldiery, to the number of about 30,000, are discerned in a creeping progress across the frontier from the French to the Spanish side. The long thin columns serpentine along the roads, but are sometimes broken, while at others they disappear altogether behind vertical rocks and overhanging woods. The heavy guns and the whity-brown tilts of the baggage-wagons seem the largest objects in the procession, which are dragged laboriously up the incline to the watershed, their lumbering being audible as high as the clouds. Simultaneously, the River Badassoa, in a valley to the west, is being crossed by a train of artillery and another 30.000 men. * * *

This is your art of imaginative realism with a vengeance. Note how the details, the very enumeration, bring home the vision—certainly a fine achievement of the art which is and always has been peculiar to Mr. Hardy. There is no doubt whatever about the power of conception or of projection here. Mr. Hardy does, in his own person, lead us upon a height and show to us the kingdoms of the world. He brings home to us most vividly the physical paltriness of the insect called man, the ludicrous insignificance of his earthly estate. He fills us with a kindly contempt for ourselves which is not the least luxurious of sensations. He gives us, further, a new sense of the human meaning of so complex a manoeuvre as a Napoleonic warfare; the private, the poltroon, the deserter, find in him a spokesman. This work has in it the substance, in short, of a true prose masterpiece; but not all the King's metres and all the King's feet could conceivably make a poem of it; for Mr. Hardy has nothing of the poet in him. *THE DYNASTS. A Drama of the Napoleonic Wars, in Three Parts, Nineteen Acts, and One Hundred and Thirty Scenes. By Thomas Hardy. Part Second. New York: The Macmillan Company.

AUNT MENELOPHE.

HAZEL OF HEATHERLAND. By Mabel Barnes-Grundy. New York: Baker & Taylor Company.

TELLING her she ought to dress to her eyes and hair was not the only piece of good advice which delightful Aunt Menelophe gave to pretty Hazel of Heatherland.

Only as a rule it could not have been called by any name so formal as advice. It was rather a diffusing of influence, and the influence of Aunt Menelophe of the gray hair, the soft, clinging dresses, and the gracious manner, to say nothing of the kindly heart beneath, was all of the best.

Just what would have become of the somewhat refractory but refreshing little Hazel if this fairy godmother had not taken her temporarily and opportunely away from Heatherland is hard to guess.

As it was, that visit and a subsequent one served to show Hazel that Mrs. Grundy was not the all-important personage of that monotonous and gossipy village after all, that in fact one plain, persistent John Inderwick was a vastly more essential individual.

It is a diverting pastime to watch the heroine's slow advance to the knowledge that fringy boot laces and a shabby necktie, or even a few gaucheries of manner in a man are not to be weighed in the same scales with character and wholeheartedness and unselfishness.

Of course the knowledge is all gained just in the nick of time, and if this is not always the way of the world, all the more reason for enjoying it in the way of romance. Besides, if you will read about Eustace Escourt you will not wonder that the fairy godmother and John were allies and that the last chapter of the book rings merry as a marriage bell.

EARLY WALL PAPERS.

OLD-TIME WALL PAPERS. By Kate Sanborn. 4to. Castor Boards. Paper Label. Profusely Illustrated. New York: The Literary Collector Press.

IT is believed that never before has a volume been written in which wall papers have been exclusively dealt with. The first to appear is by Miss Kate Sanborn, the well-known author, lecturer, and book reviewer. She gives an account of the pictorial "Old-Time Wall Papers," including, also, a study of the historical development of wall-paper making and decoration. Her text has been divided into six chapters—"From Mud Walls and Canvas Tents to Decorative Papers," "Progress and Improvement in the Art," "Earliest Wall Papers in America," "Wall Papers in Historic Homes," "Notes from Here and There," and "Revival and Restoration of Old Wall Papers."

Miss Sanborn begins by telling of her difficulties in finding books, articles, &c., on her subject. But friends in this and other countries helped her, and she writes in her first chapter of the origin of papered walls and paper in various parts of the world. Paper made by the Chinese was passed on to the Arabs, and was known in the Middle Ages as "Charta Damascena." The first paper made in Europe was manufactured by the Moors in Spain, at whose decline the Christians took it up, but turned out inferior work. The Arabs in Sicily introduced it into Italy. She passes on to the use of tapestries, turning again to wall papers, and finally declares the Chinese as the originators of decorative wall papers, one of the first examples of them to enter Europe being in the Queen's palace at The Hague.

From the Chinese, she goes on to say, who carried the papers into Arabian prisons, these decorations were imported by the Dutch, and then carried into France, Germany, England, and other countries in Europe. Until the beginning of the nineteenth century the wall papers were for the most part imported from China; but in 1800 home manufacture was so greatly developed as to make it unnecessary to send to the East for them. Miss Sanborn here gives descriptions of the methods employed by the different nations in turning out the papers—how they wove them, colored them, designed them, &c.

"Wall papers of expensive styles and artistic variety were brought to America as early as 1735," writes the author in her third chapter. Before that time clay paint was used to freshen up the sooty walls and ceilings. This was followed by hand painting, then by small squares of paper, with the borders made by the family. This was before the present-day rolls came into existence. She stops abruptly to tell what drew her attention to the theme of old-time wall papers:

> One, and an especially fine specimen, is associated with my earliest memories, and will be remembered to my latest day. For, although a native of New Hampshire, I was born at the foot of Mount Vesuvius, and there was a merry dance to the music of mandolin and tambourine round the tomb of Virgil on my natal morn. Some men were fishing, others bringing in the catch; farther on was a picnic party, sentimental youths and maidens eating confits and dainties to the tender notes of a flute. And old Vesuvius was smoking violently. All this because the room in which I made my début was adorned with a landscape or scenic paper. Fortunately this still remains on the walls, little altered or defaced by the wear of years.

This is followed up by brief descriptions of wall papers in some of the old houses in New England as well as in other parts of the country and in foreign lands, pictures of which Miss Sanborn received from correspondents.

Some idea is given in the text as well as illustrations—of which, by the way, there are a very large number distributed throughout the body of the volume and on full page plates, some of them being in their original colors, others in half tone, and several in sepia—of the papers covering the walls in some of the historic homes in this country, including the famous Hancock house, the Lafayette Room at the Wayside Inn in South Sudbury, Mass.; King's Tavern at Vernon, Conn., (now Rockville;) the Knox mansion at Thomaston, Me.; the Governor Gore house at Waltham, Mass., and others. In her final chapter Miss Sanborn speaks of the revival of wall papers, and incidentally makes a plea for the preservation of those of the "olden time."

Harper's Book of Facts.

"Harper's Book of Facts" (first published in 1894 and now for some years out of print) is about to be reissued in a new edition, revised and brought up to date. It will include, duly arranged for reference, a mass of miscellaneous information dealing with matters dating from the beginning of history to the current year—1906.

TRADES UNIONS.

A New Volume of Studies of Their Methods and Influence in America.*

THIS volume of essays is a study of trades unions in the concrete. Several of the largest and best known are examined as individuals, with respect to their organization and development and activities. The manner is that of an anatomist or botanist studying specimens, and seeking to deduce from the individual the characteristics of its genus. This reverses the accustomed method, which begins by assuming such knowledge, and proceeds by discussing such broad topics as the legal and economic relations between capital and labor. But it is obvious that accurate knowledge of the individual must precede any but rash assumptions regarding its class. The manner of these essays is therefore scientific, that is to say, respectful rather than friendly or unfriendly, and historic and descriptive rather than critical or laudatory. The vastness of the topic is appalling. Here is a large book, expertly written, that is to say with no waste of words, and only some half dozen unions are discussed—the Typographical, the Cigarmakers', the Iron Molders', the Machinists', the building trades, the Knights of Labor, and the American Federation. These are all interesting heads. The work is done well, but it is not exhaustive, and it is not directed to such exposition of principles as attracts the general reader.

But while appealing chiefly to specialists there are some points of general interest. The Cigar Makers' Union is so highly developed that it has learned how to administer its international organization without conventions. For ten years its legislation has been direct, that is to say, not through representative assemblies, but by initiative and referendum. Town meetings become impracticable with growth, but modern facilities of communication enable legislation in town meeting manner over districts embracing States, and organized as elaborately as our Federal Government. These unionists are voters, and the political effect of such an extensive experience and example may yet be far-reaching at a time when disgust with excessive or erratic or expensive legislation pervades many communities.

The Iron Molders' Union affords a good example of strength and stability and—from the unionists' standpoint—activity. This union is approaching its fiftieth year, and its income has multiplied fifty times, to a present total exceeding $300,000. Of this a third is disbursed in strike expenditures, and the remainder in expenses and charities. Employers who have had arguments with modern unions do not need to be convinced that they are antagonists not to be despised, but it will come as a revelation to some that one of the least known unions has such a history and resources, which are eloquent of reinforcements in the background in case of any general struggle in which the labor class chooses to interest itself. The refinement of the Machinists' union's struggle for a wage system which should be just to both labor and capital has many interesting points. Day wages are deadening to the workman, and unsatisfactory to the employer, who cannot know whether he is getting his money's worth and cannot hurry the pace of his shops if he suspects it to be too slow. And piecework is unsatisfactory to the workmen, who have experienced that if they make too much money the rate will be reduced, exertion being punished instead of rewarded. The differential rate system sets a high standard, but permits a slow or weak workman to earn smaller wages. The bonus system is the reverse of this, a low day's work being fixed, with a bonus if it be exceeded. Mr. F. A. Halsey devised a variation of both these systems, allowing to the workman pay for a share of the time which he saves to the employer by extra exertion and results. This puts employer and employe into a sort of partnership, reducing the employer's temptation to cut the pay originally fixed by himself, and encouraging the worker to his best efforts by removing fear that they will be penalized. A paragraph can state these things, but weary and costly experience went to the development of this single specimen of collective bargaining. This is an era of magnificent totals, but they are aggregated only by the most careful and precise study of the trifles which enter into the cost sheet. These are but bits picked out from a book devoted to bits of trade union science. The book may be recommended to both employers and employes who are interested in the topics indicated above, as the treatment is impartial and thorough.

A RELIGIOUS NOVEL.

THE THREAD OF GOLD. By the Author of "The House of Quiet." Pp. 286. Crown 8vo. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $3.

EASY writing is sometimes very hard reading, but "The Thread of Gold" seems almost to have written itself, and is nearly always delightful to read. There are a few steep places where the author seems to have had nothing to say, but to have written for the sake of writing; a few others rather mystical and far-fetched; but, for the most part, the book is the sincere, spontaneous talk of a man of culture who has observed and felt keenly, and who expresses himself in simple, limpid, captivating style.

The volume is printed at the Edinburgh Press, and is admirable in its format, but it lacks a table of contents, and, being a series of discursive essays, such a table is peculiarly needed.

It contains forty-one chapters, with as wide a range of subjects as may be comprehended between "The Beetle" and "The Apocalypse." In his introduction the author says:

> I mean to put into my book only the things that appear to me deep and strange and beautiful; and I can happily say that things seem to me to be more and more beautiful every day. * * * And I call my book "The Thread of Gold" because this beauty of which I have spoken seems to me a thing which runs like a fine and precious clue through the dark and sunless labyrinths of the world.

He usually makes good his promise, but when he treats of suffering and sin the thread of gold is lost—not when he describes the suffering that ennobles, but especially when he touches upon that most inscrutable and heartrending of mysteries, the torture of the brute creation. He does not, however, embark upon the always futile attempt,

"To justify the ways of God to man" or beast. Instead, he takes refuge in faith, in Dolly Winthrop's faultless theology:

> It comes into my head as Them above has got a deal tenderer heart nor what I've got—for I can't be anyways better nor Them as made me, and if anything looks hard to me, it's because there's things I don't know on * * * eh, there's trouble i' this world, and there's things as we can niver make out the rights on. And all as we've got to do is to trusten—to do the right thing as fur as we know, and to trusten.

The chapters on "The Farm Yard," "Authorship," "Leisure," "The Pleasures of Work," "Prayer," "The Faith of Christ," are particularly good. In "The Farm Yard," the pathos of the dumb animals tugs again at one's heart:

> They are so unconscious of the sad reasons for which we desire their company, so unsuspicious, so serene. Instead of learning by the sorrowful experience of generations what our dark purposes are, they become more and more fraternal, more and more dependent.

In "The Secret," the frank arraignment of "Paradise Lost" must arouse in every reader an enthusiastic "Hear! Hear!" "I declare I think that the passages where God the Father speaks, discusses the situation of affairs, and arranges matters with the Saviour, are some of the most profane and vicious passages in English literature. * * * The character of God as displayed by Milton is that of a commercial, complacent, irritable Puritan. There is no largeness or graciousness about it, no wistful love." And yet, if we remember, our good friends Dr. Johnson and his Boswell were both amazed that a man who could write such a noble poem as "Paradise Lost" should be capable of the inferior work of the Sonnets!

The author of "The Thread of Gold" touches religious themes with a hand reverent and tender. He may be defined as a Christian agnostic, and his book cannot fail to have a message for those upon whom press the mysteries of life and death.

The lively demand for this book during the weeks preceding Christmas may in some part be explained by its adaptability as a gift book—its striking cover of Gibson Girls, its many and beautiful illustrations, its elaborate daintiness and its great beauty as a piece of book making; but nothing except SOUND LITERARY ACCOMPLISHMENT and its acknowledged appreciation by the public can explain its success after the gift season has passed. PLAYING CARDS OF ALL LANDS.

A New French Book on an Interesting Subject—Renē d'Allemagne History of Cards in the Orient and in Europe.*

Published by Arrangement with The London Times.

IN these days of sumptuous productions we are now and then confronted with a volume characterized by extreme attractiveness of illustration, in which all the resources of modern typography, highly glazed paper, and perfection of register in the colored plates have been so successfully brought into requisition that the educated eye cannot fail to be charmed by the feast of good things spread before it, and yet the literary instincts of the reader may fail to be satisfied by the matter which accompanies these gorgeous pages. The text serves in some instances merely as a peg whereon the illustrations may be hung. In such cases the volume is soon relegated to the obscurity of some remote bookshelf and rarely again sees the light of day.

In notable contrast to such productions stand the two magnificent volumes under notice, the conscientious and enthusiastic work of an eminently qualified author whose mind is saturated with a knowledge of and affection for his subject, and whose ardent desire appears to be to imbue his readers with the information he has laboriously acquired during many years of patient study, while enticing them by pictorial allurements on every page.

The subject of which he treats has been handled from time to time in many a work, by authors English and foreign, (the bibliographical list of works relating to the subject contains some 240 names,) and to the more important of these we are indebted for research, information and conjecture; yet are they but as small fragmentary essays when ranged by the side of these astonishing volumes, in which one hardly knows whether it is to the exhaustive literary conspectus of the matter in hand or to the charm of the countless illustrations that one is the more indebted.

⁂

The Broad Scope of Allemagne's Book.

The author's arrangement of his matter is remarkably clear and methodical. His first two chapters deal with the Oriental origin of playing cards in China and Hindustan, and these are followed by short disquisitions on the early history of their use in France, Germany, Spain, and Italy respectively. A more extended notice of German and of French numeral cards is followed by a very important chapter on the game of Tarots and its invention, and a note on the numerous smaller fry, instructive, satirical, political, and burlesque, winds up the first portion of the first volume. The 286 pages of this treatise practically bring to a conclusion the whole of the dissertations which might naturally be expected in a history of playing cards. But not by any means the information which M. d'Allemagne has at the disposal of his countrymen.

It is not till we arrive at page 340 that the reader comes to the end of a mass of well-digested facts relating to the various regulations on the manufacture, taxation, and sale in France of these objects so profitable to the Government, if often ruinous to the subject. We are told of the complicated enactments respecting the envelopes in which the packs had to be inclosed, the water marks in the structure of the cards for the prevention of frauds on the excise, the forgeries detected and the measures taken for the prosecution of offenders. Exhaustive technical information on the details of manufacture takes us up to page 434, and the remainder of the 500 pages of the volume is occupied by a history of card playing and players, of divination by cards, and, amusingly enough, by instructions to children for building castles and houses of cards cast off by their elders, and by a note on the quaint uses to which the pasteboards have been put when no longer of service.

⁂

A "Brochure" of 640 Pages.

And here the voluminous and profoundly interesting work might perhaps have fitly ended, to our entire satisfaction and delight. Dis aliter visum. Volume II., a little brochure of 640 pages, has still to be reckoned with. Let us see what its twelve chapters have in store for us. Following a general chronicle of the workmen's guilds in France from the thirteenth to the eighteenth century, their laws, officers, apprentices, and masterpieces down to their suppression and final abolition, is an elaborate history of the manufacture in all the principal towns in France and Belgium; the text of the pièces justificatives on which this history is based; a bibliography of works on the whole subject; a comprehensive index; and an alphabetical list of the Master Cardmakers of France, nearly 3,000 in number.

In the limited space at our disposal room can only be found for a very few notes on some of the subdivisions of the work which we have just indicated. It should be mentioned in connection with the first chapters in the first volume, devoted to the playing cards of China and Hindustan, that our author, being for substantial reasons in entire disagreement with M. Remusat, who has come to the conclusion that we derive our cards from China, and with M. Chatto, who conceived that they had their birth in Hindustan, treats with extreme brevity the productions of those countries and devoted his energies exclusively to the consideration of a European origin.

⁂

The Origin of Playing Cards.

To the antiquary, the most piquant interest in an art or industry is often to be found in the determination of the very earliest date to which its origin can be assigned, and in proportion to the rapid narrowing of the chances of obtaining new data as earlier stages in the quest are reached must be the joy of the discovery of solid ground anterior to that occupied by former explorers. M. d'Allemagne is a partaker in this joy, though he derives his new facts from other investigators. Since the day when Père Menestrier somewhat rashly contended that the game of cards was invented in the year 1392, by Jacquemin Gringonneur, with the object of diverting the melancholy of Charles VI. of France, a surmise, it may be added, now entirely discredited, a variety of dates have been suggested by other writers and the probable time pushed backward or forward by conjectural interpretations of documents. Our author cites, in reference to this discussion, M. Alexandre Pinchart, who quotes from the account books of Venceslas and Jeanne, reigning in Belgium from the year 1355. In these he finds an entry of a certain payment on the 14th of May, 1379: "Given to Monsieur et Madame four peters, two florins, value eight and a half moutons, wherewith to buy a pack of cards. (Quartspel met te copen.)" This entry is followed by three of like import. These entries are of course absolutely conclusive in fixing the date of introduction into France as far back, at least, as 1379.

A very remarkable parallel to this record of a purchase, so trifling in itself, yet so important as fixing a long controverted date, may occur to the mind of the bibliographer; we allude to the brief entry of the Abbot of Cambral, cited by M. Bernard, in which the champions of a Dutch origin for the art of printing are accustomed to find support for their contention, "Item for a Doctrinale gette en molle (printed?) which I sent for to Bruges in the month of January, 1445, for Jacquet, twenty sous tournois." A still more interesting entry is noted by our author as fixing a yet earlier date than 1379 for Germany. This is found in a MS. in the British Museum Egerton, 2,419, unearthed by his friend and colleague, M. Henri Steyn, and occurs in a treatise by one Brother John of Reinfelden, of the Order of Minorite Preachers, in which he speaks of a certain game of cards (qui ludus cartarum appellatur) as coming to his notice in 1377, "in which the state of the world in these modern times is perfectly described and figured, but at what time it was made or by whom or where, I am totally ignorant," and proceeds to describe five different packs of fifty-two and sixty cards respectively, but is so fascinated by his ideas of the utility of the game for moral and instructive purposes that he quite forgets to say how it is played.

⁂

Some of the Early German Cards.

Among the German cards described and figured by M. d'Allemagne are very early examples (1466) which he calls cards à enseignes animées, in which admirably drawn human figures form the Court cards, and animals in various positions the pips; the celebrated Imperial Ambras pack, the earliest known specimens of cards printed from wooden blocks; a very remarkable satirical pack engraved in 1545, and splendidly illuminated in gold and colors, fully illustrating German manners and customs of the period; the spirited pack by Jost Amman, and many others of the sixteenth century. In the French series, the most magnificent reproductions are those of the Tarot cards in the Bibliothèque Nationale commonly known as the Tarots of Charles VI. These are distributed throughout the volumes; they are of a very large size, 190 by 96 mm., and, being beautifully illuminated by hand in gold and colors, greatly enhance the attractiveness of the work.

It is impossible to give an idea of the liberality with which the subject-matter in this section, as in all others, is illustrated by wood cuts on every page, and colored fac similes intercalated throughout, not the least interesting of the illustrations being the revolutionary cards which at the end of the eighteenth century were emitted in extraordinary numbers. Every treatise on cards must recognize the two grand subdivisions, the Tarot cards and the suit cards. The derivation of the Tarots from the Italian Naibis, which were sold for the amusement of children as early as 1393, is treated in a most interesting and convincing manner.

M. d'Allemagne is indebted to The Burlington Magazine for his beautiful reproductions on a reduced scale of the Visconti Tarots, undoubtedly among the most picturesque of their kind. The so-called Tarots of Mantegna, the most valuable and curious engravings of this sort in existence, though probably not intended for use as cards, are only shown in very small reproductions, while in the splendid catalogue of Lady Schreiber, to which the author acknowledges his indebtedness in many ways, the plates are of the full size of the originals.

⁂

For Antiquarians as Well as Card Players.

Silver playing cards are not unknown, and impressions from a delicately engraved pack by Alexander Mayer in 1594, illustrate the article on this subject. One or two packs are also, as we have reason to know, in existence in this country. The reader will find endless amusement in an inspection of the satirical, amusing, and historical cards, in which last subdivision our own country can, we think, hold its own. The engravings and prints in color other than those of cards and card wrappers, with which the author has, so to speak, extra-illustrated or Grangerized his work, will afford great enjoyment, illustrating, as they do, the lighter side of the subject. Every phase of the game seems to find a record in these full-page engravings and vignettes, from the card party of the Abbé and that of the Golden Wedding to the gambling of the lansquenets in the face of danger and the rough encounters of Norman and Gascon peasants. We find portrayed to the life the tragical issues of the gamester's quarrels, see high play alike in lordly salon and humble tripot, and are able to realize the interior of the gaming rooms at the Palais Royal, in one of which in 1814 Blucher was shorn of some million and a half of francs at the tables. Reproductions of the spirited and artistic trade-cards of the French cardmaker, and the views of the numerous towns in France where the manufacture went gayly on, help to swell a collection of which it is difficult to become weary. We can heartily commend these splendid volumes alike to the antiquary, the card-player, and the lover of the beautiful and bizarre.

*LES CARTES A JOUER DU 14e AU 20e SIECLE. Par Henri Rene d'Allemagne. Paris: Hachette et Cie. 60f.

Writings of Samuel Adams.

Volume II. of the writings of Samuel Adams, edited by Harry Alonzo Cushing and published in a limited edition by G. P. Putnam's Sons, makes a thick book of 454 pages, and contains letters and writings dated between Jan. 8, 1770, and March 2, 1773. These were stirring times, though the Revolution had not actually begun; it was preparing, however, and the writings of Samuel Adams show how almost day by day the New Englanders were getting ready for it. Adams himself, of course, was one of the foremost in preparing to separate from the mother country, and his name was specially excepted from a proposed amnesty. The "Boston Massacre" makes the subject of many of the writings included in this book; the attack on Gov. Hutchinson also figures largely in it. Samuel Adams has been cast into the shade by other New Englanders of the Revolution, but he was always regarded by his contemporaries as a great leader, and this series of his writings shows on what their opinion was based. Mr. Cushing has done his share of the work very well, and in the table of contents, besides naming each letter and newspaper article, has given a synopsis of its purport.

SIBYL CROFTS'S PAST.

ALL THAT WAS POSSIBLE. Being the Record of a Summer in the Life of Mrs. Sibyl Crofts, Comedian. By Howard Overing Sturgis. Crown 8vo. Pp. 312. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons. $1.50.

THE heroine of this new novel by the author of "Belchamber" is one who has "thrown the Sacred Cap of Good Repute over the windmills." Brought up in traditions even less conservative than those of the Baroness von Hutten's "Pam," she took the step Pam did not take, and lived for five years the unwedded wife of a young English nobleman—the absence of the wedding ring quite her own choice, it appears.

The story opens at the close of this liaison, the Lord wedded to a lady of his own rank, the mistress pensioned off to begin life again. The book is a series of letters from her to her one woman friend, a happy wife and mother whom scandal has never touched. The earlier letters, in an adroit, allusive manner, (for the friend had long been aware of the facts in the case,) convey them to the readers; those that follow are concerned with the Summer succeeding the defection of the lover, a defection pleasing the lady well, for she had become distinctly bored by George, Lord Medmenham, and he was "extremely liberal in money matters," leaving her well provided.

The letters are brilliantly written, and give the impression of a character not only fascinating, but in many respects fine, especially in its frankness and sincerity. The writer, Sibyl Crofts, "Mrs." by courtesy only, while rejecting the opportunity for continued subjugation of man, seems to have no sense of soil from her past, to which she continually alludes with a cynical and amused indifference. In conversation with the man whom she most respects, she does not hesitate to class herself. She does not perceive—nor, for the matter of that, does the author—that the acceptance of a pension from the ex-lover is the last drop in the cup of degradation. It is, perhaps, the usual thing, but one cannot conceive it possible to a woman of any fineness of fibre; and Mr. Sturgis means to make his heroine such a woman.

With absolute frankness she discusses her position with her new acquaintance, Robert Henshaw. The letter repeating the conversation is of peculiar interest; yet, however carefully we read it and follow her subsequent history, we fail to get her point of view. The only things which can dignify, and, in a measure, justify an irregular connection are its permanence, the existence of an insurmountable obstacle to marriage, and the absence of the financial element. All these existed in the case of George Eliot and Lewes, in the case, too, of the parents of Pam—none in the case of Sibyl Crofts and Lord Medmenham.

Yet always there is a nemesis, even if it does no more than close the doors of Westminster Abbey against the bay-crowned dead. The nemesis of Sibyl Crofts is no less astounding to the reader than to herself. The author has achieved a genuine dramatic surprise. He has shown, too, on the one hand, how love for that which is unworthy debases character; on the other, how a worthy love exalts and purifies it.

And the title of the book emphasizes its lesson. We cannot free ourselves from our past. Sibyl looked for the highest; her present self deserved it. She awoke to a bitter knowledge that the love which drags down was "all that was possible."

Did the author intend a sermon? We trow not. All the same, his story conveys, perhaps in spite of itself, a tremendous lesson. It is the world-old, oft-repeated tale of the "red pottage," and right eloquently has Mr. Sturgis set it forth.

ART OF RAPHAEL.

JULIA CARTWRIGHT'S (Mrs. Ady) little volume on Raphael in The Popular Library of Art, in which she has also Botticelli, (16mo. pp. 225, red and green cloth and leather, illustrated. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co., 75 cents,) opens with a brief discussion of the master's place in the history of painting, in the course of which the author writes:

> Michelangelo's stupendous creations may impress us more profoundly, the magic of Leonardo's art may attract us by a more subtle spell, but for the vast majority of the human race Raphael will always remain the greatest and most popular of painters. Even Titian can hardly rival him in this respect. * * * Raphael * * * speaks to us in a language which all can understand, and the range of his sympathies is as wide as human nature itself.

Mrs. Ady then goes on to tell about the birth of Raphael and his life and studies at Perugia, Florence, and Rome. She describes his Madonnas, the Vatican Stanze, his portraits of contemporaries, his work as architect and decorator, and his cartoons, the last of which, she says, "mark the final stage of Raphael's artistic development," and show how he had been continually progressing in his art. The closing chapter deals with the painter's life during 1517 and 1520, when he passed away, having exactly completed his thirty-eighth year.

The little book is profusely illustrated with half-tone reproductions of his best-known pictures and sketches.

"The Kipling of the Kraals."
Powerful, vivid, and dramatic stories—far out of the rut of commonplace literature.

JUST GET THE DELINEATOR.
The most necessary of all magazines for women because every department of the household is more thoroughly treated in each monthly issue than in any other woman's magazine. It is the happiest combination of literature and fashions published. More than 900,000 of the women of America buy it every month, which insures four and one-half million readers.
